RENDOVA CONQUEST COMPLETED BY ALLIES

GERMAN BRIDGEHEAD ON TAMAN PENINSULA HIT

123 Jap Planes Destroyed, Posts 'All Consolidated

Within Two Hours Of Capture Forces Are Firing Shore Guns at Munda

ONE TRANSPORT LOST

By MERRLIN SPENCER
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters, Australia, July 3 — (AP) — Artillery shelling of the big Japanese air base at Munda in the Central Solomons, destruction of all enemy aircraft and the consolidation everywhere along a 900-mile front of Allied gains under a one-day concept of attacks and fighters were announced today as successes in the as yet young Pacific offensive.

(Reports received directly from Admiral William F. Halsey's South Pacific headquarters here today said that continuing air action over the Munda region yesterday raised the score of Japanese planes destroyed to 123. Against this, American losses for the first days of the Central Solomons offensive were fixed officially at 28 planes and 16 pilots).

Never before in this war has this area witnessed such co-ordinated blows of power, speed and surprise struck by Allied Navy, ground troops and airplanes under the command of Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

In the first account of action, New Guinea and the Solomons, the most immediate purposes of the drive in the eastern arm of the two-pronged drive.

Today's communique disclosed that the United States forces which landed Wednesday on Rendova Island had destroyed the small Japanese garrison there by midnight and within two hours after debarking from barges were firing shore battteries at the Munda air base five miles away.

Seizure of the only harbor in the New Georgia sector Viru, 30 miles from Munda, also was announced. Hard fighting preceded capture.

The Japanese poured medium bombers, dive bombers, torpedo planes and fighters at the landing parties and at Allied shipping.

Allied actions did not indicate the total number involved in the action but 57 enemy planes were destroyed in the air combat and by anti-aircraft fire," the communique said.

"Seventeen of our planes are missing."

17 Allied Planes Lost

(Previous announcement had been made by the navy at Washington that the communique of Japanese planes totalled 101 of which 66 were listed as downed. This announcement likewise acknowledged 28 planes and 16 pilots as well as the sinking by combined operations of a Japanese transport and of the 7,712 ton transport McCawley after its troops had been put ashore.)

Allied casualties to-date in the Solomons campaign were reported by a spokesman for General MacArthur in Sydney.

In heavy support of the Solomons operations, Allied warships and planes blasted the enemy air bases at Munda and Vila and the other surface craft moved even farther up the Solomon chain to hit the Japanese in the Balanoe-Faisi area.

On New Guinea near Salamaua, fighting was reported without any clear indication of the significance. Forces which landed at Nassau Bay, 12 miles to the south coast from Salamaua, did not lose a man in getting ashore, MacArthur's spokesman said.

Seeking a Junction

Australian patrols hit in the Salamaua area were reported as still seeking a junction from a point inland from Nassau Bay to the coast on the beach. Twelve miles south of Salamaua in the inland combat area, Australian patrols sought out enemy forces and succeeded in killing 36 as well as wounding many others.

Continuously striving to pin to the ground the enemy's potent air strength at Rabaul, New Britain, Allied bombers sent 38 tons of bombs down on the Japanese base Thursday, following up an attack Wednesday in which 23 tons were dropped.

Swarms of attack planes and medium bombers sometimes afford effective support for the Salamaua invaders, machine-gunning enemy installations and troops.

Despite complete absence of reports concerning the unopposed landings off the Papuan peninsula of New Guinea on Woodlark and Trobriand Islands, it was assumed early activity there would include construction of airdromes for use against New Britain to the north.

Other far ranging blows struck yesterday by Allied planes included the sinking of a small enemy craft off the Tanimbar Islands above Darwin, the damaging of two flying boats over Buka passage in the Northern Solomons and attacks on enemy sampans in the St. Matthias group of Islands northwest of New Britain.

South Pacific Headquarters, July 3—(AP)—Admiral William F. Halsey's South Pacific headquarters announced today that 123 Japanese planes were shot down in the Solomons in two days, Wednesday and Thursday against American losses of 28 planes and 15 pilots.

A total of 101 enemy planes were knocked out of the sky Wednesday, the day the Allies landed in the Central Solomons, and 17 American planes were destroyed when at least their pilots were saved.

The next day the Japanese lost an additional 22 aircraft. American losses in the continuing air battle were eight planes, the pilots of three of which were saved.

On the first day of the invasion, the enemy divided his attacks between the air and land attacks. Land positions only were raided there, yesterday.

Army, navy and Marine pilots thus practically boosted their remarkable performance over Guadalcanal two weeks before when the score was 94 Japanese planes destroyed to 14 American losses.

The Navy transport McCawley, which sank without loss of a single life, was the only ship struck on the first day of the Rendova landings, but the big American ship had aided the operation. Headquarters announced, Thursday, that McCawley was hit widely as the flagship of the original Guadalcanal bivasion transport fleet last August.

Occupation of Viru

Headquarters also disclosed that the occupation of Marines of Viru Harbor on New Georgia and of New Georgia announced previously by Gen. Douglas MacArthur was fully achieved after the American forces had fought their way through a jungle against "medium" Japanese opposition.

These marines, headquarters said, were landed as an advance element several days before the main push.

The American on Rendova were expected today to be engaged in mopping up the remnants of Japanese resistance.

Allied airmen were said so far to have encountered nothing stronger than patrols, but the Japanese have opposition, and the enemy's efforts to reinforce the landing were limited largely to air attacks on the American troops and the Allied fleet units.

The 57th Allied American operation was described officially today as "successful and proceeding according to plan". "Our forces are well established," the announcement added.

SICILY'S CAPITAL PALERMO RAIDED, ABOUT 'FINISHED'

Assault Is Timed With Raids on 4 Airfields in Sicily, Fires in Cagliari

AXIS SCHOONERS HIT

By NOLAND NORGAARD
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, July 3 — (AP) — Allied airmen shot down four German fighter-bombers and slashed again at Axis transport shipping yesterday in the wake of an R.A.F. fire-sitting attack upon barracks and railway yards in Palermo, Sardinian major port, it was announced today.

The Italian communique said that Palermo, the Sicilian capital, was attacked again last night, and that the Royal Palace was "among the numerous buildings damaged." Catania, Sicily, also was raided, it said.

(A D.N.B. dispatch broadcast from Berlin reported that United States aircraft carried out a bombing raid against a bathing resort situated near Athens yesterday in full daylight" and that 38 persons were killed and 40 injured. Allied communiques did not touch upon such an action.)

Anti-Transport Bombers

R.A.F. planes of the Middle East Command again bombed a medium-sized Axis transport which was fired listing heavily to port and blocking Levitas Channel entrance to the port of Navarino near Italy's Greek possession of Cerigo, it was announced today by the Cairo communique announced.

Another attack on two enemy schooners by British coastal planes of the Western Mediterranean Command yesterday were officially announced here. One was an 800-ton, two-masted vessel, the other was not described. Both were said to have been left aflame.

Wellington bombers, which have attacked every night after night for many weeks at vital ports in Sicily, Sardinia and southern Italy, continued their assaults on the same targets and the railway station of Cagliari Wednesday night.

Many bomb bursts were seen in the Cagliari area. One of the several fires observed was started by a two-ton bombshell which fell near the railway station.

Not Single Allied Plane Lost.

All operations of the Northwest Africa, Middle East and Malta Commands yesterday were reported carried out without the loss of a plane.

Spitfire pilots of the U.S.A.A.F. shot down the four German fighter-bombers Wednesday 100 and Wellington bombers attacked the Biscari airdrome in Sicily, a Valletta communique said.

Served Year On Aircraft Carrier Before Being Discharged, Too Young

Yonkers, N. Y., July 3—(AP)—Seaman Second Class Walter Cole, looking forward to entering high school next fall for the first time, and looking back on the year he spent cruising around the Pacific on a U.S. aircraft carrier, shooting down Japanese dive-bombers.

However, the excitement was too good to last, and yesterday Walter came home, sporting three campaign ribbons, a wound stripe and an honorable discharge from the American Navy.

"They keep asking me questions," Walter told his friends ruefully. "And finally I had to own up that I was 15 and then they bounced me out."

But before getting bounced, Walter had a plenty. He joined the Navy Sept. 28, 1942 — when he was just 14 — lied about being 15 — and after that he travelled "just about all" over the Pacific Ocean.

He operated chiefly through a couple of battles, including Guadalcanal, where his ship was credited with downing two enemy dive bombers. Then it was rounded recently, when shrapnel from an exploding airplane shell hit him in the back.

Walter's career ended at the end of his navy days. While in the ship's sick bay officers began to have their suspicions about him despite his air of being old enough. So when the carrier returned to the United States the administrative officer called Walter before him.

"Just exactly how old are you," he asked.

"Eighteen sir," Walter replied.

"How old," the officer asked again, and received the same answer. Then the officer got plenty mad and told Walter meekly replied, "15 sir."

No day dreamer, Walter's wrath after his discharge is over the counter sale of his war medals.

Traffic Paralyzed On Rhine-Herne Canal By Allied Bombers

Stockholm, July 2 — (AP) — R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. heavy bombers, in blasting chokes at Duisburg May 13 and at Oberhausen June 14, paralyzed traffic on the Rhine-Herne canal, eyewitness reports from Germany declared today.

Herne, a town in Westphalia, is situated about 22 miles northwest of Duisburg, which is located at the junction of the Rhine and Ruhr.

Witnesses said a great many barges, used mainly in transporting coal from the Ruhr to Rotterdam, either were trapped between those points by the attacks or smashed by explosives.

This would place an additional load on the already overtaxed German railway system, which has been diverting to inland waterways as much freight as possible.

The eyewitnesses said the force of the blasts delivered by the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. in the raid on Barmen May 29 was beyond their "dreams".

Poles officially estimated that between 3,000 and 6,000 were killed and 30,000 injured, in that bombing, they declared, mainly because residents did not have time to reach shelters. Great Dutch losses were reported bombed out over an area of seven square miles and Barmen was said to have been levelled.

The raid left Barmen without water, electricity, gas, telephone service or street cars, the witness said.

The eyewitness, who travelled through Krefeld, claimed that at least 6,000 tons of that city was laid in ruins.

He said that he saw a grand scale evacuation in the Ruhr.

CHINESE PAPER SAYS JAPS SENT TO MANCHURIA

Declares 'It is Plain as Day' Enemy Plans to Attack Siberia

MILITARY PARLEY

Chungking, July 3 (AP)—The Chinese newspaper Ta Kung Pao declared today the Japanese have been making "full use" of Manchuria, and said "it is plain as day" the enemy is "preparing to attack Siberia."

Three army commanders have recently been transferred to that area from the Pacific, the newspaper added. It also coupled a special Japanese military conference, which it said was held in session in Korea, with the Manchuria preparations.

Ta Kung Pao is published in Chungking, press rejoicing over the new United States aid to the anti-Japanese Pacific and Prime Minister Churchill's avowal of Britain's determination to make Japan "submit or bite the dust."

"Today," it said, "the Allied strategy in all appearances has changed. Britain can no longer any insistence on Europe first and the prospect of a big drive against war now is out of the question."

Large Contingents Cross Without Loss In Past 2 Months

London, July 2 (CP).—Large contingents of Canadian and American troops have been conveyed to Britain during the last two months without loss, it was disclosed today by Ottawa.

The exact number of the reinforcements was not revealed, but in an official British military official said their strength "exceeded the highest hopes".

Most recent arrival in England of Canadian army reinforcements and a draft of U.S. Army troops was announced June 21. All arms of the service were represented in the "large contingent" of army reinforcements.

AKYAB BOMBED

New Delhi, July 2 — (CP) — R.A.F. bombers raided Japanese storehouses and encampments at Akyab in Western Burma yesterday while fighters shot up shipping along the coast and ranged inland to attack highway rail and river communications, Allied communiques announced today.

No planes were lost in the forays, the communique said.

The new order, the third of its kind, applies to men in age groups liable to call for compulsory military service and also to youths of 16 and 17 years of age, brought under provisions of such measures in a recent announcement by the Prime Minister.

It applies to men in the designated age groups in all trades and the following lines of business:

1. Any industrial activity except the wholesaling of the following articles: tobacco; confectionery; fruit and vegetables (except canned fruit and canned vegetables); meat and fish; milk; and waste.

2. Raising of special livestock like race horses, and dogs, cats and other pets.

3. Flower-growing.

4. Agricultural services, except tree surgery.

5. Leather, currying, finishing, manufacture.

6. Brewing.

Under the order, no employer may, after July 15, continue to engage a man covered by the regulations without a special permit from National Selective Service.

Mr. Mitchell's announcement said it had not been determined how many men would be affected by the new order, but it was expected there would be the same "ready compliance" with the measure as was manifested in the April regulations, whereby more than 24,000 men have been informed.

In addition to youths 16 to 18 years of age, the order also applies to every man born in any year from 1917 to 1926 who has reached 18, is over parties of whether he is married or single; and, every man, born from 1902 to 1916 who, on July 15, 1943, was unmarried, divorced or judicially separated, or was then a widower without children, even if he has children dependent upon him or any man who has become a widower since that date.

GERMANY LOSING PRODUCTION RACE NEEDED TO WIN

Figures Obtained Show Germany Has Passed Peak as Warmaking Power

SHORT IN OIL

By R. E. BUNNELLE
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, July 2 — (AP) — Strained by nearly four years of total war and hammered day and night by Allied airmen, German industry has lost the production race essential to victory, although it has been still has plenty of fight left, reliable British and foreign sources indicated today.

Figures gathered by these sources suggest that Germany has definitely passed her peak of war production power and is on the downgrade because of a production deficiency which, these sources believe, this will appear within the year, it was said.

A steady fall in steel production, a shortage of oil reserves, an inability to replace vital railway equipment, reductions in coal output and numerous other important economic symptoms of industrial deterioration appeared in the available figures, the sources said.

The best sources estimate that Germany normally needs 12,000,000 to 13,000,000 tons of oil yearly, and only 2,500,000, while a comparative lull in fighting exists. Major operations naturally send this consumption skyrocketing.

Oil Reserves

Germany's present oil reserve is estimated at 21 million tons and the British and foreign sources emphasized that R.A.F. and U.S. bombers have to counter a prospective Allied invasion, since production in Italy and the Balkans is under the threat of consumption.

Germany has the best information, the Reich now is getting around 4,000,000 tons of oil annually from the Rumanian fields and between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 tons from synthetic plants.

Locomotives are another weak spot in the war production. Simplified utility models are being turned out at about 200 monthly, but normal wear is estimated to force discard of between 150 and 200 monthly and in May alone the R.A.F. and U.S. bombers destroyed some 150.

Plane production is reported to have dropped sharply this year. Up to last year it was established that Germany had 2,000 to 2,500 monthly, half of them bombers. Now, according to the sources, Germany's monthly output ranges between 1,-700 to 1,850 of which two thirds are fighters for defence. Italian production is said to have dropped from from 1,200 monthly last year to 600 or 700 now.

Germany said also it appeared that the Reich is turning out fighters at the rate of 1,000 monthly compared with about 800 last year. Between 25 and 30 are being lost each month, some 2,000 have with 16 to 19 a year ago, but latter defensive measures are said to be taking care of that increase.

8 Axis Fighters Downed in Sweeps Over N. France and Low Countries

London, July 2 (CP)—Eight enemy fighters were destroyed by R.A.F. fighters, and American fighter planes in separate sweeps over Northern France and the low countries late yesterday, the Air Ministry announced today.

The fighters got four over Northern France and the Americans the remainder over Northern France and the low countries. One United States plane was lost in the operations.

The R.A.F. lost four aircraft in the fighter sweep and an attack yesterday morning by fighter-escorted bombers on an enemy convoy off the Dutch coast. Three merchant vessels and four mine sweepers were said to have been damaged.

A German broadcast asserted six fighters and two bombers were shot down in the convoy attack.

Activity ceased in the night without an alert, rounding out a full week which this country has seen no enemy plane.

Explosives Rained On Shipping In Kerch Harbor

Town of Senaya Blasted by Large Force as Ground Fighting Increases

ACTIVE AT SMOLENSK

London, July 2 — (CP) — The Soviet Air Force launched heavy attacks on the German bridgehead on the Taman Peninsula, blasted the town of Senaya Wednesday night, and mauled shipping in Kerch Strait in hammer the port of Kerch on the eastern tip of the Crimea, the Soviet midday communique announced today.

A large number of high explosive and incendiary bombs were rained on shipping in Kerch harbor and on enemy supply dumps, said the bulletin, which was broadcast by the Moscow radio and recorded by the Soviet Monitor here.

All the raiders were said to have returned safely.

The raids coincided with German reports of increasing activity along their lines on the Taman Peninsula, which appeared to be interpreted as an indication that the Red Army might be about to break the four-month lull on the eastern front with a determined effort to drive the Reds from their last foothold in the Caucasus.

Senaya, one of the targets of the Russian airmen last night, is about 35 miles west of Temryuk, from the Taman Peninsula and the Russians have been massing landing barges.

Herald Bigger Engagements.

A Soviet spokesman said last night that the recent increase in aerial activity in this area "heralds big engagements on land for which both sides are preparing."

Increase in aerial activity on the southern end of the long front, the mid-day communique said, centred only around operations in scattered sectors.

On the Smolensk front west of Moscow, the bulletin said, Red army scouts raided German trenches, inflicted casualties and returned to their lines.

On the Kalinin front, a company of enemy infantry was reported repulsed in an attack on Russian outposts, losing some 30 men. This appeared to be in the central area where the midnight communique said Russian patrols had captured a height of strategic importance and held it against the counter-attacks which cost the Germans 600 men.

Minor skirmishes and activity by Russian snipers was reported in the Leningrad sector, between Lake Ladoga and the Sevsk area.

The Soviet bulletin announced that Russian guerrillas operating in the Orel region had killed 1,000 of the enemy in a two-day engagement, captured considerable equipment and destroyed a supply train, smashing 20 cars and a locomotive.

New Tack Taken To Bolster Italy's Will to Fight

By THOMAS F. HAWKINS
United Press Staff Writer
Associated Press Staff Writer
Berne, Switzerland, July 3—(AP)—Fascist propagandists, taking a new tack in their campaign to bolster the Italian will to fight, were busily engaged today in developing the idea that Italy is bolstered again by a separate peace and her ranks reduced to realize its power.

No less an authority than Virginio Gayda, Italy's best known journalist and a Fascist party spokesman, made this point in an article in the Giornale d'Italia which apparently reflected considerable effort to attempt to convince the Italian people they would be well to get out of the war now.

"An eventual exit of Italy from the war — that is, the conclusion of a separate peace, which would be very welcome to the Axis — would free the Italians from the war, its sacrifices and privations," Gayda wrote.

He Dared Reference.

While making no direct reference to Germany, Gayda alluded to her power in the Balkans and declared when he declared that in the event Italy withdrew a separate peace the remaining belligerents would make "a healthy agreement."

Gayda's article was a straightforward statement of the position which the Italian press has been harping on daily — that no matter what the odds against it Italy must have no recourse but to fight and that the only hope is in sticking along with Fascism.

Leoncavallo echoed the theme developed by Gayda, declaring that the Italian people constitute "a people of a country which surrendered without combat" and asserting that in all the war "no one will ever soldier and every army to which he belonged."

Other sections of the Fascist press continued in a trumpet warning that invasion is imminent, arguing that Italy and her people constitute are logical objectives of the Allied armies now poised in North Africa.

HIGH WATER LEVELS REMAIN STATIONARY

The high water levels of the Bay remain practically stationary in all points along the shore, having receded no more than an inch since June 23. The several cottages located at Bronk's are still inundated and uninhabitable. The condition of the highway on the Picton road which has been under water for sometime is unchanged, detouring is necessary at this point. Although the water level has dropped an inch in the past week a strong wind causes it to return to its previous height. One wonders how it is possible for the high level to hold when the water in the Moira and other rivers have descended so noticeably.

In order that all party members may vote for their choice of candidate, it is the intention to hold an advance poll for those unable to attend the convention.

ROBBERS BREAK INTO SERVICE STATION

Robbers broke and entered Aselstine's service station at the intersection of North Front and Moira Sts. sometime over the holiday and were thwarted in their efforts by stealing exactly one dollar in change.

Entrance was gained by means of throwing a stone inside a piece of cloth and breaking the glass in a rear window. After the window was broken it was an easy matter to reach inside and unlock the sash and make the subsequent crawl through the open window. The office furniture was ransacked and the only loot found were the hundred penalty. Police investigated after service station attendants found the window broken this morning. Indications point to the fact that a small person was the doubtlessly responsible, presumably juveniles.

PROPERTY DAMAGE RESULTS IN CRASH

Considerable property damage resulted when two automobiles were in collision at the intersection of Victoria and Coleman Sts. late Thursday night. Joseph Lapenetie, 28 Evans St., had his maroon-colored C.C.M. bicycle stolen from his home the same night. Because of the epidemic of bicycle thefts and the consequent epidemic of bicycle stealing in one of riotously quotation, the bicycles being dismantled and sold, or the rebuilding of bicycles that cannot be immediately identified.

PAPERS TAKEN FROM DRUG STORE

Whether they intended to open a newsboy's route or not wasn't ascertained, but police did arrest a bend two men with a bundle of morning newspapers under their arms early Thursday morning. The papers had been taken from a store that had left the delivery in front of Geen's Drug Store. Constables Taylor and Carruthers apprehended the pair as they wended their collective ways up Front St. with seven or eight morning papers under their arms. One was a non-commissioned member of the R.C.A.F., while his companion was a sailor from the R.C.N. The boys were taken to the police station, relieved of their papers and detained to be later released with a warning not to be in the newspaper business at some other person's expense in the future.

Lieut. Colonel W.R.Rierdon,Dies

Veteran of First Great War and Returning Officer for South Hastings

Lt. Col. William Roy Rierdon of this city died on Wednesday, June 30th and his many friends throughout the County of Hastings and elsewhere his death has caused deep regret.

The late Lt. Col. Rierdon, D.S.O., V.D., was born at Madoc, the son of Prince Edward County and was 66 years of age. His father was Robert Rierdon. After graduating from the local high school he attended the College of Pharmacy in Toronto and graduated in the year 1901.

Prior to the First Great War he was a lieutenant in the 15th Batt., Argyll Regiment. Later he was instrumental in organizing the 32nd Battery of the 5th Brigade and became Commanding Officer with the rank of Major. The 32nd Battery was trained by him at Kingston and was mobilized until this battery went direct to France. In England, Major Rierdon was promoted and was recommended to the British War Office for Artillery Instructor's work in England. Eventually he served in France. For his services he was promoted to the rank of Lt. Col. and received the award of a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order and was mentioned twice in despatches for his services in the field. In France he was severely wounded. He served his country well and was deserving of the honors which he received.

Upon returning home after the war Col. Rierdon completed a drug business in Madoc and in 1926 he took over the Downey Coal Company in Belleville and carried on the business successfully until 1942, when he sold the business.

Lt. Col. William Roy Rierdon took an active part in local affairs and was a Liberal in politics. In 1935 he was appointed by the Dominion Government to the office of Returning Officer for South Hastings and was in charge of the elections on Government War Measures in 1941 he was the Returning Officer for Hastings County. In religion he was a member of St. Michael's Church.

Surviving him are three sisters, Miss Mary Rierdon and Miss Beatrice Rierdon, both of Belleville and Mrs. Neil Brown of Langdon, North Dakota.

The funeral announcement is made on page two in this issue.

Kinsmen Karnival Draws Big Crowds For Relief Fund

Hundreds of quarts of life-giving milk and thousands of cigarettes for Belleville's suffering overseas boys were assured as the result of a two-night street carnival in the Front St. Wednesday and Thursday nights by the Kinsmen Club of Belleville in aid of their war charities campaign. The carnival officially and the true carnival spirit dominated the two-night show that was staged in the street concerned throughout.

The popular game of bingo was enjoyed by civilians and hundreds of men in the armed services alike as a joyous crowd mingled about the main thoroughfare in a gay mood. The annual Kinsmen Carnival was received in the same open-arm spirit, both days and enjoyed in years past with the public realizing the services rendered in the "Milk for Britain" and Kinsmen Pal funds. All the proceeds from the carnival will be given to these war charities. Lieutenant Harry Knott could not announce the two receipts today, but stated they were gratifying.

"The Kinsmen Club wishes to thank all those who made our carnival the success it enjoyed. The public response was splendid, while even the members of our armed services materially helped in making the show one to be remembered. Personally I wish to convey to all workers the appreciation of the Kinsmen Club for their efforts," added President Cliff Lloyd today.

During the evenings draws were made for cash prizes with Mrs. Chas. Kennedy, 25 Isabel St., in this city winning Thursday night's offering of $25.00 while a visitor from Montreal won a similar amount the night previously.

Cost of Living Discussed By House Members

Dairy Claims Price Control Has Saved Canadians $350,000,000

HANSON CRITICAL

By JAMES McCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, June 30 (CP)—Instead of sunshine, beaches and holidays, House of Commons members spent the Dominion Day week-end Wednesday with day warriors, canning sugar and the cost of living.

Many of these weary from a session that started in January, the members ignored the July 1 holiday by continuing plodding through war appropriation bill estimates.

They completed consideration of the labor department's $37,000,000 share of the estimated war expenditure for the 12 months' ending December 31st, and began considering payments to provinces for day nurseries to care for the children of mothers working in war industries and then to the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

At the evening sitting, the House took up the estimates for the Prices Board administration costs in the Finance department—war estimates.

Finance Minister Ilsley said in a statement the outstanding achievement of the board was the stabilization of the cost of living. From Nov. 1, 1941, to May 1, 1943, the increase was 11.6 per cent, while in the United States in the same period it was 12 per cent. In Canada, in the same period of the last year, the increase was 23.5 per cent.

Mr. Ilsley estimated the price control had saved Canadians $350,000,000 in ordinary outlays in 1942. Subsidies had been established throughout 1943 the saving would be $800,000,000.

Civilian consumption of goods and services would suffer major loss during the war years. The people of Canada had been able to buy as much as they had, in spite of the Canadian contribution to the United Nations war effort, and a tribute to those engaged in production.

Some Demand

Some of the shortages experienced, such as those in jams, jellies and marmalades, were not due to increased demand because of "a considerable redistribution" of consumption, particularly in the case of those whose standards of living were relatively low having gained a better position.

Mr. Ilsley said that experience had convinced him that price control was the soundest method, supported only by the judicious use of subsidies, estimated to cost $130,000,000 in the current fiscal year.

Hon. R. B. Hanson (Prog. Con. York-Sunbury) and Hon. Gordon Graydon, (Progressive Conservative Peel) criticized the board and agencies paid Prices Board officials and Mr. Ilsley replied to them.

Useless Travelling

Mr. Hanson cited as "useless travelling" a case where a subspecies had gone 46 miles from Edmonton, Alta., to a government office to investigate a charge of one cent per pound for sugar.

Mr. Hanson said the Prices Board had an "army" of inspectors, a "good many of whom ought to be uniformed." He doubted whether value was being received for money spent.

The board had forbidden export of New Brunswick strawberries Monday and by the time they were wanted in Maine. The berries would have to be sent to Montreal and that would result in breaking the price freeze. The condition was an illustration of "the ineptitude of this board."

Mr. Ilsley said he was satisfied board salaries were reasonable, and he believed that highest were less than $10,000. All the Prices Board subsidies but two had been appointed by the civil service commission and their rates of pay were set by the commission. Monday spent on enforcement was well worth the $1,000 suspect for low prices ceiling.

Clothes Inequalities

Members discussed at length the alleged inability of canning sugar supplies and said there had been inequalities in the various districts, the total amount available being distributed by local ration boards.

Clifford Ross of the Board should never again advertise that housewives should not bother canning and give no indication that a limitation on the sugar supply would be imposed later.

Mr. Ilsley agreed that the idea of canning had been "over-sold" by advertisements.

At opening of the sitting, Prime Minister Mackenzie King said in a Dominion Day statement that the new year of Canada's existence began with a tremendous upsurge in the country's supreme effort. He said that Canadians this year "may be called upon to pass through an ordeal greater than any our country has ever experienced," which would demand steadiness, determination and unbroken courage.

14 Day Nurseries

Labor Minister Mitchell made a statement on an item of $130,000 for assistance to provinces in connection with organizing and operating day nurseries and like facilities.

He said the majority opinion tended to favor mothers remaining in the house rather than working, but was considering ways if necessary to accept the offers to work in industry made by women with children. A high standard of day nurseries had been demanded. In accordance with a fee of 35 cents a day for one child and an additional 15 or 20 cents for a second child cared for in the nurseries.

At present, fourteen nurseries were operating in Quebec and Ontario cities. Among the almost schools units, accommodating 1,700 children in all.

Mrs. Dorise W. Nielsen (Unity, North Battleford) said the accommodation provided was insufficient and arrangements must be made in continuing the facilities after the war.

Like its predecessors, the third order does not apply to men discharged from the armed forces or to members of forces during the present war. Also, men with dependents will not be required to accept transfers which would involve a change of residence.

Wesley Gray Will Be Candidate At Convention

With the date for the forthcoming provincial election now set as August 4 by Premier Hepburn, the question confronting the Progressive Conservative party in East Hastings today is who will be their candidate as a possible successor to the late Dr. Harold E. Wake.

Quite a number prominent men in the riding have been mentioned as possible candidates, but up to one as far as can be determined at the present moment is definitely signify his intention of placing his name before the convention. Mr. Wesley Gray, ex-warden of the county and reeve of the village of Thurlow township, Mr. Gray is also prominent in Orange circles.

Other men who have been mentioned as possible candidates and who will possibly allow their names to stand at the Madoc convention on July 7th, are Roscoe Robson, Reeve of Thurlow township; D. D. Pringle, general merchant of Madoc and T. C. Graham, druggist of Tweed. Mr. Graham recently resigned his position as president of the Eastern Ontario Provincial Conservative party, intimating that he would stand for election as candidate.

POLICE BLOTTER

City police were kept on the move over the Dominion Day holiday period when citizens "let their hair down" in the spirit of holiday frivolity. Several "drunks" including one woman, found their way into the confines of the station cell block after causing sufficient disturbances to warrant apprehension.

Kingston police reported the theft of a 1941 Dodge sedan on Thursday. The vehicle was equipped with Ontario license plate number 17-L-51 when stolen.

Samuel Rikaard, 390 Bleecker Ave., deposited a trunk, tire at the police station on the holiday. The tire was found lying in the centre of Ann St. by Mr. Rikaard and had apparently been thrown there and fallen from a passing truck.

School History Told at Closing Day Program

4th Sidney—A closing day program was given by the pupils of the school on Monday afternoon. Miss Eva Rushnell, president of the Junior Red Cross, was in the chair. There were drills, readings, two-part songs, piano solos and duets, a solo by Mrs. J. Taylor and a review of the year's school activities. Miss McArthur read the following history of the school. Section No. 3, Sidney: The school house, located on the 4th concession of Sidney Township, in the County of Hastings, belongs to the joint school section of S.S. No. 2 Sidney and Thurlow. Some of the pupils therefore belong to Sidney township and some to Thurlow township.

The school was built in 1861 by J. C. Reid and H. P. Knight. It is built of bricks—just no doubt these bricks were obtained from the brickyard just outside Belleville and brought to the site by wagons. The school was built with three windows on the east and west sides and two windows facing north just as it is at the present time. When the school was built the inside walls were of plaster. At the present time they are made of wainscoting to the ceiling, which is also the same material. The walls now are painted two shades of buff and the ceiling is painted ivory. At the time of erection the carpenters built wooden desks with wood supports.

When Percy Anderson taught here these desks were changed to desks with iron supports. Mr. Anderson taught six years and while here obtained a university degree.

The floor of the school has also been changed from pine to hard maple. Three equipments has been added since 1861 such as a piano, many new books in the library, maps, a globe, table for the teacher and a mantlshe. The school now belongs to the travelling school library. In the course of the year 1861 to 1881 the many pupils who have wended their way to school are: Mary Reid, one of these have made their mark in the world. Amos Reid was a minister in the States; a brother of the late Mr. Frank Knight became a lawyer; Norman is a dentist in Belleville; Mr. E. Smith is a Deacon of Christ Church, and Miss Ida Whitfield, who is studying for a doctor has obtained her B.A. degree. Others have become teachers and some have taken O.A.C. work. The first teacher of S. S. No. 23 Sidney school was Nathaniel Vermilyea. Then came Miss Patterson, Miss Orr, Miss Ashton, Miss Cronk, Miss Bell, Miss Cochrane, Miss Dafoe, Miss Young

Canada Enters Another Year

Canada has marked another national birthday, her men and women in the forces and her people at home banded in a true unity of effort to hasten the end of the struggle which must have but one end, the utter defeat of the Axis powers and their unconditional surrender.

As this nation enters another year, the Allied powers have demonstrated in all ways their supremacy and mastery, in the spirit in which they fight, in the power of their united forces, in the air supremacy, in the conquest over the U-boat, and in the power to strike the offensive where and when they please.

In this great role Canada has been performing her part. She has sent her sons to the war in many fields. In the air force Canadian squadrons are writing an epic of deathless valor and achievement on the sea her men in the navy and the merchant marine have played a part in bringing the riches of the cargoes of munitions and food and contingents of troops to Britain and the Allies.

The part that Canada is playing today is such a role as those great Canadians who made Confederation possible would have desired. They made a united Canada in the great step they took to bring the provinces into a confederation. In such a unity, Canadian association with Britain to the utmost in her power is an essential factor.

Canada is a development of history in the New World which is a marvel. Her story goes back far, to shortly after the days of Columbus for England and France were also in the great western discovery of four and a half centuries ago marked by the discovery of America. The early story of French Canadian settlement and of British settlement and the amazing story of the expansion of Canada westward until she reached the Pacific and the great decision which culminated in the Dominion through Confederation read like romance.

Her greatest effort to preserve in this war the freedom which she and the British Empire and other democratic nations have enjoyed finds her advancing steadily to a place of great prominence in the world. She knows her duty and will follow that duty until as one of United Nations she will see her obligation carried out with the world free from the curse of tyranny and oppression.

Great Churchill Speech

Prime Minister Churchill made one of the greatest speeches in his career, on Wednesday, when he received the freedom of the city of London. It is one which will be read ages hence in connection with the war in which he has been privileged to play a great part. It was a prophecy of the things to be, based on the sound foundation of what has already been achieved by the United Nations. As the war is not its final stage but is entering its last phase, the Prime Minister could naturally speak with the knowledge of what has been achieved and with assurance of the future, while he made it clear that would be no sense of complacency because of what had already been accomplished.

Here is his picture of a resolute Britain and Empire. "We strove long, too long for peace and suffered thereby, but from the moment when we gave our guarantee that we would not stand idly by and see Poland trampled down by domination, we have never looked back, never flagged, never doubted, never flinched. We were sure of our duty and we have discharged and will discharge it without swerving or slackening to the end.

"We seek no profit, we want no territory or aggrandizement. We expect no reward and we will accept no compromise. It is on that footing that we wish to be judged, first in our own consciences and afterwards by posterity."

He paid tribute to the self-governing Dominions, their participation in the war being an extraordinary spectacle "an outstanding example of the triumph of mind over matter and of the human heart over short-sighted self interest."

"In that dark, terrific and also glorious hour we received from all parts of His, smallest as the greatest, from the far Majesty's Dominions from the greatest to weakest, from the most modern and the most simple, assurances that we would all go down or come through together."

His speech covered much, a prophecy of the revival of the unity and the true greatness of France, "we foresee an expanding future to the long and enduring Republic of China." The immediate future of the world is depending more upon the association and alignment of policy of America and Britain than on any other factor. Of Germany he said that "now those who sow the wind are reaping the whirlwind." He foresaw "India finding full satisfaction within the British Commonwealth of Nations." Germany, Italy and Japan are doomed to defeat.

As to the war he declared that there would probably be "heavy fighting in the Mediterranean and elsewhere before the leaves of autumn fall" that the mighty arms of the Allied air forces will lengthen by night and by day seeking out more industrial targets and military targets with "overwhelming force" and when the major industrial cities have been disposed of "we will follow the war industry of the Reich to the smaller towns." More than thirty enemy submarines have certainly destroyed in May and June is the best month the United Nations have known in the war as far as submarine warfare is concerned.

The output of new ships in Canada and the United States has reached "somewhere between seven and ten times as much as our losses from enemy action in June. He said that it might be that Hitler's worry over Allied assault plans may have caused the delay of the promised German offensive against Russia. In attacking Russia, the blitz has bitten as never before in history and the Battle of the Ruhr will soon be spreading all over Germany.

His speech was unusually vigorous and in it the enemy could see the writing on the wall. He said the aggressors must yield so that their power to resist will be broken and that they must yield themselves absolutely to our justice and mercy" and that "adequate measures will be taken to save the world from ever again becoming enmeshed, wicked and blackened by their calculated blows and ferocious aggression" of the Axis.

Church to Rise Again

Holy Trinity Church irretrievably damaged in an air raid, will rise again in Belfast, Northern Ireland. The plan is to construct the new edifice in more convenient site after the war. Built in the Gothic style in 1842, the church was consecrated on January 17, 1843, by the then bishop of the diocese, Dr. Mant. The ruthless destruction wrought by German raiders but an end to plans for a centenary celebration. The diocesan authorities will allocate the parish territory among adjoining parishes temporarily. R. H. White, the rector, will be transferred to Culfeightrim.

MEMORIES OF VACATION

These are the things I remember: the thrill and the joy of the shout
As we youngsters raced out of the building the exultingly shrieking: "School's out!"
Again the gay summer had called us from class room and study to play,
And we'd two months before us for romping.
I suppose they're as happy
today,
But sometimes I wonder about it, for now
they've gymnasium and pool
And every device to attract them, while we were just going to school.

The schoolhouse I knew in my boyhood was a building of brick, and severe,
No money was spent on adornment; it had little about it to cheer.
The walls were just blackboards to write on; the seats and the desks were of oak,
And the teachers were frequently spinsters who thought it unholy to joke,
With reading and writing and spelling
from Monday to Friday we stayed,
And never they coached us in swimming, and never an orchestra played.

I look with delight on these changes, I'm glad that the old ways are done,
And everything wholesome's permitted which once was thought frivolous fun.
I'm glad that their schooling is joyous;
that laughter and song are allowed
And music and art are admitted and teachers of genius are proud;
But our children don't look for the summer as eagerly now as did we
And they don't know the rapture of freedom, nor how glad a vacation can be.

MIRACULOUS RECOVERY

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

An Appeal to Reason

New York, July 3—The essence of the whole problem of the future of this nation lies in understanding how to put first things first. The first thing that involves every American is winning the war. In order to win it, we must have unity in our Government. That unity cannot be based on everybody being in continual agreement with each detail of Government policy. That has never existed among a free people.

The unity which we hope to create is based upon discipline and good-will. It implies that we accept errors in policy as inevitable, but that we look at the overall picture, rather than the details. It implies that we seek agreement and never rejoice at strife.

The conversion of a nation of $135,000,000 people, with all its industries, farms, mercantile establishments, employer associations, trade unions, educational systems, public activities, and private activities, to a total footing is a task of immeasurable difficulties, involving unavoidable sacrifices, dislocations, shortages, and even injustices. There is no genius with sufficient intelligence to foresee how a policy taken in one direction may produce a chain of events in a different direction requiring new policies to meet new situations.

No Reason For Distrust.

If we look at our country after 19 months of war, we have no reason to regard our Government with distrust.

None of us is satisfied with every detail of the picture. But this Government has mobilized, in a remarkably short time, the mightiest power on earth, and done so without establishing dictatorship. In spite of all the inconveniences, there has been no serious drop in the standard of living, and in some quarters the standard has actually risen.

In the whole world today, no such task as well as Americans, and although all individuals and organizations have their grievances in their activities, none have been restricted in their liberties.

Add to this that not a bomb has destroyed a United States home, that unique among the peoples engaged in the war, we can look under a constant terror, heralded by the demoniac whine of the prophetic siren, and every living American has a reason for humility and gratitude.

When we look back, also, upon the state of our country a year ago, upon the might of the enemy, his uninterrupted successes, the apprehension and malaise that filled every conscious mind, and contrast how in these few months, fortunes have changed, we have again a reason for humility and gratitude to God, to history, to destiny. And even, now, to the Office of Government of the United States.

Why, then, this spirit of unnecessary and long-suffering allies, and hand over fist ammunition for new ammunition for their political warfare?

Hitler's Hope, 1944 Elections.

Do we not know that every rift, every partisan fight, is seized by Hitler as a new sign of hope? The last card in the hand of our enemies is the profound faith of the dictatorship that democracy's divisments will lose the war and the peace because they cannot forgo partisan quarrels among themselves.

Do we not know that Hitler places more hope in the 1944 elections than in any other one thing?

It is not the decision that will be taken in these elections that interests him. It is the election campaign itself the flourishing of violent and prejudiced factionalism, to which he looks forward. It is the realization of the despots that the democratic system—the "soft" the White House"—can be made the emotional centre, deflecting from themselves the energy of wrath.

The rift between Congress and the President is a national catastrophe. It contributed nothing to the overcoming of this catastrophe to assess the blame for it. The President may be right, or Congress may be right; the President may be wrong, or Congress may be wrong. But it would be better for the country if they were both wrong together, at innumerable details of our war plan than if either were right separately.

There is not, for instance, one way to avoid rampant inflation. There are a number of ways. But one course must be chosen. It is better to tread a stony path together than to ride in a dozen different paths leading in different directions.

Rift Steadily Broadens.

In the last weeks the rift has been broadening every day, and a large part of the press has greeted it as though it were some triumph of democracy.

No one asks for a rubber-stamp Congress. But a Congress whose chief object is to defeat the Executive is a menace to us, and will, if things go on as they are going, prolong the war, cost innumerable

THE JERSEYS

"The Jerseys" frequently occurs in American historical writings with a familiar name for New Jersey.

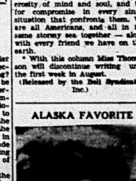
In the instance, Thomas Penn had the first of The Crisis series, printed in the Pennsylvania Journal, December 19, 1776, wrote:

"All that Howe has been doing for this month past, is rather a retreat than a conquest, which the spirit of the Jerseys, a year ago, would have quickly repulsed, and which time and a few resolute men will soon recover."

And, of course, everybody recalls General Washington's historic retreat through the Jerseys.

This appellation arose from the fact that what now comprises the state of New Jersey was at one time divided into two provinces known as East Jersey and West Jersey.

The area was originally part of New Netherland (New York) and along with that province was granted in 1665 by Charles II to his brother James, Duke of York and later became King James II.



In the same year the Duke of York granted the tract between the Hudson and Delaware rivers to Lord John Berkley and Sir George Carteret. It was called New Jersey in honor of Carteret who had formerly been governor of the Isle of Jersey.

At first the territory was governed as one province, but later when it was partitioned that portion originally granted to Berkley was called West Jersey and that to Carteret East Jersey.

In 1682 the province of East Jersey was sold at public auction to William Penn and eleven associates for 3,400 pounds. Penn had already obtained interest in West Jersey. In 1702 the proprietors who reserved the right, to the soil transferred all right of jurisdiction to the crown and the two provinces were united under a government similar to that of the other royal provinces in North America.

Although at the time of the Revolution, East Jersey and West Jersey had comprised a single province for nearly seven quarters of a century, many people were still in the habit of speaking of the colony as "the Jerseys."

ALASKA FAVORITE

In a picture contest conducted by marines in Alaska, Billie Jean Pilcher, Fresno, Calif., seven years old, selected "Sweetheart of Dutch Harbor." Runner-up was Pfc. Forrest E. Partridge, U.S.M.C., also of Fresno, who entered her photo in the contest.

Learn History by Writing Plays And Acting With Marionettes

Scholars' of Today Also Develop Ingenuity and Expand Knowledge by Modern Method

MANY ARTS INVOLVED

What goes on in public schools nowadays sounds more like play than work at least to those who were brought up on the old system. The accepted way of learning history used to be to know a long list of battles, facts and dates. It was hard and boring, and the only aids to memory, or attempts to make the subject more interesting were such scintillating rhymes as the old "Columbus sailed the ocean blue in 1492."

And even then when the question turned up, brains were racked wondering if it was "Columbus" who sailed the deep blue sea, in 1492.

It would never have occurred to either the teacher or the pupils to get interested in the characters of the people who were concerned in the discovery of the New World, or to present a drama depicting them, but that is the way it is done in one of the Belleville schools this year when one class got up a marionette show whose story was of Columbus trying to persuade the King and Queen of Spain to finance this fantastic voyage.

Use of Marionettes in Schools

It is all part of the new type of education now in vogue in the public schools. A report of the use of marionettes in the public schools of South Hastings, composed of the separate reports of the teachers who have made use of them in them, is now in the Corby Public Library. They find that not only been used here in the teaching of social studies, but as is pointed out by the teachers, there are many subsidiary things learned as well, both in the academic line and in the growth of the character toward useful, good citizen.

In the first place the marionettes are made by the children themselves out of such materials as paper bags, cloth, paint, glue, spools, plasticine, heavy cord, cotton batting, felt, cloth and water colors. Mathematics enters the picture in the attempt to get proper body proportions, as well as in the expense of the production if there are any. Most of the materials the pupils gather up around them from their homes, so it does not cost nothing. This also helps the pupils to learn to use things at hand when they cannot secure what is really needed. The puppets must be provided with costumes, typical of the period of history which is being presented, and this necessitates a study of the costume of the time, and gathering of available pictures. It also necessitates some practical work along the line of sewing. And an idea of dress design. Often the stage is made by the students which again involves mathematics, art, manual training and ingenuity.

Some even go so far as to make a lighting box to which they added wings and a hop while the girls made canteen curtains on the pattern of pull-drapes.

Many Arts Only Plays

Many of the classes wrote their own plays after deciding as a group on the incident in history which they wished to depict. One class chose the "Story of Evangeline," and divided it into five scenes, performing a part for each scene. Then after a short discussion on how to write a play, each pupil wrote his own version. The pupils selected the best version for each of the scenes, which as it happened was all written by different pupils, who collaborated to put the play together and improve it. Thus a valuable English lesson was included in the project.

Other plays which were chosen by different classes included "Queen Elizabeth and Walter Raleigh', 'A Hudson's Bay Store,' 'Heroes of The Long Sault,' and a play based on Sir Alexander Mackenzie.

Training In Leadership

This type of project is mostly confined to Forms VII and VIII, although it has been used successfully with younger classes.

As well as learning history, these pupils who speak for the marionettes get training in recitation and emphasis, and the other boys who appear to the audience more sensitive and timid children get a chance to perform. In one class one pupil memorized the whole scenic while another child was the speaking part for each character which teaches co-operation, as the timing naturally has to be fairly accurate. This same class was divided into ten groups and each group was made responsible for one character.

Character-Building Influence

While all these sidelines thus introduced into the subject of the project is achieved in that the story is well learned by the students, and the characters, places and stories become real to them. Even more important perhaps are the character-building traits which are developed by a project of this kind. The need of teacher and co-operation, understanding, independent thinking, critical judgment, initiative, resourcefulness and a sense of responsibility. It is also given the students a chance to use their originality.

After all, this isn't such a bad age to be young in, is it, at least as far as going to school is concerned?

Post-War Planning

The committee on post-war planning spent Tuesday in Toronto interviewing Provincial Affairs officials as to their viewpoint and reaction to certain local schemes. Mr. A. J. Gray, Deputy Minister of Provincial Affairs was consulted as to government assistance towards these schemes, and he was fine in his belief that the municipalities cannot stand very much of the expenditure for "easy money," he thought, will largely have to come from the Dominion and Provincial Governments. Dr. H. Hamilton Fairley, Deputy Minister of Health and Welfare, was very sympathetic and encouraging and gave many helpful suggestions and plans for flood control, and Hon. Mr. McQuesten was consulted about highways and other matters.

The committee were introduced to Dr. Fairley, another, had a good hearing, and were given every assistance and encouragement in proceed with the schemes they have in mind. Mr. A. Gray was particularly anxious that the additional engineering requirements of the Public Utilities Commission be proceeded with at once. The committee consisted of Mayor Wallace, Lorne McDougall, Mr. H. J. Ackerman, Mr. C. O. Bird and Mr. Jamieson Bone, and urged government officials to have in the Dominion Government declare its intention to reward those schemes as at early a date as possible.

Gala Garden Tea Held by R.C.A.F. Ladie's Auxiliary

Trenton, July 3—(Special)—The Ladies of M.J. Stephenson, Dunlas St. West, was the scene of a gala garden tea on Wednesday afternoon when the Ladies Auxiliary of the R.C.A.F. when a very successful tea was held in aid of funds for charitable purposes.

The many guests were received by Mrs. Stephenson, with Mrs. Wm. Pitman assisting in taking the tickets.

The tea table, which was most attractive with exquisite lace cloth and centred with turquoise pottery bowl holding mixed flowers of blue glove, supported by tall white candles in matching holders, was presided over by Mrs. McSurney, Mrs. Turtle and Mrs. Cory. Cory. Guests were served by various members of the auxiliary.

Gay Decorations

The garden, which was the centre of attraction, was gaily decorated with flags, bunting, and huge baskets of flowers. Here the guests wandered from one table to another, where various articles were for sale and games indulged in. The fishpond table was in the charge of Mrs. W. E. Baker and Mrs. Fink, and the fortune telling stand in use by the younger members was in charge of Mrs. Hackett, Mrs. Alexander and Mrs. Dee. Aprons were sold by Mrs. Purdon and Mrs. Bird, and a booth where fortunes were told by the numerous members was without occupancy. The draw for War Saving Certificates was superviesd by Mrs. McBurney and Mrs. Pitman, and the lucky winner was Mrs. Honey.

Display of Beautiful Dresses

Of all interest to all present was the exceptionally fine display of hospital supplies that are constantly being made by the members of the auxiliary for their convalescent station hospital. Nursing Sister Smith, who has been in charge of the operating room and who is returning to the station hospital, under Bay, was in charge of this display and had the booth patriotically decorated with the Air Force blue and gold.

The ladies of this auxiliary are to be congratulated on the splendid work which they are doing in connection with the R.C.A.F., and for the entertainment which they provided for the public by giving this summer garden tea. Special credit is due Mrs. Russell, Mrs Sturley and Mrs. Purdon under whose convenorship the arrangements were so well carried out.

O.E.S. Objective Is Second Canteen For Year 1943

Already having fulfilled their this years objective of supplying a fully equipped mobile canteen for service in Britain, District No. 12 of the Order of the Eastern Star has set a new objective of a second canteen this year, according to Dr. Sent. Mrs. R. M. Maybee, 290 Bleecker Avenue.

This is the third equipped canteen to have been supplied by the above district of the Eastern Star, the other two having been completed last year No. 12 district includes the area as far west as Cobourg, south to Wellington, north to Bancroft and east to Napanee. Its present record in supplying canteens for Britain places it second in all the Dominion, with Toronto district being first.

Appreciation of the third mobile canteen shipped by the local Eastern Star district has been expressed to Mrs. Maybee by wire from Vincent Massey who is in charge of their distribution in England, "Please convey to the Eastern Star District No. 12 our sincere thanks for your further generous gift," the message reads. "The canteen is being ordered and you will be advised in due course. Letters from and newspaper cuttings will be sent following ceremony."

The completed canteen is not shipped from Canada, it was pointed out by Mrs. Maybee but the required money is wired to England and the canteen purchased, overseas.

Money for the canteen is raised almost entirely through projects staged by the Eastern Star, but one donation from a group of Belleville ladies has been accepted. The Bridge Club headed by Mrs. W. E. Coulby recently presented a cheque to the local Belleville chapter to which Mrs. Maybee belongs.

Presentation And Reception For Bridal Couple

A large number of friends and neighbors met last night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Blake Pitman in honor of the latter's recent bride, Mrs. Willett Pitman, (nee Hilda Thompson).

The bride and groom were asked to take chairs in the centre and Mrs. Herbert Howes acted as chairman for a short program consisting of readings, vocal and instrumental music. Included in the program was an instrumental by the groom which was a request.

Douglas Bleecker read a very appropriate address, signed on behalf of Carmel community by Herbert Howes, Douglas Shaw and Percy Reynolds. Harold Howes made the presentation of a silver tea service and clock. In his usual capable manner Willett thanked everyone and invited everyone to visit Hilda and himself at Selaws.

Lunch was served. The chairman group presented each bride and groom of ice cream and served it with lunch. A social time was enjoyed by all.

Mr. and Mrs. Blake Pitman recently entertained about fifty guests to a reception in honor of their son Willett and his bride (nee Hilda Thompson).

As the guests on the guests were invited to the dining room, which was beautifully decorated with pink and white ribbon streamers and a white bell. The tables were lovely with their white linen cloths, silver and crystalware with lighted candles and cut flowers.

After dinner, Rev. A. M. Wootton, in a humorous, yet practical way proposed a toast to the bride. Rev. W. J. Dee responded in a few remarks. Willett replied in a very suitable manner.

The guests then went to the spacious living rooms, where singing, music and social chat, served a very enjoyable evening. Ice cream was served and the guests departed to their many homes after giving the bride and groom their best wishes.

Possessing a congenial personality, Engineer Mott is well liked by city officials and starts his 25th year with the city with the best wishes from all departments. Mr. Mott is the second oldest city official in point of service, City Clerk Wilfred Holmes is the other official to begin with the city.

Story, of Belleville, a member of the R.C.A.F. Mr. P. A. Kellar of the village, very generously donated his cottage to the boys and John Wiggins, his host. When all guests had assembled in the living room Hilda was ushered in by Miss Marjorie Frost and was then presented with a kitchen chair by Miss Marjorie Frost. The chair was an arbor of pink and white streamers, centred with a white bell. White cylinders of roses and pink streamers, with pink and tall umbrella plant formed a suitable background. Nearby was discovered a "mail" for Hilda, in which pictures illustrated the past, present, future and family life of the bride-to-be. This was read by Miss Ruth Ward and penned her autograph.

The remainder of the room was conducted by Mrs. Wagar. A contest, "Who's Who in the Alphabet with Keith," was led by Mrs. Clifford Metz. Hilda read these hints aloud Mrs. Wagar assisted. Another contest was given by Miss Marjorie Frost and Miss Phyllis Tweddy entered a piano solo, "Sweet Memories" and Miss Doris Ward gave a very appropriate reading. A vocal solo "Indentifying the Mellow Moon" was sung by Mrs. Milton Shaw. Mrs. George Ward gave a humorous reading. The most interesting feature of the program followed, "Hilda's Trousseau" which Mrs. Clifford Mitz was given in charge of. Mrs. Milton Shaw spoke to Mrs. Frank Palmer. The effects were given by Mrs. Wagar, who performed the ceremony from the telephone directory. The costumes and actions brought forth shrieks of laughter.

Hilda was then was a presentation to Hilda by several girls of a handsome electric grill set and after Miss Marion Mutton had thanked the hostess, Mrs. Kilpatrick and Mrs. Wagar poured while four girl friends of the bride-to-be served a dainty lunch.

W.P.B. Question Box

This column is sponsored by the Regional Office, Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Questions on price control, ration regulations and other Wartime Prices and Trade Board rulings should be mailed to the Information Branch, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, Victoria Building, Brockville, Ontario:

Q.—My father has recently passed away. What shall I do with his ration book?

A.—If the funeral director does not pick it up (as he is now empowered to do) and destroy it, please deliver it to your Local Ration Office with a suitable note of explanation.

Q.—Can you tell me where to get a copy of the new issue of "the Little Blue Book?"

A.—Apply to your nearest office of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board or to its Consumer Branch, Arcade Building, Sparks St., Ottawa.

Q.—I am having an awful time with my children's socks which seem to shrink unduly. Has your conservationist any suggestions to offer?

A.—It is a good idea to buy woolsen socks a size larger than necessary for the first few purchases. They should be washed in lukewarm water and dried on stretchers to prevent shrinkage.

Q.—Why is it that there is a selling price on the milling of grain or eggs but none on the feeds that are needed for poultry?

A.—You are quite mistaken in assuming that there is no ceiling on such feeds. A ceiling price has been violated, please report the circumstances immediately to your nearest office of Local Board.

Q.—When will the new consumer ration books be issued?

A.—Full information will be given concerning this distribution in advance of the commencement of the present books. The new books will be distributed during the week of August 22.

Q.—As a regular patron of a cheese factory, I have received only one-half pound of whey butter per butter ration coupon. Does you think this allowance should be altered?

A.—It has been. In order to prevent an accumulation of whey butter at cheese factories, their operators are now issued to each regular patron one pound of such butter per valid butter coupon.

Fruit Year Signs

Prince Edward County Council Tuesday authorized Road Superintendent John Dunkley to have proper signs erected to notify parents and children of the danger of bathing in certain sections which have become dangerous due to the high water conditions.

The shore lines have changed due to high water and dangerous holes exist at swimming places and these should be marked, they declared. He felt that there should be some one at each beach that was familiar with the art of first aid.

Billie Watson on Defensive As John Katan Nearly Snatches British Empire Title Away

One-Hour Limit Passes With No Fall Being Registered

EX-MARINE WINS

Insofar as Belleville wrestling fans are concerned the "Whipper Billy" Watson is still British Empire heavyweight wrestling champion, but it wasn't before his crown was toppling noticeably atop his noggin at the Home Arena Wednesday night, when John Katan, the Pakistan mat villain, all but knocked Watson from beneath his tights.

For one full hour these two sinful enemies of the mat ring struggled mightily on effort before the time limit bell practically saved Watson, who seemed to be behind the 8 ball in every ring wear. As a matter of fact the Pakistan challenging villain had Watson on the defence of his title most of the night and on several occasions nearly dunked in the decapording pool of fetish.

Of course "Whipper Bill" is the flower of the patrons' eye and it is but a sigh of relief, that was heard to go up from over 1,800 rabid fans, when the final gong sounded and everybody was satisfied Watson was still champion. That is everybody except John Katan, the challenger, who pounded vigorously on the referee Cliff Fawcett raised Watson's hand and announced he was "still champion." Incidentally referee Fawz moved into the higher bracket of wrestling officiating, when he called the decisions in his first title bout and the local ring umpire came through with flying colors owing to the satisfaction of the paying public. Maybe Promoter Tunney could be prevailed upon to remain this town over an extended time limit for the B. K. crown. It would be a natural, if for the other reasons than the fact the patrons were most satisfied with Wednesday night's entire Queensbury show.

Fighting Marine Takes Dunlop

However, for unadulterated excitement in both the semi-final scrap of the night to go over tops when "Whizzer" Morgan, the fighting Marine from Tennessee who hilled in Lima, Guadalcanal, was pronounced winner over the puppacious Jim Dunlop, when referee Fawz disqualified Dunlop for repeated illegal ring tactics.

Never in the history of wrestling at the Home Arena has a contestant received such a thunderous hand when he was announced. Of course the hand not pleased Dunlop, who immediately set upon the ex-Marine in a most unorthodox manner, but when Morgan retaliated the patrons howled with glee. At one stage of the game Morgan removed his shoe and soundly beat Dunlop over the noggin with the "kick" and finished the bout shoeless.

After knocking Morgan out of the ring on countless occasions referee Fawz disqualified Dunlop, but the ex-Marine was not about to admit defeckan and wanting to add another "enemy" to his list, leaped from the ring with Dunlop and a free-for-all fight ensued with Morgan K.O.ing Dunlop and a frenzied crowd swarming the squared circle as police had to step in and escort Dunlop to his dressing room with Morgan calling for his scalp. A rematch over a longer time limit would doubtless prove pleasing to the patrons here.

The curtain-raiser saw Don Feline of Boston and Ted Kaplan, the fighting Irishman, battle 30 minutes to a draw affair. Dunlop's excitement of the show a pair of glasses were lost by a patron and are awaiting their owner at the Arena.

Curtright's Hitting Streak Has Extended 26 Games To Make Him Leading Hitter

His Average is .362 Ten Points Above Babe Dahlgren

YANKS BEATEN

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

Since Joe DiMaggio swept through the pasture-picker's 56-game hitting streak was smashed into bits—a significance.

But a little known rookie outfielder for Chicago White Sox, Guy Paxton Curtright, right now is nursing a hot hitting streak that has reached 26 games and is paying attention from the fans not only because it is the longest of the season but because it is currently the leading batter in the major league.

His average today was a glossy .362 to make him better than Babe Dahlgren of the Phillies, the National League leader, and 24 better than Vernon Stephens of St. Louis Browns, who has been the junior circuit's top run-maker most of the spring.

Curtright is a chunky righthanded hitter from the White Sox chain who rang up Paul Waner's 5A title is 30 years old and except for a brief trial with the Cubs in the big league. Last year he batted .291 for the Giants and was batting .300 with 13 home runs batted in only 45 tallies in 101 games.

He made only one hit yesterday, but this was a lusty triple and it kept his streak going even though it did not figure in the Sox' 2-0 triumph over the Philadelphia Athletics. Credit for this went to the effective pitching of Thornton Lee, southpaw. Both Chicago runs came on three hits in the seventh inning.

Cleveland's Indians split a 3-3 decision over New York Yankees in the nightcap, Jim Bagby, Jr., who walked two men with the bases loaded in the 9th inning to force in two runs and catcher Ken Sears fanned Joe Gordon with the bases full in the eighth to let in the Indians' other run.

Meanwhile, outfielder Curtright, 10-7, noued out Boston Red Sox 3-2 when Ned Harris singled with the bases loaded in the ninth and St. Louis Browns trampled Washington Senators with a 3-1 11-inning victory.

In the National circuit Brooklyn Dodgers lost a wild 10-9 13-inning verdict to Cincinnati and missed a chance to conventionally ahead of the idle St. Louis Cardinals in the league.

The game hasted 2 1-2 hours during which 32 hits were used of 10 pitchers and a total of 36 players saw service. Manager Leo Durocher using all but five of the 25 men on his squad. Brooklyn had a 9-run lead taken off its mound with a four-run outburst in the second inning. when the Reds scored 5 more runs off Johnny Allen in the fourth, forced Hugh Casey to the showers caught in the eighth, through a triple by Lonny Frey and a single by Ival Goodman.

TORONTO LEAFS WIN TWO GAMES FROM BALTIMORE

Conger Chalks Up His 10th Victory Before Leaving League

ROYALS WIN TWO

(By The Associated Press)

Dick Conger, star pitcher for Toronto Maple Leafs, apparently is determined to bow out of the International League in fine style.

Conger chalked up his 10th victim of the season Wednesday night, pitching the Leafs to a 3-2 triumph over Baltimore Orioles. It was the fourth straight win for the lanky hurler, they have defeated the Orioles by the same score in successive encounters.

Conger, who best figure in a 5-hit performance Wednesday night, pulled a run in the first inning on Bob Dillinger's single and George Selkirk's single, but held the Orioles safe thereafter. Jim Poole, Jack Jones tripled and scored on Sammy Bell's one-baser.

Toronto evened with Al Rubeling again contributing gweoman duty, Jim Poole led the scoring in the second on Rubeling's single and won it in the eighth on a single by Red 'Crew, a walk, and hit by pitcher Harry Davis.

Montreal took both ends of 4 inning doubleheader from Buffalo 4-3 and 3-0, behind the effective pitching of Bob Chipman and Hal Gregg. Chipman had a 3-hit shutout until the ninth inning of the opener when he allowed three singles and a double good for three runs. Gregg had a 2-hitter in the nightcap shutout in the afternoon.

Batting by Dixie Howell with the bases loaded climaxed a six-run uprising for the Royals in the seventh inning of the first game.

Adam Bengochea's sixth inning single gave Buffalo a three-run lead in the second game. Howell filled the bases with one out in the ninth, but Manager Bengochea smacked into a double play.

Paul Trout, Montreal righthander who hit a homer and two singles Rochester Red Wings shelled two Jersey City pitchers for 14 hits and drove in 11-4 triumph. A six-run outburst against relief twirler Bob Wiles in the seventh put the game on ice.

WESTERN PRINCE BEATS SWEEP GOLD IN THE DERBY

Baby Broom Was Second and 30 to 1 Shot Finished Third

PATSY BERG WINS

(By The Canadian Press)

After quite a build-up on the part of the racing fraternity Sweepgold, owned by Harry Sloich of Toronto, failed to live up to advance notices on finish in eighth and sixth in the eight-horse field which hooted in for the Canadian Derby at Winnipeg's Polo Park as the Dominion Day attraction which drew 15,000 excited fans.

It was Rad vs. West in the mile-and-a-quarter $5,000-added classic and the winner proved to be a geographical compromise, in Western Prince, a three-year-old which is owned by Rad Hanna but trained by the Swamis stables of Monterey, Cal. Ridden by Patsy Berg, veteran, Baby Broom, owned by R. A. Campbell of Regina, finished in a dead heat behind for second and Sweepgold, with Jockey Ted Atkinson up from seventh position to finish third.

An interesting yarn was told, in connection with the holiday race bonanza which must be in the front line in last position after leaving the barrier. Sweepgold is also called "the 37-cent filly" for a reason. Owned by Harry Sloich, of A. O. Kennedy of Winnipeg last season, Sweepgold was entered in a claiming race at Polo Park track for some workout. The price was $1,000 and Sloich promptly disgusted with its trials and offered to sell for whatever Kennedy liked. He asked Captain Steer his several of the lady and gentleman teams lined up as this tournament is usually hotly contested in the Quinte Club's annual golf meeting. Get in early, youse gals and guys.

Still in Tangle

Despite an extended schedule, that ends tonight, there is still a Percy Harry Knott's City Softball loop aren't out of the woods yet. Wednesday evening's game with tonight's dual bill, when the No. 2 "Fyers" meet the Army and Navy Juniors at Memorial Park. Pounding back into a tie with Red Townsend's Juniors for the top berth, the Marines had to score a last inning run to beat Alemite 5-4, while Reliance Foundries handed Alemite last night 13 to 3 behind the three-hit mound effort of Ding Loffman to take care of Alemite's 4 runs. In the other series the Garrison dropped two, one to the Juniors 13 to 4 and last night the Foundries beat the Garrison 14 to 5 in the wash-up of some lusty hitting that saw Webb, Clement and Jack Carr all hit homers for the winners.

Watson's Crown Wobbled

It is doubtful if "Whipper Billie" Watson's British Empire crown was ever as close to being dislodged as it was Wednesday night when Pakistan John Katan had the popular Watson on the defence of his title most of the hour limit before they wrestled to a draw at the Home Arena. Katan was the aggressor most of the night and literally had the York Township boy hanging on the ropes with his R. K. title. If and when Promoter Jim Tunney can get matched these two top-notchers in a return bout, Belleville's arena should bulge at the seams ,especially if the match can be staged here.

Local grappling fans went for the Fighting Marine, Morgan, in a big way and gave vent to their feelings when Morgan was declared winner over the unbashed Bunny Dunlop, who did a Pakistan dance act, as he danced under the ring when Morgan cut loose at him.

And Without Champagne

Minus the conventional maniacs fanfare there was a holiday launching of the Bancroft, a new 65-foot cabin Georgian Bay Boat, at Parry Sound, Ont., over the week-end. The occasion was the launch, by Mrs. Bancroft, of the boat with the "Stub" with Matt Curtis, of Parry Sound, "best man" and as chief engineer and official launching with no champagne. The boat put to sea the bass and lunge lounging on Lake Huron and Georgian Bay of Quinte had better take heed for the boat can't cast a moan plug.

A party of clergymen were attending a Presbyterian conference in Scotland. Several sat off to explore the district. Coming across a cross in a river, spanned by a footbridge, they halted.

Not observing a notice that the bridge was unsafe, they started to cross it. The bridge-keeper ran after them in protest.

"It's all right," declared the spokesman, not understanding the reason for the old man's fears, "we're Presbyterians from the conference."

"I'm no' caring boot that," was the reply, "but if yez gonna get off the bridge ye'll all be Baptists!"

O-K PURE WHITE CIGARETTE PAPERS

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 103

By SAM GORDON
The Ethicure

There is What one good way to learn bridge. First know the simple rules. Thereafter, the tough subjects will fit into place without much effort.

One simple rule is that a one-jump bid is forcing to game. It follows that such a signal guarantees tricks enough for a game.

Another simple rule is that an opening bid of one shows four tricks. It follows that a one-jump response guarantees the balance of tricks needed for a game.

It takes 11 tricks to make a game in a minor suit (clubs or diamonds). It takes ten tricks for a game in a major suit (hearts or spades). The law of bridge insist on that.

So, it does not take much brainwork for a responder to decide when he has enough for a one-jump. All he has to do is count tricks added to the five promised by his partner.

If responder is not sure what to bid, he usually can't prepare for the most. Or if he knows the trump will be in a minor suit, he must prepare for the worst. He must see is it tricks.

It follows that he has six tricks if he one-jumps in an unagreed suit. Or if he one-jumps with an assist in a minor suit. But if he one-jumps with an assist in a major, he needs only five tricks.

That says you right all the shortstop of lesson number 36 in Horse Sense Bridge. It reads: In answer to an unagreed suit bid of one, a one-jump assist in a major guarantees five tricks.

Your partner starts with an opening bid of one heart and you have this hand:

♥Q J 7 4 3
♦K 8 5
♣A K

You have no takeout suit. You have adequate support for your partner's heart suit. You also have five tricks. Respond with a bid of three hearts, a one-jump assist in a major suit.

Horse Sense has all the needed rules down pat. It follows them strictly and you will correctly bid every hand. And I don't mean maybe.

LESSON NO. 104

A switch in time saves nine. Do your no-trump bids give you any trouble? Then, change to the Horse Sense count and your no-trump problems will disappear.

A bid of one no-trump requires your pair to take seven tricks; two no-trump, eight tricks; three no-trump, nine tricks. And a game in no-trump needs nine tricks.

A one-jump bid shows enough tricks to make a game. If the jump is in a suit, it shows enough suit tricks for a game. If the jump is in no-trump, it shows enough no-trump tricks for a game.

Each ace or king or queen is known as a high card. Each high card is a no-trump trick. So, total the high cards held by your pair and you know how many no-trump tricks your pair can take.

An opening bid of one in a suit shows (besides a biddable suit) five tricks, among which are four high cards, two of which are sure tricks.

Notice the your high cards. An opening bid of one, then a suit, shows at least four no-trump tricks. If your partner responds you know at once the least number of no-trump tricks in your pair.

Total your suit tricks. If you have five, you see a total of nine tricks. That's enough for a game. So, you can make a one-jump bid in no-trump.

That will push you right into lesson number 37, Horse Sense Bridge. It reads: In answer to an unagreed suit bid of one in a suit, a one-jump assist in a major guarantees five tricks.

Your partner starts with an opening bid of one heart and you have this hand:

♠A Q 3
♥K 7
♦K 4 3
♣K 5 3 2

You have no takeout suit. You have no-trump support for your partner's heart suit. You also have five tricks. Respond with a bid of three hearts, a one-jump assist in a major suit.

Horse Sense has all the needed rules down pat. It follows them strictly and you will correctly bid every hand. And I don't mean maybe.

AT THE BELLE

"KEEPER OF THE FLAME"

What would a newspaper reporter do if he discovered that the woman he loved was guilty of treason?

That's the problem which confronts Spencer Tracy in "Keeper of the Flame," in which he is co-starred with Katharine Hepburn and which is now at the Belle Theatre.

The picture marks the first co-starring appearance of these two actors since their hilarious "Woman of the Year." The new picture is a powerfully dramatic love story, deeply significant of contemporary America.

The Belle Newsreel and a Pete Smith Specialty "Hollywood Cavalcade" complete the program.

"AIR FORCE," Timely, Thrilling

"Air Force," Warner Bros.' timely new picture—which deals with the war of the Pacific and of the heroic feats of American fliers, will have its initial opening at the Belle Theatre this week-end.

Taken from Government films, the picture records the story of one of our Flying Fortresses, from the moment it takes off on a peaceful mission from Mather Field, just prior to December 7, until it arrives on Australian territory, after having taken active part in the Coral Sea battle.

Featured in the cast are John Garfield, Gig Young, Harry Carey, Arthur Kennedy, James Brown and John Ridgely. Many Army fliers, many of whom participated in actual raids over Japanese-held bases in the South Pacific.

"The Big Shot"

Bad guy Bogart returned to his mobs and robberies yesterday at the Warner Bros.' thrilling gangster film, "The Big Shot," which opened at the Capitol Theatre. The temporary reform he underwent in "The Maltese Falcon" and "All Through the Night" has not in the least softened him for his latest role. All the old cold-blooded terseness, ruthless action and sharp-tongued retorts still make Bogart the screen's number one tough guy no matter which side of the law he's on.

Desrochers was arrested as he was coming in the scene of the shooting in an alleged stolen car. Police first received word of the shooting when the wounded April drove his team to the store in Dettwood.

Police said Desrochers admitted he had acted alone in the shooting.

"Tornado in the Saddle"

The title of the new Columbia western which opened yesterday at the Capitol Theatre as the added section bit is "A Tornado in the Saddle" and the film isn't many minutes old before the audience find that sheriff Russel Hayden is just that! Once again reuniting the popular cowboy favorite with his fiddle-playing buddy, Bob Wills, the Columbia adventure drama starts off with an exciting stagecoach runaway and continues the rapid pace right down to the final reel!

A colored cartoon and Zane Grey's "King of the Mounties" complete a grand weekend bill.

AT THE McCARTHY

"It's A Great Life"

The Bumsteads, America's first family of fun, may not be able to afford their own social or business affair, so well, but when it comes to providing movie-goers with uproarious entertainment, they always manage to come out on top. And in the latest Columbia film, "It's A Great Life," is no exception!

As a matter of fact, the hilarious "Blondie" which opened yesterday at the McCarthy Theatre, is by all odds one of the lightest, gayest comedies reviewer has seen in a long time.

All the old familiars, including Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms, Jonathan Hale and Daisy, are back in their well-known roles. But, in addition to these popular players, the cast boasts the addition of Hugh Herbert, the woo-hoo comedian.

The story opens, as usual, in the Bumstead home where, as usual, everything is in confusion. Daisy and her pups are racing through the house, Dagwood (now known as Alexander) and his pal, Alvin, are conducting a business venture, while, as usual, Blondie is arguing with two flour-wasting cooks, Mrs. Dithers and Trixie.

In the midst of all this confusion, it's no wonder that Dagwood gets everything he touches turned to phone and buys a horse for his boss, Mr. Dithers, instead of a house! After a series of very funny episodes involving the horse and the banker, Mr. Dithers, Dagwood is restored to the latter's good graces temporarily.

The whole cast, including supporting players Alan Dinehart and Marjorie Ann Mutchie, is grand and honors are about equally distributed with even Reggie, the horse, getting a few extra bits for the credit.

Added to the present Hopalong Cassidy story featuring William Boyd, Andy Clyde in "Colt Comrades" is also shown.

Held on Charge Of Murder Following Death of Woman

Cochrane, Ont., July 2 (CP)—Provincial police today said they were holding Wilfrid Desroches, 22, on a charge of murder following the death in hospital here last night of Mrs. Jean Baptiste April of nearby Dettwood.

They said Desroches had admitted shooting the woman after a drinking bout and tearing off her clothes.

April and his wife were brought to hospital here following the shooting and officials said the man stood a chance to recover.

Desrochers was arrested as he was coming in the scene of the shooting in an alleged stolen car. Police first received word of the shooting when the wounded April drove his team to the store in Dettwood.

Police said Desrochers admitted he had acted alone in the shooting.

AT THE McCARTHY

Alexander! Larry Simms, who first achieved fame by his portrayals of Baby Dumpling in Columbia's "Blondie" films, is grown up now and goes under the manly name of Alexander. The latest Bumstead comedy is "It's a Great Life", now at the McCarthy Theatre with William Boyd in "Colt Comrades."

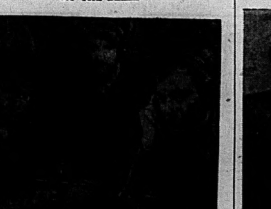
Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
Associated Press Sport Writer

New York, July 2 — (AP) — Maybe you think things are a bit dull in the sports line, but the word is that they're having a right good season in northern Africa . . . We have this straight from Ed Murphy, occasional contributor to this column and son of sports editor Jimmy Murphy of the Canton (Ill.) Daily Ledger.



V-Mail

"Probably the most interesting event yet pulled off in N. Africa, excluding Rommel's bicycle act," Vince writes, "was a softball game played recently for a $5,000 pot. It seems that a news story praising a club composed of a group of former Texas athletics played under the name of the 'Texans' was read by members of a mid-Western unit whose ball club is called the 'Omans.' The Texans claimed a prior victory over the Texans and allowed they could repeat. Upshot of the discussion was the decision that each team would wager 1,000 skins on a winner-take-all basis. Spectators of both teams were quick to collect funds to back their favorites and the game drew 3,000 fans. The Omans took the decision, 6-4."

Domestic Dept.

Gloria (Ummm) Cailen, the swimmer who recently turned pro now is reported listening to an offer to do a female Tarzan for the movies . . . Chet Clark in Washington collected his first PTI football squad for practice the other day, he told them, "We will have as many as 15,000 pass plays." . . . And in reply to a few skeptical looks, Clark insisted that with small scholastics he might really approach that figure . . . Since Pitt has only six veterans on the squad, the Panther station likely will be the play where the coach hurls his hats in his helmet and refuses to look until it's over.

AT THE BELLE

John Garfield, George Tobias and Harry Carey are shown in these roles as members of the crew of "Mary Ann," Flying Fortress whose exploits in the war of the Pacific are told in "Air Force," the Warner Bros. picture now at the Belle Theatre.

Newspaper Comic Strips

(From the Magazine "Time")

Whether U.S. comic strips are a cause or symptom of the mental and vexing question to conscientious parents. This week came a partial answer.

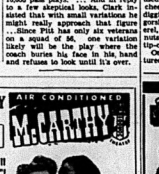
George E. Hill, professor of Education at Columbia University, New City, Iowa, diligently studied the comic strips. "If different daily newspaper comics (12 altogether) for a month. He did not study comic magazines, nor did he concern himself with the activities of comic-strip characters. He was interested solely in finding out how comics might influence a child's vocabulary. He found that:

1,302 different words were used in the strips studied. Nearly 80 per cent of them simple primary school words. Only slightly more than 3 per cent were slang, mixture, dialect or foreign words. The comic magazines the proportion is some 18 to 12 per cent.)

130 different slang words were used. Examples: bake, brazelnuts, chee, crackpot, darn, dawgoned, egotist, flabbergast, gal, gee-gosh, heck, haywire, holy-mack-erel, hyuh, janes, migosh, nope, sez, sis, tee-hee, tiptop, tip-off.

Onomatopoeic words (manufactured to imitate sounds) occurred 233 times. The most frequent ones: heh, haw, hey.

Only 10 words made use word distortions for definite purposes for the purpose of humorous spoonerisms, to convey the sound of a dialect. (Examples: Bewilderin' Jack and Popeye), a-gettin', a-lvin, a-tupert, fergit, mee (for me), sat, certingly, dawg (for gone).



Burlesque-type comics like Mickey Mouse contained more word distortions than other types (adventure, love, etc.). Of the strips examined, the one with the most distortions was Joe Palooka.

Wrote Professor Hill: "Much is said about the bad influence of the comics. . . . Unfortunately, a distinction is not always drawn between comic magazines and the comics of the daily papers. In my humble opinion, even the latter are quite harmless. . . . (I doubt) that any serious consequences would do any serious harm to a child's vocabulary attainments. Most of the words used would in fact, tend to help him build up cabulary meanings. We need to be much more concerned about the total effect of the comics and the attitudes and ethical concepts of the child rather than with the folk literature of the day. Their ethical significance is almost immeasurable."

STIRLING PAIR WINS PRIMARY BOWLING EVENT

34 Rinks of Men's Doubles Take Part in Local Tourney

Belleville bowlers had to be satisfied with runner-up positions in all series of their annual men's Scotch doubles tournament which ended Belleville Lawn Bowling Club greens on Dominion Day, as rinks from Stirling, Campbellford, Madoc, Brighton and Belleville competed, making a total of 34 pairs of men's pairs.

The Primary class, with which went the Robertson Trophy, was won by Stirling pair, Ross and Tompkins and Billie Whitby, with Dr. Grant and C. D. Clapp, of Belleville runners-up. In the consolation round the team of D. Millar and J. Watson, of Madoc were successful in winning the Dr. A. Phillips and top-flight honors, while again a Belleville pair was runner-up when W. Price and L. E. McLean bowed out to the Madoc team with a bitter struggle of seven. The Hard Luck round was won by S. Netley and A. McConnell of Brighton with Rev. Mr. Dills and Fred Harper as runners up.

President Cliff Argue, president of the Belleville Bowling Club and Eight Ford, games chairman, welcomed the visiting bowlers to Belleville and reminded all of the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club "Corbin Gold Cup" tournament here on Civic Holiday.

WRITTEN-BROWN BESSIES

London, July 2 (CP)—Sir Arthur Whitten-Brown, JP., who with the at Sir John Alcock in 1919 first flew the Atlantic from east to west, has resigned his commission as an R.A.F. pilot officer. In 1941 he resigned from the Home Guard, in which he was a lieutenant-colonel in the air force and train signalling him.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was eating her grapefruit at breakfast, and says to pop, Gin dear, William, I had such a swell dream. Bad dreams are even far from pleasant, when you cant quite recall the details, but I had this one just as I woke up, so it was practically a reality. I dreamed I was playing bridge and my partner kept leading ace after ace, just nothing but aces, and I kept thinking to myself, there are no rules to make bad matters worse I really could of followed suit every time, so I was adding insult to injury by constantly resigning. My partner was furious. He took cold suit for a drink. I never would of woke up. Oh dear, do you think it is a believe sign to start the day wrong than by wakening your self in fury over a dream. How is it some people always seem to have nightmares, or are rosy cloudy? I with I knew the secret, she said.

Cheer up my dear, you're lucky you didn't have my dream pop said. I was in the penitentiary, but it would probably of started the whole week wrong for pop, because I was were poring over great stacks of income tax blanks with fancy recipes, but every time you tried one and lifted the lid to see how it was getting on, law and behold it turned out to be liver and onions. Naturally if I couldn't help gloating, which made you even more hilarious, so in the end I was glad I woke up for your sake, he said, and you said, Now William if that's a deep bald scheme to get yourself liver and onions for the 3rd time in a week I'll be mighty put out. Failure, especially with my meat gravy, is an evil, love and behold it turned out to be liver and onions. Naturally if I couldn't help gloating, which made you even more hilarious, so in the end I was glad I woke up for your sake, he said, and you said, Now William if that's a deep bald scheme to get yourself liver and onions for the 3rd time in a week I'll be mighty put out. Failure, especially with my meat gravy, is an evil, love and behold it.

Oh well, it's taken your thoughts off your own troubles and transferred them to mine, and that's always more agreeable, but dont thank me, virtue is its own reward, pop said.

And he folded his paper and started to leave for his office laughing, and as said, Such a man. Meaning him.

JUNIOR HOLLYWOOD IN FILMS OF B.C.

Boys Only in This Venture But School Teachers Make It Big Feature

Hollywood, July 2—(AP)—Betty Grable will be a grandmother before she is married to bandleader Harry James, by Lou Lease, Hollywood columnist, and expectant herself as "so happy" over the prospect.

Washington, July 2—(AP)—Tokio Shimizu, a Japanese-American now employed by the U. S. war manpower commission, told the House Un-American committee today that he had been their companion on many a fearsome voyage. Ballou was a runaway on the ship of their dreams. Boys of Woodland school lived these dramas for the movie camera, and invited parents and friends in as the result on the silver screen.

There are 50 of these young actors. The oldest is 13. At the rate of two a year, they are making movies based on the early history of the North American continent. Their first picture, completed four, Columbus, Champlain, Balboa and Cortez. As students in the Woodland school, they combine their dramatic activities with the regular curriculum of education.

Each day may run into more than 200 scenes. Each must be rehearsed until it is perfected until all the actors' feet find instinctively the exact spot upon the set where they will be in focus. Costumes are mostly of paper, something comes out black and white in silhouette. Design is based upon accurate and its accuracy is the specialty of Mrs. Ivy Beckwith, a W. S. Shore.

Now the star system is discouraged here. No boy knows for certain when the call is assembled whether he will carry a spear or be cast as Nero. No one forgets his lines which are spoken in the language of the face, as though a sound-track was present. Their success is concerned chiefly with the pose of the head and the set of the body.

When this first film was shown at the Hall-in-the-Grove theatre it effected to distribute it, with any subsequent productions, throughout the United States. Three films are already in the hands of the distributors and the fourth, Cortez, is now ready for general distribution.

Except for a couple of scenes in the earlier films no girls have been required for the he-man romances chosen as themes. In the series of twenty-eight more films are contemplated—girls may be introduced if the story demands them.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

With the R.C.A.F., Somewhere in England, July 2 (CP)—Sgt. Tex Morgan of Shandro, Man., is looking for a return engagement with a Nazi plane. Flying Officer Armstrong almost downed his Moose Jaw opponent.

The fighter's shells smashed his nose through and he suffered three minor flesh wounds. His interpreter-gunner was wounded and his oxygen tube severed. Morgans' survival was described by the latter's pal, Dick Harrison of North Vancouver, as "another piece of a miracle."

The four-engined bomber was holed all over. Then, over land, Morgans had taken the brunt of the attack and it was with great relief that they heard him hedgehog away with his ace at the turret doors, blasted out of commission.

Jerry's cannon shells tore such a hole in the turret entrance door that before Ted could get back to it he almost fell through it into this air." Harrison related. "The port side nearly Ted suddenly of all was that his turret was so badly shot up he couldn't return fire. A Jerry shell blocked one of Ted's eyes and all the glass in the turret was shot away." One other member of the crew injured was Cpl. Glen Cowling of Toronto, who was caught by a piece of cannon shell when he had put down." Sgt. Reg. G. M. Goodman of Wellington, Ont., and Sgt. Navigator Bill Ledford, D.F.M., Saskatoon, were the other members of the crew.

It was an "all-radio" wedding at St. Mary Abbot's Church in Kensington, London, Flying Aircrew Jacqueline Mary Johnston of Winnipeg and Paul Johnson, formerly of Saskatchewan, and whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Johnston live in Edmonton, were married.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Johnston of Alton, Man., is attached to the radio division, R.C.A.F. headquarters in London and the groom is sound engineer with the West unit of the "Canada."

Flying Jack Peach of Vancouver, head of the R.C.A.F. Radio Division, has gave the bride in marriage, and during the service another member of the division, LAC. Ted Hockridge of Vancouver, sang.

Wing Cmdr. Douglas Bader, D.S.O., D.F.C. legless air ace who commands the R.A.F.'s Canadian squadron and who now is a prisoner in Germany, is having trouble with his "tin-pins"—the name is his own.

His mother said few lines have been seeing back-to-back and forward in an attempt to find some that suit him. "They even tried over the radio, Cmdr. Bader," but they didn't quite come off," she said, "Douglas is getting tired and he went out to him and I hope these will be successful."

Victory Gardens

I paid a dime for a package of seeds,
And the clerk tossed them out with a grin,
"We've got 'em assorted for weeds,"
He said with a smile on his lip,
"Peonies and poppies and asters and pansies
Ten cents a package! And pick as it pleases!"

Now seeds are just closest to the man in the store,
And the clerk says the things that he needs;
And I've been to buy them in season's before.
But have thought of them merely as seeds;
But it flashed through my mind as I took them this time,
"You have purchased a miracle here for a dime!"

"You're a dime's worth of power which no man can create,
You've a dime's worth of life in your hand!
You've a dime's worth of mystery, destiny, fate,
Which the wisest cannot understand.
In this bright little package, now at my feet,
You're a dime's worth of something known only to God."

— Edgar A. Guest.

The term "Victory Garden" originated in England after the first year of war, when it was found that the Government called upon all citizens to produce as much food for their individual use as possible. At first the people did not respond wholeheartedly; vegetables were still procurable from the markets and it was easier to buy the carrots, beans, peas and tomatoes than to grow them. Then, as it got out and labor in a garden plot at the end of the day, following the press, bomb-infested night. Then gradually gardens began dispersing from the green-grocers' shelves and many families found themselves with bare tables and applications for allotments in the "Digging for Victory" contests for Victory Gardens. Today they dot the countryside, suburbs and cities. These films and pictures of bombed-out buildings in the eastern part of the city.

The following survey of the Victory Gardens of Belleville and Trenton, deduced not along statistical lines, the number of crops, varieties of potatoes, total hills or potatoes planted, but how much pleasure and fun our gardeners are deriving from having a garden, the wishful thinking that goes into planning as to the lusciousness of their tomatoes and the delight and satisfaction they will realize, when their labors are finally rewarded.

First of the urban-farmers interviewed was Mrs. AUSTIN, at Cedar St. (retired) who said: "Gardening for me has become my favorite hobby. I own a home and enjoyed for years." When asked why he spread out newspaper on part of the ground beneath his tomato plants and beans, Mr. Austin said that so many different suggestions had appeared in the Garden Intelligencer about the value of various vitamins for making Victory Gardens flourish more abundantly, now and .. they'd better be good!"

London, July 2 (CP) — Randolph Churchill, the Prime Minister's son is a vice-president of the Oxford University Conservative Society, a new "party" formed "to unite the more progressive elements from every party and association."

Sir John Wardlaw-Milne, who led a parliamentary revolt against the Prime Minister a year ago, is another vice-president. Other members of parliament whose names have been associated with the society are Leslie Hore-Belisha, former War Minister; Capt. A. H. Cunningham-Reid (2nd. St. Marylebone), and W. J. Brown (2nd. Rugby).

The party's aims include: Radical reconstruction of M.P.'s of freedom of voting and the end of the power of party machines, and

End of collective cabinet responsibility and substitution of the principle of individual ministerial responsibility.

Coupled with this sign of independence, an outcrop of criticism voiced in the first half of 1943 has comparatively subsided since then, are indications that the House is settling down to the routine of war. Mr. Churchill's ministers.

Sir Walter Womersley, Pensions Minister, and Ernest Brown, Health Minister, have been subjected to attack from both sides of the House for what are described as "inefficiency" in their departments.

Brown, leader of the National Liberal Party is in the bottom watch and there are reports he may be involved in a cabinet reshuffle.

Six members, three Labor and three Conservative, tabled a motion declaring that the Government of health, housing and local government "has not given more urgent as the war continues, call for a drastic overhaul with the zeal and determination necessary to secure the preparation and execution of effective plans for now and the post-war years."

The Conservatives later withdrew their names from the motion and a counter motion according Brown the House's "warm support in the continued attention of his exacting responsibilities" was tabled, but the records still show there is considerable dissatisfaction with the workings of the Health Ministry.

Britain's newly appointed minister to Moscow, John Balfour, is an unorthodox diplomat who likes to work in his shirt sleeves. He is an able mimic, too, and his caricatures of Hitler are said to be so good as anybody's.

Slimy bald-headed and just under 50, Balfour went to Eton and New College and learned to speak and write most European languages during the First Great War, in a German prison camp. His appointment gives Britain both ministerial and ambassadorial representation in Moscow for the first time.

Major Henry Stockley, Knighted in the Birthday Honors list, took the unusual course of changing his name when he received his honor. Known all his life as Harry, he requested that he become officially Sir Harry and signed "Sir Harry."

A similar change was made some years ago when the late Sir Harry Stonor, Gentleman Usher to the King, changed his name from Henry on being Knighted.

Three male members of parliament and three women walked out on a BBC program they were invited to record. They were Leslie Burgin, Commander Stephen King Hall and Tom Driberg, and Edith Lee, Mrs. Mary Agnes Hamilton and Miss Ellen Wilkinson.

Said Miss Marchant, Daily Mirror woman columnist:

"We believed the program to be a discussion on the conditions in the people taking part had been packed with Labor supporters for varying political points of view.

"When we arrived we found the BBC had arranged a quiz, quiz on dates and facts, and was to be compered by Stephen King Hall, humorist stage compere ... following the BBC's policy with the producer we withdrew saying we could not take part as we had come under a false impression."

Lord Woolton, presiding over a press conference called to explain the Air Ministry's side of the queue-and confusion attendant upon the new issue of ration books, was confronted by a reporter bearing a live Moyhan mummy. He had been in a blackout accident the previous night.

The minister looked him up and down, then inquired:

"And did you get your ration book?"

ALLIES MENACE SALAMAUA FROM THREE SIDES

THREE SOUTHERN ITALIAN AIRFIELDS HEAVILY HIT

Maintain Pressure Also on Munda In Growing Offensive

U.S. and Australian Troops Join Forces To Squeeze at Both Ends of The Arc

ENEMY REALIZE PERIL

By C. YATES McDANIEL
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters, Australia, July 3 — (AP) — American and Australian jungle fighters menaced the Japanese air base of Salamaua on the northeast coast of New Guinea from three sides today in the growing Pacific offensive, while in the central Solomons, at the other end of a 700-mile arc, pressure was maintained on the enemy air base of Munda.

Today's communique from headquarters of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Supreme Commander of operations, reported the Allies had increase a juncture of Australian patrols from Mubo, 13 miles southeast inland from Salamaua, with the American-held Bobdubi Ridge area at Nassau Bay Wednesday. This completed the first phase of the new operations.

In addition to patrols south and east of that area, no other air or ground forces have been reported north of it in the vicinity of Salamaua.

Realizing the peril posed at Salamaua, which has a good airdrome within easy fighter range of Japanese-held New Britain Island, the enemy sent 24 planes against the Allies at Nassau Bay Thursday afternoon, the Australian communique disclosed without further elaboration.

No Change In Positions.

In the central Solomons, where the Americans have seized Rendova Island from which shore batteries started shelling the enemy Munda airfield and where the important new harbor of Viru on New Georgia was captured, no changes in positions were reported. Today's communique told of an air battle on Thursday over Rendova in which 14 Japanese Zeros and eight dive bombers were shot down at a cost of eight Allied fighters.

There was no further word of Allied naval action in the northern Solomons. Friday's communique had told of another unlit night attack on these positions on the approaches to Bougainville. Nor was there mention of any counter-action by the Japanese navy.

In Power Plays Role.

But the mighty Allied air force, whose widespread activity has been ingredient to the entire scope of the new drive, continued to play a major role, directing its keep Japan's plane concentrations at Rabaul and Kavieng, also, pinned to their fields, Allied heavy bombers pounded the Lae area and bombs there. That was, the third straight night of such attacks, and that during which the bomb weight has totalled 70 tons. Allied fighter raiders started fires and explosions on Vunakanau and Rapopo runways, fought off enemy interceptors in fierce anti-aircraft fire and all got home safely.

North-of Munda in the Solomons, medium bombers which had a fighter escort sank a 1,500 ton Japanese cargo ship at Bairoko anchorage.

Supporting ground action around Salamaua, other medium bombers attacked Japanese positions at Krisk Point and along the trail to Legui village, starting fires and explosions. They also silenced some anti-aircraft positions.

Acquire New Bases

For the second successive day the Trobriands and Woodlark Islands were not mentioned in the official communique, but a headquarters officer commented that in this case "no news probably is good news."

From this it was believed that those garrisons had been completed. No Japanese counter-attack whatever has been reported.

Acquisition of the Trobriands and Woodlark Islands, gives the Allies new bases with which to move their bomber line forward.

With fighters based on the Islands, bombers such as those that pounded Rabaul and New Britain another heavy raid yesterday could have flights over which they have not had thu, far.

GOEBBELS TRIES TO BE IRONIC AS JULY 3RD COMES

Axis Prediction as to Invasion Had No Basis, in Fact or Suggestion

AXIS VERY ANXIOUS

(By LYNN HEINZERLING)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, July 3 (AP)—Axis propaganda Minister Goebbels, in a heavy-handed attempt at ironic humor, used the Paris radio today for a series of reports of an Allied "invasion" army after flatly announcing that the Allies had not invaded.

The broadcasts apparently were designed to ridicule Allied plans of attack against Europe and, at the same time, to show that the Germans could be brought to talk about such matters.

At 7 a.m. the Paris announcer said: The hour of liberation is striking. Probably it will be only a matter of minutes."

The broadcast said reporters had been sent up all vital points to keep listeners informed on the situation "just in case the British should try to re-embark after landing."

Then the broadcast brought the word, "Somewhere in France" to announce:

"At 7 a.m. there is nothing to report for the time being. The Anglo-American forces have attempted anything before breakfast time."

Later broadcasts:

At 8 a.m.: "The British and American armies are still at breakfast."

At 9 a.m.: "We have just learned that the British and Americans have left the breakfast table. Further developments will be recorded duly."

At 1 p.m.: "Still nothing. Perhaps the English will have lunch first inlands later in the day. It must be admitted that it is lunch time now, but that leaves them one more hour."

At 1.43 p.m.: "Still nothing to report. It is probable that the Allies should keep us waiting a long . . . Well, let's wait a little more. They'll surely land."

Conceived in Goebbels' Mind

The July 4 date for an invasion was conceived only in the mind of the propagandist minister, and had utterly no basis in fact and no suggestion from the Allied press. One apparent reason for the German build-up of the fictitious date for an invasion was to bolster up the hopes of the millions of European conscripts and slave laborers. Besides, anticipations to be dashed in the disappointment.

On the Rome radio, an Italian military commentator said that Italy would defend her soil inch by inch, and that the European invasion "seems to have become a nightmare more for our opponents than for us." Germans, he added, do not to have made up their minds where and how they will land."

He said Italy had decided to sacrifice everything in "that fight for life and death," and added:

RUSSIAN TROOPS STRONGLY ATTACK IN SMOLENSK AREA

Nazi Forces Reported To Have Retreated To New Positions Near Dorogobuzh

HEAVY ARTILLERY DUELS

London, July 3 — (CP) — Russian infantrymen continued to pound away at German positions along the western front before dawn-break. The midday communique broadcast from Moscow and recorded here by the Soviet Monitor revealed today.

Although the war bulletin reported no essential changes the announcement said the Red Army, during in one sector of the front and the capture of another land mine detecting equipment in a surprise attack on another was partial confirmation of the Berlin radio admission that Nazi troops had "fallback to a strongly fortified new positions" near Dorogobuzh, 50 miles east of Smolensk.

On the Leningrad front Red army units killed 150 German officers and men and destroyed 19 blockhouses and five dugouts points by artillery-and mortar fire, the communique said.

Heavy Artillery Barrage

"The heavy artillery barrage touched off considerable fires in enemy positions and about 30 explosions took place, the report added.

Guerillas in the Kamenets-Podolsk area in the southwestern Ukraine mined a German troop train derailing the locomotive and six passenger cars, the bulletin said, adding that it took the Nazis three days to repair the line.

The guerillas immediately attacked, derailing the first train to leave after repairs were completed and destroying a locomotive and 15 cars.

The noon bulletin was silent on activity in the Caucasus valley of the western Caucasus where the Red air force has been ranging along the Taman peninsula and across Kerch Strait to pound at shipping and troop concentrations.

Goering Reported To Be 'Very Ill'

Stockholm, July 3 (AP). The Copenhagen newspaper Handelsoch Sjofarstidning, quoting what it said were reliable quarters, reported today that Reichsmarshal Goering is "very ill" and that Germany's breakdown is a serious heart trouble".

As late as last Thursday night, the newspaper said, Goering's condition was very bad and two specialists were called to his bed side. The newspaper added that his wife, Emmy Goering, was hurriedly called to day.

Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel was said to have represented Goering, the number four Nazi, at the session of the Reich Defence Council and it was recalled here that he has been out of the public eye for months. A substitute was said to have made the annual economic accounting recently, asserting Goering was too busy to do so.

Hitler's Arms Cities Steadily Crumbling, Ruhr Photographs Show

By ALAN RANDAL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, July 3 —(CP)— High over the smoking ruins of Ruhr industry Royal Air Force aircraft fly in daylight. They are the "eyes" of the R.A.F. Bomber Command reconnaissance planes.

They follow the giant bombers. And the pictures they bring back have been termed "the most terrible series of photographs of destructive power of the bombing airplane."

No picture taken of London during or after the blitz days was like these photos. The shots these reconnaissance craft bring back from Duisdorf, key city in Germany's great industrial valley, earned for that centre the newspaper description, "the dead city of the Ruhr."

Comparison pictures show a litter of wrecked and roofless buildings over an area more than two square miles. Some fires still smouldered, days after the attack on the industrial area. Block after block of buildings have been burned out, the blackened area, of debris mingled with whitened patches where heavy high explosive bombs removed everything standing.

Also reproduced in newspapers these first pictures of a four-figure bomb load on the heart of the city are frightening. As they appear under the all-seeing eye of the stereoscopic machine that brings the devastation into realife perspective, they are terrible and terrifying.

Duisdorf absorbed more than 2,000 tons of bombs on the night of June 11/12 at a cost of 43 British aircraft. The next night, Wuppertal, when the photographers went over it next day at 28,000 feet, the streets, many of them, appeared lifeless.

It is the same in other Ruhr centres, Bochum, Barmen, Wuppertal. It means Hitler's army factories in the area crumbling away one by one, their paralysis sown by the R.A.F. is moving in.

BRACKEN URGES RATIONAL SYSTEM SELECTIVE SERVICE

Terms Present Manpower Policy "Negative and Partisan"

SPEAKS IN TORONTO

Toronto, July 3 — (CP) — John Bracken, leader of the Progressive Conservative Party, last night urged a rational system of compulsory selective service for the farms, factories and forces. He termed the government's present manpower policy "negative and partisan" and suggested the home defence army of draftees be put to work in agriculture and industry.

Only in that way, "as you all know we have in Canada a citizen army—I am not referring to the reserve army, but to the active service, I am referring to the army, Mr. Bracken said, if more numbers of men who are under no duty or legal obligation to serve outside Canada. I found the question everywhere I have gone was it is this double standard of military service being maintained? Why is the army not drawn from the reserve for the tasks of the farm and the factory and then, if it is not, how is to be used where fighting must be done?"

Introduced By Drew

Mr. Bracken spoke after a four-month tour of observation across Canada. He was introduced by Massey Hall audience by Lt. Col. George Drew, Provincial Party leader, and Mayor Conboy, Drew's reputation "as the outstanding representative of Canadian Conservatism."

Mr. Bracken had planned a three-weeks tour of Ontario, but limited that to one day "under the circumstances"—obviously the Ontario provincial election Aug. 4—he would carry out his immediate engagements and postpone further visits until later. By that time, it apparent he will take no part in the provincial campaign.

In criticism of the home defence army, Mr. Bracken estimated the cost of this service at $150,000,000 a year and said that in the face of a labor shortage "the men are out of agriculture, out of industry, out of the war and out of everything but the public treasury.

"It is my conviction that this home draftee army is not only an injustice to the men, as they see it but it is the biggest hoax ever perpetrated on the public.

Claims Many Grievances

In his cross-country tour, Mr. Bracken said he found many grievances and problems in every community, among them, delays in wartime controls and rationing but he felt the people had a deep confusion and lack of understanding in directly attributable to the failure of the government to give direction, confidence and sympathetic leadership on certain of the main issues connected with the war."

He said the new policy of the Dominion government, having been "in too many of its aspects, prompted by political cowardice, political fear, political hope. Chaotic and wasteful conditions exist.

A waste of manpower and a shortage of manpower exist side by side in Canada, he added.

JUNE BOMB LOAD OF 15,000 TONS DUMPED ON NAZIS

Allied Air Offensive So Far in July is of Secondary Nature

RAIL TARGETS HIT

London, July 3 — (AP) — A record weight of 15,000 tons of bombs was dropped on Europe in June by American and British air forces, the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F., the air ministry announced today, but the Allied air offensive went into the third day of July with operations on a secondary attacks reported.

Reinforced central observers said a strong force of British aircraft, apparently including bombers, headed out across the channel last night, but there was no immediate authoritative announcement.

The German communique said Allied planes during Thursday dropped a few bombs in western Germany near the frontier, damaging some houses in Aachen, and reported that 414 Allied planes were destroyed over Germany and occupied Europe in June, including 408 four-engined bombers.

During daylight yesterday R.A.F. Bomber Command attacked enemy railway targets at Ghent and Courtrai, in Belgium, and Lille, France, and the U.S. Eighth Air Force reported shooting up 100 feet from an oil train and damaging locomotives.

German planes stabbed toward Britain in daylight for the first time in a week. The Ministry of Home Security said one was destroyed off the south coast.

So far this month, major forces of the R.A.F. and the Royal Canadian Air Lancasters have remained on the ground, except for the June 11/12 period of inactivity that prevailed for about a week at the beginning of June.

Devastation Spread.

Despite the late June start, bombing has devastated considerable more enemy Europe in that month surpassed any other planned devastation in world history.

Of the 15,000 tons of bombs carried in the continent by home-based British aircraft, the greater part was dumped on objectives in Germany itself. In seven assaults on the Ruhr valley alone, 10,000 tons were hurled.

Against the great devastation caused by these attacks, the R.A.F. in the continent by home-based British aircraft, the greater part was dumped on objectives in Germany itself. In seven assaults on the Ruhr valley alone, 10,000 tons were hurled.

Director of Civil Air Raid Precaution And Former Leader Of Conservatives

IN 62ND YEAR

Ottawa, July 3 — (CP) — Death has ended the distinguished career of Dr. Robert James Manion, Director of Civil Air Raid Precautions for Canada, former Conservative Party leader and member of the Federal Cabinet in three Conservative administrations.

Dr. Manion died suddenly at his home here last night in his 62nd year shortly after he had been stricken by a heart attack. He had been in good health until the time of his death and only three weeks ago had visited Toronto on A.R.P. business.

Survivors include his widow, the former Yvonne Desaulniers of Ottawa, whom he married in 1916, and three sons, James, Paul and Robert. Funeral arrangements have not yet been completed.

Today, messages from Canada's political party leaders and from others across the Dominion came in telegrams to Dr. Manion's home at his particular personality, hard work and administrative ability won him recognition as a statesman, surgeon, author and businessman.

Met Defeat In 1940.

Dr. Manion's two-year term as Conservative leader ended when his party met defeat in the 1940 general elections. He contested Fort William seat in Port William constituency, which he had represented in the Commons from 1935 to 1940. He submitted his resignation as party leader, retiring from political life.

In March, 1941, he was appointed to the defence department in consult with Canadian army authorities at Ottawa and determine in what way the military head could aid in the work of auxiliary services overseas. He was made honorary colonel. Last year, he received appointment as director of Civil Air Raid Precautions.

Dr. Manion was born at Pembroke, Ontario, November 18, 1881, son of Patrick J. and Mary O'Brien Manion, born Irish-Canadians. He moved later with his parents to Port William. He studied medicine at Regiopolis College and the University of Toronto, settling in Fort William as a practising surgeon after post-graduate work in Edinburgh, London and Dublin.

Biggest Offensive Action Staged By U.S. Bombers

400,000 Pounds Of Bombs Dropped on Lecce, Grottaglie And San Pancrazio

12 PLANES DOWNED

By STEPHEN BARBER
Associated Press Staff Writer

Algiers, July 3 — (AP) — Nearly 400 United States heavy bombers attacked all three air fields in southern Italy yesterday in the biggest offensive action yet staged by the four-engined craft from the Middle East, dropping more than 400,000 pounds of bombs on the Italian bases at Lecce, Grottaglie and San Pancrazio.

Lecce and Grottaglie are on the heel of the Italian boot. San Pancrazio is 35 miles north of Rome.

The lethal blow included high explosive, fragmentation and incendiary bombs, a United States communique from Middle East Headquarters announced.

Twelve American planes were lost in delivering the triple punch, this relatively small figure equalling the entire United States loses for the month of June in this area.

Twelve Axis planes were shot down out of clouds of Italian and German fighters that rose to challenge the bombers, the communique said.

Smoke Covers Field.

"At Lecce, bursts of smoke covered the field, indicating hits on dispersed areas," the announcement said. "Other hits were observed on hangars and runways. Fires were left burning behind the hangars and in the dispersal areas, a very large fuel fire was observed in the southeast corner.

"At Grottaglie, direct hits were scored on hangars and bursts were observed among dispersed areas. The dispersal area was blanketed with fragmentation bombs. One enemy aircraft was seen to explode and at least one other was seen burning.

"At San Pancrazio, the target area was well covered with bursts."

A New Phase In Air Scheme

Axis fighters trying to protect the Italian bases sought to bomb the American planes from above. Messerschmitt 109s dived through to attack, among them Messerschmitts, Focke-Wulfs, Junkers and Bombers.

A British communique said five Allied planes were lost during operations Friday, including the Flanders airfields.

NIXON DEFENDS WARTIME ELECTION

Holding of Such Follows Democratic Course, the Premier Says

Simcoe, Ont., July 3 — (CP) — "Let us not forget the sad fact that he was fighting for the Democratic party," Premier Harry C. Nixon in an address here Friday in defending remarks made by Mayor Conboy of Toronto, at a recent meeting in Detroit.

He was basing his remarks on a ballot poll which was taken in Ontario when he had nothing to do with the province. Such polls should be supervised particularly when they are taken and I had been discontrued and that he did not know anything about it. Canada by the United States but that he believed there was no difference between the two countries." said Premier Nixon.

Defending the holding of an election, Premier Nixon pointed out that nearly all of the provinces had held elections in the last wartime elections and other Allied Nations had done the same. He declared that they were only following the democratic course and that all of these countries could not be criticized for the holding of an election."

FUR COAT TAKEN FROM CLOTHESLINE

Something of a mystery surrounds the taking of a fur coat and a suit of Air Force clothes from the clothesline at the Burnham St. late yesterday.

At first the resident at the address reported the fur coat and suit stolen from the family clothesline. Later, however, the coat and suit were found abandoned in the brush at the eastern boundary of the premises. Why anyone would remove the articles from the line and then cast them aside is still puzzling the owners and police.

Mercury Failed To Reach 90 Deg., Just Touched 89.3

Despite the occasional thermometer climbing first above, then threatened to burst as the result of the abnormally hot weather of the week ago, the official marker at the Belleville Weather Office failed to reach the 90 degree mark, according to officials when compiling the June weather report.

Women's Volunteer Service Bureau For Work of Charitable Nature Will Be Established in Belleville

Sponsored by the Belleville Citizens' Committee, a women's volunteer service bureau will shortly be established in this city to act as a managing pool from which needed workers might volunteer for special work in the field of charitable nature.

Decision to set up the service bureau in Belleville came as the result of a conference held recently in Ottawa when delegates from all across the country met to discuss the program of the parent organization in Great Britain, known as the British Women's Volunteer Service, which will get to Great Britain for a period to be under the patronage of the Princess Elizabeth, it was intimated.

Delegates from Belleville to the convention was Mrs. A. H. Ketchen as representative of the Belleville Citizens' Committee. Upon her return from the conference Mrs. Ketchen pointed out that if the volunteer women's service bureau here in Belleville is to be successful it would be necessary for the co-operation of all the women's organizations in the city.

Plan of Volunteer Organization

Object of the plan, described by the officials as "a plan of volunteer organization" is to form a central organization through which every woman in Belleville will be effectively brought into every home in the city for registration and for information concerning them."

One phase of the service to be undertaken by the bureau would be the chanelling of expert workers into the fields where work was suited to their training. As an illustration it was pointed out that a certain women's organization in the city may have as members women who were experienced masterful cutters. However, the activities of the organization may have no call for such workers. Through the bureau, however, it would be chanelled to assist other organizations in the city that could use experience.

Mrs. Ketcheson will undertake the organization of the Belleville W. V. S. in the near future and interested parties are asked to get in touch with the organizations are invited to co-operate by contacting her, telephone 878.

THE WAR TODAY

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst.

This is the day on which the German controlled Paris radio has been repeatedly predicting would produce the Allied invasion of Europe but so far there is no evidence that in the future the Paris station scoffed at the Allies' reputation for intimidation by fear of what their plans had gone awry.

It was a patient effort to get out from under the forecast which the station had made—a gamble for a week.

Certainly prophecy is a tricky business, calling either for rash rashness or great cleverness. And if the Paris broadcast singled out July 3 as the approximate rather than the exact date it was presumably to avoid the charge of having missed the bull's eye completely.

Nevertheless it is a fact that the Allied Command would agree with Paris Radio that the invasion's zero hour will be very close to the zero hour across the Atlantic. A combined operation. As previously pointed out, Sicily is a key not only to big sister island of Sardinia might be coupled with that for a double.

Dispatches from Spain report heavy movement of Allied shipping, but very few troops. The movement of troops of transports are said to have cleared Gibraltar, and from there another sea stated to be arriving there from the Atlantic. A considerable Royal Navy unit, including the warship Nelson, and Rodney, has moved anchored in the Roadstead of The Rock. Meantime the Allies have destroyed another 20 enemy ships in the Mediterranean during the past week.

Sicily, Sardinia In Savvy Swain.

Both Sicily and Sardinia are particularly the former—have been blasted with bombs to a point where they are in dire straits. Sardinia, nearest to Italy and chief port of Sicily, has been pounded until only a handful expect that this big city is about "finished". The airfields of Sicily, which have given the Allies so much anguish during the campaign in North Africa, also have been blasted until the movement of Axis warplanes from there to Sardinia is said to have overtaxed forces possess supremacy in that theatre.

The Italian mainland, over the city of Messina, which is one of the most important Axis supply ports in the Mediterranean, has been once more torn to pieces—this time by bombs. It was revealed that it was devastated by earthquake in 1908 when 80,000 died. Today, when the Axis warplanes from there to Sardinia are covered by American forces possess supremacy in that theatre.

It was revealed that it was devastated by earthquake in 1908 when 80,000 died. Today, when the Axis warplanes from there to Sardinia are covered by American forces possess supremacy in that theatre.

British and American bombers have paid special attention to Axis communications in Sardinia as the railway junction with the mainland. Trains are forced to ferry the Straits of Messina, which at its narrowest point is only three miles wide. Naturally the Allies would need to sever this communication, to cut off the Sardinians and supplies, before attempting invasion of Sicily.

The Anglo-American forces are proceeding methodically with their preliminary bombardment of Sardinia, giving indication that they don't intend to be rushed. One wonders if the same procedure when it comes to invasion of the Italian mainland, if that should be attempted. With Sicily and Sardinia conquered, Italy would be cleared for bigger operations, but if these two big islands are the first objectives of the Anglo-American expedition quite likely will pause before entering anoth- phase of that attack.

STRAWBERRIES SELL AT 28 TO 30, SOME AT 35 CTS.

Gooseberries Offered at 15 Cents Box, Green Peas at 30 Cents

With district farmers claiming the season to be practically concluded, strawberries took another jump in price on the Belleville produce market Saturday morning and sold as high as 35 cents the box for best quality. The general bulk however, was offered at from 28 to 30 cents the box, with the latter price the selling price of 37 cents the peck.

Gooseberries were offered at straight 15 cents the box, while green peas held their previous level of 30 cents pint or 10 cents berry box for the unshelled variety. Carrots and onions were the only two fresh vegetables selling at a nickel. Lettuce heads sold at 10c and asparagus 20 and 25c per pound bunch, while beets were 40c peck.

Apparently as the result of meat rationing, vendors claimed that fowl and fresh eggs were quickly bought up. Eggs firmed slightly to 32c the dozen for fresh, while medium sized fowl were offered at 40c the pound and the mature fowl from 25 to 30c. Native turkey was offered at 44.50.

Fish were plentiful, white fish bringing 23c and a few lake trout the 40c pound.

Quite a number of farmers offered seed buckwheat for sale but the demand was slow as young pigs were scarce, only three lots being noticed. These were offered at the usual $7 to $8 each.

CIVIL SERVANTS WASH HANDS IN COLD WATER

Ottawa, July 3 (CP)—Pity the poor civil servant: from now on he washes his hands in cold water.

The government department has voluntarily discontinuing the use of hot water in Ottawa office buildings and government offices across the country are expected to fall into line.

And Coal Controller J. McG. Stewart in a Munitions Department statement commended this private business offices limit the heating of hot water "to a minimum for essential uses".

Germans Told to Call on Reserves Of Strength 'When Your Knees Weaken'

Stockholm, July 3 (AP). — The Germans were given a new set of wartime rules to observe.

Noting that the relentless pounding of Allied bombing raids is reducing the physical and psychological resistance of civilians, the Nazi health office has issued a brochure advising them what to do when "your knees weaken and your heart beats painfully against your breast with explosive force or jumps into your mouth."

Dispatches on the brochure, were received here today from Berlin.

It is necessary to call on "one's positive, reserve strength" during a raid in order to avoid losing "his head and becoming panicky, Dr. Schenk of the health office said. He described these reserves as "unbending hardness, fanaticism and glowing hate."

Liberals to Meet In Marmora To Select Candidate

The party convention for nomination the West Hastings Liberal Riding which is to represent provincial election will be held in Marmora village on July 14th, it was the information received from party officials this morning. The number has not at least four prominent Liberals of the riding in the field, but it is hoped before the convention as possible to have this reduced.

Most prominently mentioned for the nomination seriously contemplating to submit their names to stand for nomination are Col. Bonnar, Deseronto, mayor of Deseronto Township, and Frank Pollwell of Belleville. Col. Vandervaeter has had long experience in the municipal field, having spent years of his township for several years and is an ex-warden of the county. Mr. Pollwell, a Belleville auto accessory dealer, is a former member of the municipal council, being first elected three years ago.

Both West Hastings Liberals, who are mentioned as thinking of entering the nomination race, W. M. Gilroy of Coe Hill, prominent lumber operator, and Ernest Ellis, a general merchant, and Mr. Kenneth Crouch, drygoods dealer, of Tweed.

Storage Ticket Taken When Pocket Picked

Fearing that pick-pockets might utilize a motor car storage ticket stolen from him on the streets of Belleville, Kenneth Kennedy, Kennedy, 133 Prospect St., in Hamilton, drove to Belleville to report the stop delivery of his automobile which was stored at the Belleville here.

"I had my pockets picked by a thief on the streets of Hamilton and in my wallet was a storage ticket for my car, which I had left with the Riggs' garage. Will you please notify the police here to watch out and not make delivery of the car in the event the pick-pocket should attempt it?" Mr. Kennedy requested Mr. Kennedy. Naturally Belleville police immediately conveyed the message to the garage.

GOEBBELS TRIES

"It is reasonable to assume that the threat will materialize first against our country where they have their best troops and will make their first breach to invade Europe. Hard times are ahead for us and we undoubtedly will be the bloodiest front in the war," he declared.

New York, July 3 (AP)—The Axis disseminated this as Allied invasion day, but dawn broke over Europe with no immediate sign of such activity.

The Nazi-controlling Paris radio, which broadcast the word to Germans for a week only to back down quietly during the night, apparently suspended this morning's news broadcast after the first hour.

"The day of liberation has arrived."

The broadcast, recorded by The Associated Press, apparently was an effort to get out ahead of time. It hadn't been serious about the date, but it had announced that the day was approaching and had prepared the way for as to intimate that the BBC, and not the Germans, had first originated the prediction.

Actually the Nazis made no mention of such a date.

Nazis Counsel Side Anxiety

But even with such broadcasts, generally regarded in Allied quarters as crude attempts to chill information, the Axis couldn't hide the fact that anxiety for the period of uncertainty has produced in the European Nazi-Fascist camp.

Mussolini's long-suffering Italians appeared particularly nervous.

A dispatch reported to the United States office of war information said the Rome newspaper Lavoro Fascista had complained of a "suspicious" atmosphere and that the increasing number of persons confined in the asylums was evidence of the fact that sick persons are permitted to leave the asylums.

Five More Fascists Expelled

CBS quoted a London broadcast that the Italian officials have been expelled from the Fascist Party, including the director of the Milan metal corporation and two officials of the Italian ministry of arms production.

The Nazis were having continued difficulty with saboteurs, guerillas and other resistance groups throughout the occupied countries.

United States government Monitoring Service heard a Serbian language dispatch from Budapest,—to Axis-controlled newspapers—quoting the Bulgarian police had "uncovered hundreds of agents of terrorists attempting to damage industrial plants at Plovdiv, Bulgaria. The report said many were shot.

A group of saboteurs was arrested apparently at even more successful. The Nazi-controlled Kallundborg radio said the Danish broadcast heard by United States government Monitors that a munitions plant followed by fire caused "extensive damage" yesterday in Copenhagen, lumberyard. The broadcast added that "the perpetrators" were not found.

MEETING ON FURLOUGH AFTER TWENTY YEARS

Brantford, July 3 — (CP) — Petty Officer Reg. Jones of Brantford, a member of the Royal Navy, met his brother Sgt. Arthur Jones for the first time in 20 years when they both arrived here on furlough at the same time. They had last seen each other when Arthur left England for Canada 20 years ago.

Commit Truck Driver for Trial

James M. Cole, Turonio truck driver, was committed for trial at the next court of competent jurisdiction by Magistrate J. L. Lloyd Bailey when he appeared on a charge of dangerous driving. The charge arose out of a motor accident that occurred in the village of Frankford on June 17th when Cole's truck driven by Cole struck and killed 12 pigs owned by Gordon Thompson of that village. Thompson was riding a bicycle when the truck struck him while Cole was the civilian driver of a military truck in charge of supplies going to Toronto.

The accused man did not elect trial when arraigned before Magistrate Lloyd yesterday. R. D. Arscott, solicitor for" the defendant, asking that the case proceed at a preliminary investigation. Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan, K.C., then elected to proceed as the indictable offence and over four hours were occupied in the magistrate committed Cole for trial. The accused was later admitted to bail.

Chief Langton of Deseronto, and Traffic Officer Morden told the court of finding Thompson's body lying on the roadside at High-way No. 2 in Deseronto on June 17th. Cole was driving the military truck, driven by Cole, with a dent in the left fender and a blood were also found on the side of the truck. Evidence also indicated that the motor vehicle had been in collision with another car.

C. McKay, Belleville, testified as to the injuries sustained by Thompson which caused his death.

Mr. Frank Cushing, local barrister, was in court during the proceedings on behalf of Cole. The deceased man's family. Unless Cole elects trial by jury he will not be tried until next October, being the nearest date or a next competent jurisdiction court.

Investigate Cause For Large Number Of Dead Fish in Lake

Belief that dynamite is being used by unscrupulous fishermen to kill fish in Moira Lake, 20 miles west of here, has developed as investigation by district game wardens.

Fishermen are reported alarmed over the number of dead fish that are being found along the shores of the lake and have found that at the end of the body of water report seeing dozens of pickerel, pike, and muskellunge, dead, floating and washed up on the shore. The fish when first seen, appeared to have been dead only a short time and there were no marks of violence.

Arthur Pitts, resident of the power site near the lake, said in the past 48 years stated that his shore was covered with dead fish in greater numbers as high as seven and eight pounds. "In all my 65 years residence on the lake I have never seen anything like the present destruction," he said in a statement.

If the destruction of fish continues it is the belief that in a few years in restocking the lake will have to be resorted to and the district will have become useless as a tourist attraction.

Charges arriving at their outlay for the summer months have stated it necessary to kill off the fish and bury them. District Game Warden Alexander Mc Donald Made for the second time investigating the conditions.

The panoramic strip composed of the series of Dansebiet photographs is likely to become historic in that it presents technically the whole of the centre of the city and the surrounding district. Trainbusters

The railways of the world carry a vast amount of freight and passenger traffic and in wartime the volume is increased almost beyond measure. In the countries at war engines and freight and passenger cars therefore fill a great part in the national ability to defend and to attack. In Germany, a country which has been using her railways as ties for her control over overrun Europe, and to be able to shuttle troops back and forth if need be, feels the need of the railways as well as her canals and rivers and highways. On the seacoast her traffic is subject to assault by Allied craft which have proven very destructive to German convoys. Germany must depend on her rails to a large degree.

Now it is reported that the Allies are smashing at the trains, most vulnerable targets of the straight-shooting British, Canadian and American airmen and those of other Allied races.

These trainbusters do an immense amount of damage. The Huns are losing one hundred and fifty locomotives a month, hundreds broken by the weight of Allied bombing.

The volume of destruction poured down on the war industries of German cities is great and impressive and the raid on the heart of Germany is a blow which adds to the confusion and discomfort of the enemy. They can shatter the systematic movement of troops and freight and other things and have a paralyzing effect upon these arteries of the Hitler system.

The trainbuster serves to emphasize what the blockbuster has done, for it adds to the total destruction, to the irritation and unsettlement of the German people as the mighty blows fall on Hitler and his Nazi followers. It serves to show that in very truth the United Nations have the initiative and can mount the effect of the damage they do when and as they please. Its Allied strength in air is capable of so wide a range of effort in knocking out the enemy.

July Brings Summer Heat

That season of the year has come which stirs the imagination with the sense of freedom. No holiday in July and August is a natural desire for nature is benign. It is the opposite to winter and human beings like the opposite to winter. It is a time of intense activity in the country, the city boy finds himself in the rural parts, or wanders in the woods. People go to unusual and far away places for a change.

Longfellow caught the glamor of summer as he says:

"O summer day beside the joyous sea.
O summer day so wonderful and white."

All literature breathes the spirit of the summer season.

Christine G. Rossetti says:

"Before green apples blush,
Before grass is ripe, midsummer,
Why, one day in the country
Is worth a month in town."

No wonder the yearning is for the resort in the country, beside the lake or the stream of water.

Shakespeare speaks of "summer's parching heat" and then again he uses the word "summer" for the most cherished things of life when he says "thy eternal summer shall not fade." Another writer of that faroff day in the reign of Queen Elizabeth said:

"Then came the jolly summer, being dight
In a thick pleasant sawcie, colored greene.
That was unlyned all, to be more light."

That was Edmund Spencer, the author of "Faerie Queen," speaking.

Thomson in "The Seasons," pays this tribute:

"All-conquering heat, O intermit thy wrath!
And on my throbbing temples, potent thus,
Beam not so fierce! Incessant still you flow
And still another fervent flood succeeds, Poured on the head profuse. In vain I seek,
And restless turn, and look around for night;
Night is far off; and hotter hours approach."

"Oh, father's gone to market-town, he was up before the day,
And Jamie's after robins, and the man is making hay,
And whistling down the hollow goes the boy that minds the mill,
While mother from the kitchen door is calling with a will.
"Polly! — Polly! — The cows are in the corn! Oh, where's Polly?"

Bryant speaks of July in these words:

"The linden, in the fervors of July,
Hums with a louder concert. When the wind
Sweeps the broad forest in its summer prime,
As when some master-hand exulting sweeps
The keys or some great organ, ye give forth
The music of the woodland depths a hymn
Of gladness and of thanks."

This July started in with the inheritance of a cool end of June, following a hot spell, but July is warming up and bids fair to live up to the memories of July in other years.

The thousands of boys and girls, released from the classroom have turned their attentions to other things than texts and lessons with characteristic flexibility and without prompting are enjoying the pleasures and beauties of summer life in Canada. Those who are older and many no older are thinking more seriously and are doing something to help the nation at war.

The first few days of summer freedom are a form of rapture which cannot be recaptured at will for it is the outbreak of the sense of liberation at a season so suited to holiday experiences and adventures.

On Teaching History

(Rochester Democrat and Chronicle)

The perennial question of how best to teach history to children will remember it brought from various educators at a meeting of the New York Adult Education Council harsh words on the "dates and names" method of instruction.

"Our schools and colleges teach history to develop more effective and better adjusted citizens," said one. "That implies that we teach facts for understanding, not for memory details; we teach history for appreciation of the American ideals and traditions, not for irresponsible totalitarian 'patriotism' that ignores realities and is based in part on truths and untruths."

History instruction which merely puts names and dates together, according to another educator, tends not to make history more human but to make it more false."

It obviously adds to a student's background and interest if he knows, for example, whether Shakespeare came ahead of Galileo or whether Napoleon ante-dated the American Revolution or just when the chronological picture such American figures as Daniel Webster, Henry Clay and Andrew Jackson belong.

The main thing, we venture, is to make students feel history as a vast, moving drama, quite as fascinating as any drama enacted on the stage or screen; and, most importantly, to learn how the past helped make the present what it is.

The beloved of the Almighty are the rich who have the humility of the poor, and the poor who have the magnanimity the rich. — Saadi.

Pleasure is the flower that fades; remembrance is the lasting perfume.—Bouffiers.

NIGHTWORKERS' WIVES

A friendly correspondent writes
Of wives of men who work o' nights,
They sit alone the evenings through,
Nowhere to go and naught to do
By day a silence grave they keep,
To let their husbands get some sleep.
To put it mildly, 'tis indeed
A topsy-turvy life they lead.

When other couples seek a show,
'Tis off to work their husbands go.
How very strange their lives must be
His breakfast is her time for tea.
When wives are toasting breakfast bread,
Their men are on their way to bed.
What for the wives is midnight grim
Is time for lunch for Jack or Jim.

A woman must be very brave
For such a man to be a slave;
To swear to comfort and delight
A man who changes day to night;
A man who snores from eight to four,
And worse the hours he ought to snore!

Yet many men who lead such lives
Are blest, with most devoted wives.

Ottawa, July 3 — (CP) — Just to keep the official record straight, that Mirror code message around the new 12-sided nickels — "We win when we work willingly" — is there by "accident."

Or so says Superintendent R. A. Edmunds of the Royal Canadian mint, the man who ought to know. It just happened that when we were working out the new design we decided to have it in that code — and it came out that way in Morse," he said.

But there's another version of the story. It's to the effect that the mint wanted to put some kind of an inspirational message on the coin to build up the "V for Victory" symbol on the back. The difficulty was that the design of every coin is very minutely described in parliamentary statutes that leave no any unauthorized lettering.

However, each coin there's a row of small "beads" on both sides of every coin, just inside the slightly raised edge, and Mr. Edmunds said: "The beading is never mentioned in the proclamation for a new coin; I don't know why — it's just one of those things."

So somebody thought up the bright idea. Everything with the beading — and the dot-and-dash message was the result.

It's all a bit confusing, but both principals seemed content after their exchange in the House of Commons:—

War Services Minister LaPointe: "As the Honorable member indicating that the present Minister of National War Services is the one who gave out this report?"

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. Leader:— "All I can say is . . ."

Gen. LaPointe: "I hope he does not mean that."

Mr. Coldwell: "I'm glad the minister has said that he hopes I didn't mean that, because in effect I did mean that."

Gen. LaPointe: "In effect you are very much mistaken."

Mr. Coldwell: "I'm glad to know that, and I shall not say what I did."

Rev. Dan McIvor (Lib. Port William), at 76, has been spending a lot of his time playing golf lately.

It's not big league stuff. He plays on a wide lawn near the parliament buildings with the page-boy staff, between the afternoon and evening House sittings.

The other evening they didn't have a ball so what did they do? They all took off their shoes and socks and used them. They played a rugby ball.

There's nothing I like better," said Mr. McIvor, smiling broadly, "than running in the grass in my bare feet."

Miscellaneous intelligence: The average weight of a hog's liver is 2.18 pounds—and the man who first cut is L. W. Pearsall, chairman of the Canadian Meat Board.

It came out at a meeting of the House of Commons agriculture committee. Until recently the accepted figure was 3½ pounds but when a packer was recently found using much from every hog he killed he undertook to prove it couldn't be done.

The meat board ran some exhaustive tests and found what Mr. Pearsall called "some very interesting information".

Pop instance, there's no relationship between the size of a hog and the weight of his liver; and for some reason—he don't know whether it's due to the type of water they drink or what"—the eastern Canada hog has a bigger liver than one grown in western Canada.

"Oh, well," said Mark Senn, Progressive Conservative member for Ontario's Haldimand constituency, "they've got more gall out there, anyhow."

Tom Reid (Lib. New Westminister) and his bagpipes are back in Hansard again. The House was discussing British Columbia's Japanese problem and Mr. Reid was saying that Japanese born in this country aren't "truly Canadian".

"How ridiculous it would be to say that if a Japanese were born in Scotland he'd be a Highlander or a Scotsman?" Mr. Reid said, and John R. MacNicol (Prog. Cons. Toronto Davenport) couldn't miss the opportunity.

"It wouldn't be fair to the bagpipes, would it?" he interjected.

Mr. Reid, who talks with a broad Scottish accent, despite 34 years in Canada, let it pass.

Average Wages For Factory Worker In Great Britain

London, July 3 — (AP)—The average weekly wage for the British factory worker is $23.37 for men and $12.80 for women, a ministry of labor survey showed.

The survey was made among 4,500,000 workers in 20 industries, turning firms of all types.

Men's wages have risen 74.9 per cent and women's 80 per cent since October, 1938, according to the survey.

The average increase over five years ago was only 27 per cent, one official said, while the cost of living for the same period jumped 30 per cent.

The men in aircraft plants average $32.90 and are the best paid workers.

Coal miners were excluded from the survey, but a note in the Ministry of Labor Gazette showed that their average for six shifts was $24.40.

MORE SOAP CONTROL

Manchester — (CP) — Since soap rationing began there has been a big increase in the number of substitutes and soap savers, and Food Ministry tests show that some of them harm linen and silks, and control will be extended.

Dean Inge's View

London, July 3 (CP)—Rev. William Ralph Inge, former dean of St. Paul's Cathedral, says he believes the Allies will be "very sorry" after the war that they bombed the "beautiful cities" of Cologne, Lubeck, Naples, Genoa and others in Germany and Italy.

"By bombing of Malines and German towns it is military necessity I suppose there is no harm in that," Dean Inge wrote in the Church of England newspaper.

"But when I think . . . of the ruthless destruction of Lubeck and Malmo, of the Church of St. Gereon at Cologne, of the Museum at Naples, of Genoa and Palermo, Padua and Venice, Modena in the Emilia and Ferrara, Rouen and Palermo, I believe when the war is over we shall be very sorry for what we have done."

Wolf Squadron Downs Three Axis Crafts On Dominion Day

London, July 3 — (CP Cable) — The R.C.A.F. Wolf Squadron's Dominion Day score was three enemy aircraft shot down in an engagement with five Messerschmitt 109s during a fighter sweep over Northern France.

Squadron commander Wolf pilots are: Squdn. Ldr. Hugh Godefroy, D.F.C. of Toronto; FO. Norman Foster, of Halifax and FL. Sgt. Graham Shoulder of Chesley, Ont.

The three shot down by Shoulder was about to attack Godefroy when it was flown from below by the Chesley pilot who was flying immediately behind his Squadron Commander.

JUSTICE BY POST

London — (CP) — If British law courts adopt a suggestion of Herbert Morrison, Home Secretary, summonses for minor offences need not appear in court. Justice would be the plant to save time, man-power and expense.

NUGGETS OF KNOWLEDGE

"Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

Who said that?

It is widely attributed to either Thomas Jefferson or to Patrick Henry, generally to the former.

But it does not occur in any of the known speeches, letters or other writings of either of these two great lovers of liberty.

An earliest known occurrence is in an address delivered before the Massachusetts Anti-slavery Society January 26, 1852, by Wendell Phillips, and presumably he was the author of it.

The English name "Cheffrey" is correctly pronounced "JEFF-ry"; that is the way it is pronounced in Geoffrey of Monmouth," "Geoffrey Chaucer" and other English names.

In the desert areas of Arabia and the Near East, generally distances are not reckoned by miles but by weeks and sometimes days.

A quorum of the U. S. Supreme Court is fixed by statute at six, which is two-thirds of the nine members.

The term "moonshine" as applied to liquor did not originate in America. A dictionary published in London in 1785 defines "moonshine" as illicit brandy smuggled by night into England from France and Holland.

Although many persons of part Indian blood have served in the U. S. Congress, no full-blooded American Indian has ever been elected to either branch of the national legislature.

Many people seem to be under the impression that the "bobwhite" and the "quail" are distinct species of bird. "Bobwhite" is merely the common name for the native Americans quail, especially Colinus virginianus, or Virginia quail. The popular nickname of this bird was suggested by the male's note or call, which sounds something like "bob-WHITE." In the Southern part of the United States the same species of bird is widely known as "partridge," a name applied in the North to the ruffed grouse or American pheasant.

John Quincy Adams, the only President or the United States to serve in the House of Representatives after retiring from the White House, was known as "Old Man Eloquent."

It is supposed that low shoes laced or tied over the instep received the name Oxfords or Oxford shoes from the fact that such footwear was first made and worn at Oxford, England, in the early part of the 17th century.

I was an ARMY man myself

-so naturally my daughter chose the C·W·A·C·

I suppose every man who once marched to the unforgettable strains of "Tipperary" and "Over There" in the memorable days of 1914-1918, has the pattern of Army life—of "Reveille" and "Lights Out"—in his blood. It is so with me. Now that the same struggle is in progress again, I want to do my share but this time I cannot wear a uniform. I have no son to take my place, but I have a daughter.

My daughter! It was with mixed feelings that I listened when she came to me and said, "Dad," the Army is in my blood, too. You brought me up on bugles. I am the daughter of an Army Man, I want to enlist in the Canadian Women's Army Corps."

What could I say? Nailed by my own teachings. But I thought, "she is too young, too unprepared. What will barracks life do to her?" Thank God, I kept my doubts to myself.

Today she is thriving—the bonniest sight imaginable in her trim C.W.A.C. uniform. She has found the life she loves, friends, who have won her affection and the inspiring leadership of officers who have her wholehearted devotion. Her welfare is safeguarded—by wise supervision, by careful guidance.

Believe me, I am proud to see my daughter in the uniform of the Canadian Women's Army Corps, now that I know what is behind that uniform. I am proud to call her "a chip off the old block."

WEDDINGS

DeCARLO—BALDWIN

A very pretty summer wedding took place at St. Gregory's Church, Toronto on Saturday, June 26th, at ten o'clock when Doris Ruth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Baldwin of Borland and the late Mr. Baldwin, became the bride of Lieut. Edward, son of Mr. and Mrs. Decarlo of Belleville, a member of the R.C.O.C. in Kingston.

The ceremony was performed by the Reverend Father Meehan. The church was tastefully decorated with pink and white peonies for the occasion.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Dalp Baldwin, looked lovely in a street-length ensemble of white chiffon with bolero jacket and cuffs and white accessories. She carried a bouquet of roses and fern.

Her only attendant was her sister, Gwen Baldwin, wearing an ice blue chiffon with flowered applique trimming and white accessories. She carried a bouquet of pink carnations and peonies.

Mr. Joseph Lupenette acted as groomsman.

Following the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was served at the bride's home with the bride's mother in about thirty-five guests. Amid showers of confetti and best wishes the happy couple left for Ottawa. The bride chose a beige silk jersey suit with brown accessories. On their return they will spend a few days visiting relatives and friends at Chippewa and Belleville before the groom returns to Kingston.

The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl necklace and wrist watch, also covered prayer book; to the bridesmaid, a gold locket and to the groomsman a gold tie pin.

ZUFELT—FREECK

At half-past three o'clock on Saturday afternoon, June 26th, at St. George's Anglican Church, Oshawa, Rev. J. Anderson solemnized the marriage of Miriam Elsie Freeck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest J. Freeck, to Warrant Officer 1 James Davis Zufelt, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond L. Zufelt of Belleville. Mrs. A. G. Baker presided at the organ and Leading Aircraftman John Burke, R.C.A.F., was soloist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attended by Mrs. F. C. Wall, as matron-of-honor, and Miss Dorothy Zufelt, as bridesmaid. Flight Lieutenant Alfred Breault, R.C.A.F., acted as best man and Mr. John Zufelt and Mr. Robert Zufelt ushered.

White satin styled with an inset yoke and waistline of lace in match the inserts of lace in the full skirt, was the gown worn by the bride. Her finger tip veil was arranged from a headpiece of orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of butterfly roses and baby's breath.

The matron-of-honor was in a pink sheer frock with a shoulder-length veil held in place by a Juliet cap and Briarcliffe roses completed her attire.

Turquoise blue was the shade of the sheer model worn by the bridesmaid. Her veil was also shoulder-length, arranged from a Juliet cap, and she carried a bouquet of Joanna Hill roses.

Jean Dickenson, Radio Star, Heard By I.T.S. Personal

During the noon hour on Friday, Miss Jean Dickenson, popular soprano of radio and screen, entertained officers and men of the I.T.S. Personal. Miss Dickenson was appropriately dressed in an attractive suit of navy blue. Following her rendition of four songs, "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi," "Carnations," "Mother Machree," and "Annie Laurie," which Miss Dickenson sang in the Bridge, she was presented by the personnel of the station "entertainment" badge, in recognition of the service Miss Dickenson has rendered to the station and to the "singers" themselves. Miss Dickenson was introduced by Rene A. J. Soucisse, Commander, O.B.E., who at the completion of the presentation offered the thanks of the whole personnel to Miss Dickenson for her appearance at the station. Miss Dickenson, in her turn, told the boys that Miss Dickenson's interest in the armed services was the fact that in fact both her husband and father are in the United States Army, the former having fought with the Americans in Tunisia. Probably the most authentically accepted number of the program was "The Last Spy." After the concert Miss Dickenson was the guest of the station at the officers' mess. Later in the afternoon Miss Dickenson flew at Trenton Airport and No. 5 A.R.D.

Colors for All Types

Gene Tierney likes to wear vivid colors.

By HELEN FOLLET

It is a mistake to have fixed ideas about colors. It is a mistake, in fact, to have fixed ideas about anything. When ideas are fluid there's a chance of hitting upon all manner of new notions in dress and make-up. Few women are so attractive to the eye that they can't be made lovelier.

There are women who are keen about grey which, unless it is a soft dove tone, is the coldest and least flattering of all colors. They run it a close fourth. Frocks, hats, coats drains the complexion of color-ing, is particularly trying when the hair is white. If only they would go in for something gay now and then, a bright plaid or print with splashy flowers! It would make them right out of the drab class, place them among the picturesque.

There are the brown girls. Mama made them wear brown when they were little and they've followed right along the same track. This happens to many redheaded duckies. Brown does not offer enough contrast to their russet-red hair. A black gown, combined with vivid lip stick, will set them on their beauty toes. Jade green is wonderful for them. Navy blue is good. Why, in heaven's name, must it always be brown?

Brown Eyes and Colors

Some of our girls with silver-brown eyes go in for lavender. All right, let them. But why not Just navy blue, old rose, soft beige? Brown-eyed girls look adorable in almond green with brown accents — green frock, brown shoes, brown hat, brown belt and purse.

choral reading, rhythm band and a marionette play entitled "Pioneers O Pioneers," all of which were part of the students' regular work during the year.

At the close of the festival a pleasant surprise was tendered Miss Keene. She was given a seat of honor and an address of appreciation and advice for the future of the scales by brisk rubbing of the skin, then with a silver pie-plate and another scaling of the ointment is applied to the scales. HEALTH CHATS

DR. HERMAN N. BUNDESEN
President, Chicago Board of Health.

Treatment Cures One Out of Six Sufferers from Psoriasis

Psoriasis, one of the most troublesome skin diseases, is not a serious disease. It causes the sufferer much itching at times. The rash is made up of large red patches covered with scales, usually on the elbows and knees. When the scales come off little fine bleeding points remain.

Many forms of treatment have been suggested. However, Dr. Paul A. O'Leary thinks that the treatment he employs will get rid of the rash at least for the time being, and may permanently check the disorder in about one out of every six cases.

The treatment Dr. O'Leary uses consists of the employment of coal tar ointment made up of coal tar, zinc oxide, cornstarch and petrolatum. In addition, he applies ultraviolets ray treatments, ointment baths and a form of treatment called autochemotherapy. In carrying out the autochemotherapy a small quantity of the blood is taken from a vein in the arm. Then this blood is divided into two parts, one part injected into each buttock. This injection is repeated three times at intervals of two days.

On the first day of treatment all of the patches of psoriasis are covered with the coal tar ointment, left on overnight. The next morning, the ointment is removed, and the patches exposed to ultra violet rays. A thin film of the oil is left on the skin. Just why this helps is not known, but it seems to be of value. Then the patient is treated with ultra violet rays, through the film of oil. This film is removed by a second bath, then the time of exposure gradually increased from the ultraviolet light is used to produce a mild redness of the skin.

After the ultraviolet light treatment, the patient spends from a half hour to two hours in the actinal heath. The temperature of the water in the actinal bath contains a cupful of oatmeal for each gallon of water. This bath loosens the scales and allows for the removal of the scales by brisk rubbing of the skin. Then comes the salve and another soaking of the ointment in the bath tub. The fifth night a second coating of the salve is put on over the first one. The patient wears cotton underwear or the patches are covered with gauze to protect the bedclothing.

If the psoriasis is present on the scalp, instead of the coal tar ointment used on the body, one made up of salicylic acid and ammoniated mercury is used daily.

In 3,000 patients with psoriasis studied by Dr. O'Leary one out of six was permanently cured of the disease. In another one out of every six the rash returned within two months after treatment. A second course of treatment again got rid of the condition. The others were not relieved for any very long period after the treatment is said, is easily carried out and causes no complications.

Interesting and educative reports were given by Mrs. Cyril McMullen and Mrs. Murney Jeffrey of the W. A. convention held recently in Belleville.

A letter was read by one of the members from Mrs. Johnson, wife of a former pastor; the Rev. H. R. Johnson, in which she expressed deep gratitude for the remembrance sent her from the Aikens friends.

Mrs. Johnson told of her plans in going to Toronto where she will make her home.

Readings were given by Mrs. Cecil Brickman and by Mrs. O. Pearson.

The meeting was closed with an hymn, the National Anthem and the Benediction, after which a social hour was spent. Mrs. Moon served a lunch in the tweety birds and the children present. An offering was taken for the W. A. and for the Red Cross.

A Carol of Consecon Lake

They may sing of the Lakes of Killarney,
Of the locks of stern Jessie's shore,
Of the Isles of the Bay of Fundy,
Or Niagara's thunderous roar;
But I know of a lake that's better
Like a gem on earth's broad breast,
Where the wild duck and the loon make
That soothing a wee babe to rest.

In the spring when ice-fetters are loosened
And the water once more are free,
We hear through the evening stillness
The strains of the frogs' orchestra;
And in summer the pangsuous breezes
Of the west, on the shining sand
Seem to wave us away in spirit
To dream of an unknown land.

The swallows that skim o'er the waters,
The mists on the pebbled beach,
The orbits in orange resplendant
Of the sun's farewell shallows each,
The milk-white waves lilies
Nodding their heads in gold,
With the sun on the shining water,
Make a picture to hold and behold.

For it's the distant future
My steps should be far away,
When then dreams I shall wander
When once I was wont to stray;
And again I shall see the picture
Of the lake in the valley below,
And the music of wind and water
Will gladden my heart once more.

—Helen B. Anderson.

The beauty that nature has so lavishly bestowed on the north of Prince Edward (and shall we not say the Highlands of Ontario?), although common-place to the life-long resident, is beginning to attract the tourist. When the summer heat becomes unbearable in the city, a haven of rest is found by our lakes and streams and shores. And of the beauty spots, because of it, Consecon Lake is rejoicing in its share of summer guests. For on the shores of this inland water nestle numerous summer cottages which afford a restful holiday to the summer tourist.

On the Jones' and McConkey's shore are several cottages and further down is a sylvan setting nestles the summer home of F. S. Anderson, of Belleville, where Mrs. Anderson and her friend for August when the "put-put" of his motor boat breaks the morning stillness. A commodious cottage nestles among the trees gaining an opening into spacious grounds, in which, during the month of August are flourishing in the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. I. Tuck and daughters of Toronto. Here the recreation is enjoyed for Mr. Tuck is a teacher in one of the Toronto High Schools. And since the scarcity of farm help is in vogue, Mr. Tuck joins the hay harvesters in their heavy tasks.

A cottage on the Davern farm sometimes becomes quite crowded guests but more frequently provides a quiet resting place for Mr. and Mrs. Davern and Mary, of the routine of business life in Wellington.

A cottage on the J. Root farm is rented and affords a delightful home and holiday last summer for Alfred Hall and family.

At the head of the lake is a new and attractive cottage, containing four fine, well-furnished cottages. This is a new enterprise for our progressive farmer, Mr. Wilbert French, who owns and operates the local dairy. Among those who include Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Chase and Barbara, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Mrs. F. Sprung, Belleville, and Mr. and Mrs. Percy White, and family of Wellington, with guests from Hamilton expected at the weekend. With this list available, fishing is enjoyed.

From my kitchen window I have a view of the blue waters of the lake, its surroundings through the green foliage of the trees that border the shores. And above, the blue of the summer sky with clouds though not of the heaviest, several airplane drones overhead and shatters the morning quiet but the birds are certain of their possibility, and summer reigns again at Consecon Lake with all the old-time glamor and enchantment.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Proper Check Signature

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. How should I sign my name in a check made payable to a firm? I have been signing my checks Helena M. Smith, and then writing "Mrs." in parentheses after my name. Is this correct?

2. What is the correct form of name for a married women to sign L. s a business letter?

3. I never use my maiden surname in my signature. Is it considered "nicer" to do so?

4. I never seem to know how to avoid using "I remain" in the ending of a letter. And R never sounds right.

R. R.

1. To all checks you should sign your name as you registered your signature with the bank when you opened the account. The following are correct forms of name for a married woman to use when she signs her checks: (1) Helena Martin Smith; (Martin being her maiden surname); (2) Helena M. Smith and (3) Helena Smith. It is correct too, though not customary for a woman to drop her maiden surname; and to use the initial of her middle name, Elizabeth for example; Helen E. Smith. She should decide on which form of name she wishes to use and always use this name on her checks, without writing the "Mrs." anywhere in the signature.

2. As your direct signature use the form of name you prefer to use the forms suggested above and then, for identification or information for the name to be used on the answer to your letter, write your formal name in parentheses under your direct signature. Like this:

Very truly yours,
Helena Martin Smith
(Mrs. John Smith)

3. Although customarily a woman retains her maiden surname in her informal married name, it is entirely a matter of her preference. (Usually if she's proud of it, she uses it!)

4. I agree wit'; you that "I remain" always sounds stilted, leaves a weak last impression to a letter. It's what a friend of mine calls "machine-made ending to a letter." If I were you, I'd give up the habit of using it. Here's a "first-aid"; avoid using an ing word, and use a sentence instead. For example:

Thank you very much for your courtesy,
Very truly yours,
Helen Martin Smith
(Mrs. John Smith)

When to Wear "Whites"

1. Will you please tell me what is the earliest date on which it is proper for the groom to wear a white linen suit? 2. Also would it be proper for the groom to wear the white linen suit if the bride wears a white satin dress and a veil?

W.

1. The date on which the groom may properly wear a white linen suit anywhere depends on the weather! However, even with the normal expectancies of weather in your and most other parts of the country, the well groom would have to be foresighted enough to have an alternative suit ready if the weather should decide to be "inappropriate" for a white linen suit.

2. For a semi-formal wedding, the bride may wear a floor length dress of satin (although a more informal material would really be more appropriate) and a short veil and then, for summertime, the groom might properly wear a white suit or white flannel trousers and a blue coat.

Courtesy Tip

If you are the host or guest who isn't invited again, you'd better get busy and do a penetrating X-ray job on yourself to see why. This self-examination, if honest and penetrating, may be the most important turning-point in your life, turning confusion, folly and joyously toward a more graceful design for your thinking, living, and therefore toward your greater popularity.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Maxim About Love Triumphing Over All Proves Untrue by Angry Mother

In courting a girl, we've been told that perseverance is like the steady dropping of water on a rock; in time it wears away the resistance.

But in the case of Private B, we have an example that in love, as well as other things we may encounter drop in the aint of which maxims are made. Here's the story:

Miss B., a charming young woman (we have his word for this) became engaged to a gallant soldier, Private B., with the distinct understanding imposed by Miss B.'s mother, that they were not to be married until the end of the war. But Private B. found the condition worse than the war. So he polished up the old saw concerning the magic of perseverance, laid in a stock of nickels and proceeded to lay siege to the heart of Miss B. by telephone.

Miss B. was reliably reported to have answered his pleading with a firm negative for the duration of 139 telephone calls, paid for by nickels in the slot and amounting to a grand total of $6.95. Then she said the war did made, it appear the copp-bock maxim was wrong way resistance and rocks was exactly right.

However, there was a 140th call, made by Miss B.'s mother. She announced no wedding bells would ring. And that the parents of Miss B's number would be in vain. for Miss B. could not come to the telephone to speak. That was that.

The engagement of Private B. and his telephone siege of his fiancee sends into the discard another fallacy that "all the world loves a lover," for Miss B's mother felt the exact opposite toward Private B. She was real good and mad.

My sympathy is decidedly with Private B. Particularly because the majority of men would have felt scared after footing perhaps eighty or ninety nickels into the slot. But Private B. is a man among men. He didn't prepare to spend every nickel in circulation.

It's too bad he was ringing the wrong number.

School Farewell Entertainment Held

Marking the close of the school term for summer holidays, a farewell entertainment was held at the Continuation School, sponsored by the students of the school. A presentation, on behalf of the teachers and students was made to Mr. Raymond C. Bowen, who has loyally served as a member of the public school for the past five years and who is now leaving to take up duties as principal of the Consecon public school and who will take charge after the holidays. Mr. Bowen will be greatly missed, not only by the students' and school staff, but by the entire community.

A program consisting of the following is as follows: Mr. Edward Rubble, reading of "Coronation; "O Canada" by the entire school; community singing; the chairman's address; duet, Misses Mae Miss Ida Bull and Miss Betty Walker; a vocal solo by Miss Eleanor Fox. The presentation was then made by the Misses Wanda Kinn, Betty Walker and Eleanor Fox, Mr. Bowen receiving an address, which he read himself. Another presentation was made by Mr. Austin Leavitt and Miss Elaine Bills to Mr. Bruce Carscallen who is also leaving to take up duties elsewhere. He was presented with a lovely brief case. Both teachers, though taken by surprise, responded feelingly and with enthusiasm for the gifts, and the social evening. In closing, the National Anthem was sung.

Thought Frail, Soldier Passes Thru Odyssey of Trials

Camp Stewart, Ga., July 2 (AP)—His commanding officer thought Pvt. Andrew J. Capaches was too frail for anything but limited service in the United States army, but changed his mind when he learned that: in the past four years Capaches, a former member of the Greek merchant marine, has been on three torpedoed ships, twice tossed adrift in the Atlantic, once for sixteen days in an open boat in a storm he men died, again when he used the body of a dead man as a raft for three days; he was interned in North Africa for fifteen months, escaped and rode in England and was wounded in the hand by shrapnel at Dakar. A native of Pinnacles, Pa., he weighed 165 when the war started, lost 65 pounds, is up to 138.

There are no BOMB CRATERS in our fields . . . YET!

THESE are grim and dangerous days, grimmer and more dangerous than most of us realize. While a ruthless enemy is bending his best efforts to destroy our vital food supplies, we can still peacefully carry on our duties on the farm. We must make the most of our time, putting every available acre of our fertile land to work, to produce FOOD for our people, our armies and our allies.

FOOD IS VITAL FOR VICTORY

You may be a school teacher, or a student, you may be a business or professional man, office or factory worker, store keeper or clerk—no matter who you may be, if you have a few days, weeks or months of leisure this summer, you can make an important contribution to Canada's war effort by taking temporary work on a farm. It cannot be sufficiently emphasised how urgently the Nation needs additional farm help, YOUR help, to meet the ever increasing demands for FOOD. Every year Canada sends millions of pounds of food to feed our kinsmen and allies abroad, and with many thousands of our people in the fighting services and the war factories we ask you to help fill the gap. Knowing how our very existence depends on victory, and how much depends on FOOD to win that victory, we appeal to you to lend your willing aid.

This is what YOU should do . . . ACT NOW!

Completion of Triple Schedule Finds Two Teams in Each Group Tied For Top Position in Loop

Reliance and Flyers Are Knotted in Group 'A' and 'Marines' and Juniors Tied in Group 'B'

WILL TRY AGAIN

(By K.J.C.)

When it come to pinkhama, trule the Belleville Softball League is produce the No. 1 headache.

Two weeks ago Skipper Harry Knott and his cohorts stumbled (?) upon a theory whereby they thought all their troubles were over. The answer was (they thought) an extended series to decide play-off positions. Today they are little further ahead than a fortnight ago.

True enough the extended schedule eliminated the Stephens Athletics and "Marines" from first place in the Association. That settles it, and the Marines are still in the picture with Reliance and No. 3 YTS. "Flyers" all tangled for the top slot in their section. But that isn't all Percy Knott has to worry about.

Last night Bristol Aircraft downed the Army Navy Juniors 9 to 7 to create a tangle for first place in the Association's "B" series while the "Flyers" trounced the Marines 10 to 1 to move into a tie with Reliance for the leadership in group "A". Sooth tangles just shouldn't be, but apparently Belleville's softball picture of 1943 can't be untangled and that is going to only saw-offs on Monday and Tuesday will tell the tale.

Folks, the whys and where-fores of this will tell. It is merely a perverbial conundrum. Today we find Reliance and No. 3 YTS, "Flyers" all even after a triple series in one loop, while the Bristol Boys Club can claim the Bristol boys for being in the same position in the Junior series. And with the Army Navy kids on the top perch. Thee Will rule.

Exactly what is in the offing only time will tell. It is suggested that Reliance and Arch Green's "Flyers" saw off Monday eventide with Red Townsend's Juniors duplicating the picture on Tuesday, but don't let this suggestion get you away from the present conundrum that even Blackstone, the magician, would have little part in his efforts to entertain the public.

Now take for instance last night. Skipper Green's Flyers went out and gained a measure of batting advantage of two runs and literally coasted into a 7-1 win over the Marines who best player was Jim Hunter, pitcher and one of a trio of strike fanners on the Flyers' burlet, was taking little chances and fired a five-hitter to assure the winners of the top-rail standing and even helped his own cause with a fifth inning triple to clinch matters.

In the nightcap Wilf Laichford's Bristol nine moved into a four run lead in his initial frame and were never panicked by the Army and Navy kids to ultimately win 10-7 to drop the Juniors into a three spot with the local Foundry nine. Bob Burton on the Bristol mound stopped his former team mates for six frames and then Connie Harris went to bat in his stead and added four extra bases, that a double in the first inning had started.

Despite the fact she was hit hard by Sargent Joan Gray, Pte. Jones, Eve Reid for the losers turned in a fairly good game, striking out 13 batters but mitigating her efforts by issuing nine walks, seven of which helped to push into runs. Doolittle struck out six and walked four.

On the whole it was a rather disappointing 17-11 count, that accounting for the full two hours, that it took the Army and Navy Juniors to nings in. Two bits of sparkling defensive play by Sgts. Gray and Sargents who pulled off the only double play, while Pte. Jones also turned in a really good defensive effort around the second sack. They finished off the affair with only eight players as Donovan hurt her ankle trying to field a hot one, forcing up to take a fly ball and had to be helped from the field. Line ups:

Army and Navy local lassies lost to the "Some her gals" while Spike Fryke's local league leaders won 10-4, but not before they had to call back into it by praise of the hurting they faced at Bristol's hands. Rapp, 2b and Doolittle, p.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON

London, (CANA)—Britain, generally speaking, Britain's post-war sport problems, and plans for settlement of many problems before things are normal. That means that, too, for we will have to approach them, but there certainly won't be a dearth of up-and-coming sports when the troops come marching home.

Just for example, the National Boxing Championships of the Air Training Corps have taken place before a packed house at London's massive Albert Hall and the boys in the ring, ranging in age from 13-17, were surprisers all. some 200,000 were surprisers all. some 200,000 competitors in all parts of Britain. Perhaps some of the world's future fight greats were on display—certainly there were some future outstanding professionals in the bunch — but anyway the standard of boxing, in the opinion of experts, was high.

Most outstanding performance was that of Stanley Woodcock, a London cadet who had been boxing less than six months. The pale-faced lad, showing amazing ring-craft and a natural boxing ability, won the 112-pound senior title and went on to take the national crown.

Auburn-haired flonnie Mulr, 17-year-old from Aberdeen, won the crown's favorite because of his ability plus an ever-present smile. Ronnie was the 108-pound champ-title by beating 16-year-old Billy Howlett of London in the final bout of the lot. Billy, a protege of Dave Crowder, former British light-weight king, received a trophy as the best loser of the tourney.

The 64 finalists stepped through more than 24 hours of continuous boxing before a distinguished gathering that included Lady Sinclair, wife of the air minister, Capt. M. N. Balfour, undersecretary of state for air, and the Duke of Hamilton, known in his younger days as the "Boxing Marquis." Also present were high officers of the Royal Air Force and officials of the A.T.C. an organization to prepare air-minded kids for entry into the R.A.F.

High praise for the boxing ability of A.T.C. boys comes from Matt Wells, winner of Olympic Amateur Boxing Association lightweight titles just before the First Great War. Matt is a boxing instructor for the cadets. "These youngsters are far in advance of the boys of my youth," he said. "Many of them reveal uncanny boxing skill and intelligence."

Matt, a fellow with a sense of humor, likes to tell the cadets of his first lesson of discipline. It came, rightly enough, from his mother. The night after he won the Londale belt in 1911 his mother remarked with him for staying out until the wee hours.

"I'm going to do just what I like now that I'm champion," Matt replied. The answer to that was a slap across the face and he was dragged by a ring his mother wore. "My opponents hadn't inflicted a bruise, but my mother did," Matt said. "She taught me a lesson I've never forgotten — never be impudent." That cut lip, incidentally, prevented Matt from accepting a fight for weeks.

CANADA—
THE CAPITAL PRIZE

"What I mean," explained Reeve Pugsley, "Canada is the largest and richest sparsely-populated country in the world. Imagine! Three people per square mile! Why Old England has 700. How many they have 350, Italy has 360. And Japan has 492!"

"Gosh!" exclaimed Mr. Picobac. His imagination seemed dazzled for the moment.

He puffed thoughtfully on the briar pipe into which he had packed the makings of a mild . . . cool . . . sweet Picobac smoke.

"Canada is a prize worth fighting for," agreed he after consideration. "And we ARE fighting for it — right now. Hitler'll never get it. Canada belongs to Canadians. And by the Lord Harry, we'll HOLD it!"

Mr. Picobac's teeth clenched on the stem of his pipe which gave out the delicious incense of smouldering Canadian burley.

Picobac is the pick of Canada's burley crop.

SCORE IS 17-12

In one of the slowest games of softball ever played on the local Armouries lawn this season, Belleville Sargents' Sargent Joan Gray, clinch closer to the top of the league when they defeated the Consolidated Optical nine by 17-12 count.

Sargents spotted their opposition a one-run lead in the first inning and allowed them to add a couple more runs in the second but when their hitters got their eye on the ball they quickly forged to the front and were never headed.

The winners batted out a total of fifteen safeties including homers by Garrow and Donovan, while Doolittle struck out six and walked four.

On the whole it was a rather disappointing 17-11 count, that accounting for the full two hours, that it took the Army and Navy Juniors to nings in. Two bits of sparkling defensive play by Sgts. YANKS, DODGERS AT CROSSROADS IN CRUCIAL SERIES

New York Hooks Up With Detroit and Brooklyn Takes on St. Louis

YANKS HUMBLED

By TED MEIER
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York Yankees and Brooklyn Dodgers stand at the crossroads today. What they do against Detroit Tigers and St. Louis Cardinals over the doubleheader jammed holiday weekend may well decide their final ranking in the American and National Leagues.

Both clubs have looked bad in losing two in a row to Cleveland Indians and Cincinnati Reds, respectively. The Indians yesterday humiliated the proud Bronx Bombers by not only shutting them out 13-0, on Allie Reynolds' three-hit pitching, but by scoring all 12 runs in a terrific fourth inning outburst.

Silch a manhandling has not happened to the Yankees in years. To top things off the Yanks lost the services of left fielder Charley Keller who was accidentally spiked on the left knee.

In the murderous fourth 18 Indians batted. Nine of them singled, one doubled, three walked, one was safe on an error and the other two grounded out. The third out resulted when Ray Mack, who drove in four runs during the uprising, overran first after singling and was caught trying to get back.

Drew Fast Game.

Dodgers dropped a full game behind the Cards yesterday by getting blanked, 6-0, by Elmer Riddle. Riddle scattered seven hits in winning his ninth game of the year, but was aided by three Brooklyn errors.

Gallant Carl Hubbell of the Giants tried to beat the Cards for his fourth win of the year, but instead suffered his second defeat, 5-3. Harry Gumbert twirled one-hit ball for the Cards until the seventh when Mel Ott authored his ninth homer of the year with one on.

Washington came from behind to tie Chicago White Sox in the ninth, then won in the eleventh, 3-2, on Jake Early's double and Johnny Sullivan's single.

Saved From Defeat.

Milo Candini, Washington starter, was saved from his first defeat when singles by Bob Johnson and Early knotted the count at 2-2 in the ninth.

Truett "Rip" Sewell of Pittsburgh Pirates chalked up his eleventh victory against two defeats by outpitching Jack Kraus to beat the Phillies, 2-1. The Phils' run came on Coaker Triplett's eight home run, one of the five hits Sewell yielded.

Ed Heusser hurled a four-hitter in the ninth to beat the Athletics for the third straight day, 8-7. Everett Purdin, rookie A's pitcher, walked five men to force in two runs, then Vern Stephens singled to win the game.

Chicago Cubs defeated Boston Braves, 7-1, for the eighth time in a row behind Claude Passeau's four-hit twirling.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

New York, July 3 — (AP) — George Strickler, the National Football League drumbeater, reports that during the recent meeting at Chicago a gent who frequently had put the touch on Buffalo's Charley Murray for meal money turned up for the first time in two years. . . . He had heard the league had awarded Murray the Buffalo franchise and he wanted to bargain for part of it. . . . He had $10,000 in his pocket and the unconscious body of Murray in his hands, so Strickler, "and when Murray recovered from the shock, he redoubled his efforts to get the franchise."

SWEDISH FLASH DEFEATS DODDS AT TWO MILES

Hagg Runs Third Fastest Two Miles Ever Run in United States

(By The Canadian Press)

The Swedish flash, Gunder Hagg made his second start in the United States last night and it was another easy victory for Hagg, modest who holds seven world's distance running records. This time was at Chicago, where he beat Oli Dodds of Boston by 20 yards in a quarter two-mile race. Three other American runners were far behind.

The time was 8:02.2—second compared with Hagg's own world record of 8:01.4 established in Sweden in 1942, but it was still the third fastest two-miles ever run in America and Hagg showed no signs of strain. His victory over Dodds was just as decisive as his triumph over Greg Rice in a mile mile at New York two weeks ago.

Dodds, the National A.A.U. 1,500 metres champion, took the lead with two smiling drives on the back stretch of the seventh lap and then was over a quarter-mile cinder track in four-lengths. Dodds finished strong each time the Swedish wonder stiffened up and left Dodds stag-gering.

The second-string three-year-olds of the Queenston Downs get their chance today in the $25,000 Empire City Handicap at Jamaica, Long Island. The 1942 champ, like Count Fleet and Ocean Wave, are on the sidelines while the top three-year-olds as Vincentive and Famous Victory go on for the $50,000 added gallop.

Out in San Francisco old Charley Root is pitching his 23rd season, he's managing the Oakland Oaks in the Hollywood Stars in the Pacific Coast League, and last night he wouldn't mind getting back with a big league club. An Oakland League football franchise, played tackle in one game and played every game for four years at Washington and Lee.

Hang Up Three Records

Roy Weatherly of the Yankees, Joe Cronin of the Red Sox and Mel Ott of the Giants have engraved their names in baseball's record books with one mark apiece this year.

When Weatherly gathered in ten hits June 12, he became the first major league outfielder to have ten hits in a nine-inning game two in one season, having previously backed as many April 28. Joe DiMaggio did it in two different games. . . . Richard (Dick) Hartley of St. Louis Browns pitched a no-hit, July 16, 1897 and in left field, June 30, 1898, made 11.

In hitting a home run in each game of a double-header, June 17, as a pinch-hitter, Joe Cronin became the first major league player to make two pinch round-trippers in a twin bill. Ar-ky also hit a pinch-hit home run 19, he established a record in the American League with three for the season, the former mark being two, held by a number of players. . . . Mel Caldwell of the Tigers hit home runs as a pinch-hitter in two consecutive games, June 10 and 11, 1915, a record Cronin tied. When Ott collected five bases on balls in the game against the Dodgers, June 17, it was the third time he had walked six often. . . . October 3, 1939 and September 1, 1940, previously making him the first major leaguer to have this record to his credit three times.

Industrial Softball

Now that the regular schedule of the city softball loop has wound up the little ball of fun and fury a suggestion afoot to organize a city industrial league. It is said that the C.A.S.A. recognizes and sponsors an all-industrial softball group, which should prove advantageous to the individual teams. Take for instance the luckless Alemite nine, who gamely went through the entire league schedule without winning a single game. However, the Alemite boys are as poor an aggregation as their league standing might indicate. Had the "easterders" been grouped in an industrial loop, they would have been well up in the race. Now it has been suggested that the Alemite, Bell, Canadian, Bristol Aircraft and possibly one other local nine form a league together in a Belleville industrial loop with the necessary manager, the Bristol A. S. A. industrial section, leaving the strongest nine in Percy Knott's group to battle it out for championship honors.

Something to Worry About

There's one man in this town who is going to lose plenty of sleep between now and next Wednesday night. He's Walt Gerow, manager of the Bristol Arena.

"No Promoter Tunney is bringing the Rimup to wrestle Johnny Pesek on Wednesday night, eh? Well, if there's any damage to the arena ring Mr. Tunney will pay for it. Just imagine the 300-pound weight of Rimup coming down on the mat from around 300, which is the distance from the mat nearly a half a ton. If that ring holds up under the strain, you'll have to tell me what relief," lamented Manager Gerow, as he fretfully ran the ring in the rafters with steel cables.

Why Should He?

Old Cadfer Muggins, who was as deaf as an adder, was visiting when he was strolling down the village street.

"Ah, Muggins," boomed the vicar, "there's spring in the air."

"What's that?" asked Muggins.

"I said spring in the air," thundered the vicar.

"Why should I?" snapped the old man.

This and That

Now there's talk of Buffalo and Cleveland meeting in the N.H.L. next season, making an eight-teamed circuit. . . . That is Percy Red Dutton's major hockey hope opening. . . . The Cleveland Rebels are now up to the National League, owner Al Sutphin says the club's attendance will jump when nearly $100,000 for the season. . . . The Cleveland club drew 13,000 patrons and prices will range from $1.10 to $2.75 instead of $1.65 to $4.10 in the international loop. . . . Pat McKenty, of Buffalo Bisons' Record says John L. Lewis is probably the only man in United States where baseball is the national game, who doesn't know three strike outs. . . . The baseball and softball made up the bulk of the $4,200,000 worth of sporting goods recently placed by the War Department's order. . . . Lou Boudreau winning the Belmont Victory Gallop on the 3rd. . . . He has picked up 150 pounds. . . . Bobby Doerr's batting is now at least 1½ but he was big enough to retrieve Rimland League pro football games for $3 seasons and last night he was 45.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 195

By SAM GORDON
The Ekhiter

Pahoka, Pete plays the Leaping Lena system in bridge, dives into a long suit and he will hop all over the place. Like a mountain goat with a flea complex.

But don't get the wrong idea from this. Don't jump to the conclusion that I object to jump bids. To the contrary, I heartily favor them. But in the right places.

Jump bids are super-duper signals. Ah, of them. There is nothing haphazard about any of them. Each jump has a definite and precise meaning in its chosen place.

Most of the spotlight goes to a one-jump bid. That is the signal for showing tricks enough to make a game. The number of tricks shown by a one-jump depends on what the jump is in.

If your partner starts with an opening bid of one, he shows five tricks. Your one-jump response tells him you have the balance of tricks needed to make a game.

It shows, if in a (1) takeout, six tricks; (2) assist of a minor suit, six tricks; (3) assist of a major suit, five tricks; (4) no-trump, five no-trump tricks.

Your opening bid is one diamond with this hand:

♥ Q 9 3
♣ 6 K 5

It partner responds at once with two spades or two spades or three clubs, it is a one-jump takeout. That says he has six trick bids.

If partner responds at once with three diamonds, it is a one-jump assist in a major suit. Which says he has six tricks.

If partner responds at once with two no-trump, that is a one-jump in no-trump. Which says he has five no-trump tricks.

Suppose your diamonds were hearts and you started with an opening bid of one heart. If partner's first response was then three hearts, it is a one-jump assist in a major suit. Which says he has three tricks.

Look before you leap.

Toronto, July 3—(CP)—Relations are a bit strained in the Homick family at Windsor, Ont. Joe Homick of Walker Metal Products had a no-hit game in his pitching pocket in the Windsor Industrial Softball League this week except for one measly pop single. And the Windsor Star says:

"Homick could have been caught had not the left-fielder pulled up when he saw the ball proceeding to play it safe." The left fielder was none other than Joe's brother, Casey Homick. The hit came in the fifth inning when there were no thoughts of a no-hitter. Casey probably figured he would have risked his neck to make the catch. Anyway Casey batted .364 victory for Purity Dairies and Doug Sabine, the batter who pulled up when the ball was hit, is the Dairy pitcher who took all the punishment in return.

Oh, Brother!

Maybe there's more to this All-American Professional Girls' Softball League than home softball but who would want more than meets the eye? Just read this comment by a Chicago baseball writer, Edgar Bolt, about one of the Regina girls who played with the league: "Tall and stunning in her dark beauty, perfect in features and figure, is Ruth Queen, Mary Baker, star catcher for South Bend, in a fashion model in private life. Who wants to see softball anyway?

Incidentally:

Drawing attention to the current patriotic salvage drive in Winnipeg, Manager Bobby Schilling of Bobby Schilling named racers on Monday's card as Victory Bonds and Into the Copper Purse, the Brass Purse, the Aluminum Purse, the Iron Purse, the Chromium Purse and the Lead and Tin Purse. The gold, it is assumed, is where you find it at the part-mutuel wickets. . . . Now is as good a time as any to spike those rumors that Boston's Bill Cowley will be in the Leafs' come next hockey season. The navy turned Bill down because of his trick knee. . . . Maybe the navy will have Bill back on hockey without Bill though. For example, six months after the Canadian National Memorial Cup champions now are the undisputed champions of the tars in Victoria.

By HUGH GORMAN

Joan Crawford is very shy in public.She made her first appearance at the Hollywood Canteen recently and was so nervous signing autographs that her husband had to hold her hand. . . . In the Sky Above, the North Atlantic when Humphrey Bogart and Major Raymond Massey of the CASF appear, many Canadians will be interested to learn that a number of the newspapers call "An East Canadian Port." This thrilling film tells the story of the modern merchant marine, a service dear to the heart of all Canadians, many of whom relatives are up there at times to deliver the goods to Britain when she stood alone in Europe. . . . Your reporter here isn't always as healthy as he looks on the screen. George Sanders, 6 feet and three inches tall, has just given "a temporary rejection classification for physical reasons."

Strange that Hollywood hasn't done a movie yet of the great heroism of the Greeks. They have a special place in the affections of Britain and the Dominions because they were comrades in battle, bleeding and sometimes dying side by side.

There's a story about the bravery of the Greek fighter. An Italian platoon, about fifty soldiers in all, set out to capture a Greek. "And don't come back," he told them, "until he's been killed or captured."

In a short while they were back. The general cursed them. "But general," said the officer in charge, you told us there was no choice. There was only two!"

Napoleon said that an army moves on its stomach. But the Greek soldier fights with or without food. . . .

Hollywood is the place where dreams come true, it's often said. For instance, Rita Hayworth pays $500 per month for the support of her former husband! . . . Years ago Dennis Morgan was a lumberjack. The other day he got a letter from the company he used to work for telling him that, in view of the manpower shortage, it was his duty to come back to work. . . . Walter Huston, who was just an Alexander Davies in "Mission to Moscow," may be Will Rogers in a coming film. . . . Babe is in the army now. Too bad there isn't an elephant cavalry. . . . In the past ten weeks Bob Hope, travelling in an army bomber, has played 250 shows at a camps, sometimes making as many as eight appearances in one day. And he keeps turning out as many films as ever. Wonder what he does with his spare time?

Something that may have escaped you is the terrible time theatre managers have because of vandalism. Mean patrons tear seats, smash mirrors with lipstick, steal paper towels, remove containers, small rugs, gum trays and fountain taps. Many of the stolen things cannot be replaced until after the war. . . . Nominees of how much Hollywood can be a great help to the amount of G. J. Silverthorne, head of the Ontario Motion Pictures Bureau. Of 2,000,000 people who attended theatres last year, there was not one double feature. . . . Hollywood spent $4,500,000 to help the best plays of last year for film stories. . . . In "The White Cliffs of Dover" Irene C. Ashley Smith, the English actor had to lead Irene Dunne in a waltz. The dancing coach began to show Smith how when the veteran stopped him. "I was a medal as the best waltzer in my class of years ago," he said, "and I can do the step with the best of them!"

Tunney Will Use Baggage Car To Transport Blimp

With transportation rationed and tractor trailers at a premium Promoter Frank Tunney of the Queensbury A. C. has hit upon a new plan in which to transport his latest wrestling phenomenon, the 643-pound Blimp, who wants the world to know his name is actually Martin Levy. How Promoter Tunney can't say. The Blimp has a motor car or Bus nor through the conventional door of a railway coach, so he proposes to lead him through the double doors of a railway baggage car and ship him to Belleville for his wrestling bout versus "Irish Jerry" Monahan, the little blimp, who tops the beam about half the weight of Levy. When The Blimp and Monahan crawl into the Hume Arena ring next week there'll be nearly a half a ton of humanity on the job and if the local palace de sport ring holds up under the strain, then the fans are in for a show.

It's all very well to introduce over 900 pounds of humanity to the public at one time, but Promoter Tunney must solve one better. He remarked "That" Morgan, the fighting Tyrian Marine killer of 32 Japs at Guadalcanal, and Al Dunlop, the Toronto mauler. Last meeting Morgan had Dunlop seeking protection beneath the Hume Arena ring with the ex-Marine gave the Toronto grappler a taste of what the Japs don't like. Dunlop fled. This return bout over the hour limit should prove that the gentle dessert for a hungry wrestling fan.

PINCH HITTERS STEAL SPOTLIGHT IN INT. LEAGUE

Games at Syracuse and Rochester Won by This Means

TORONTO BEATEN

(By The Associated Press)

Pinch hitters, those young men who spend most of their time in the cool of the dugout only to be jerked into the heat of battle at rare intervals, stole the spotlight in the International League last night.

Les Goldstein was the hero at Syracuse, his pinch blow with the bases loaded in the seventh frame giving the Chiefs a 9-7 victory over Montreal.

At Rochester it was Walter Alston who batted in the 10th for Second Baseman Bill Barrow and lifted a fly to Howard Moss that brought in the winning run and a 1-0 verdict for the Red Wings over Jersey City.

Pinch hitters weren't needed in the remaining International League romping off with a pair of baseball decisions as Buffalo and Baltimore nicking the pace-setting Toronto Leafs, 5-3 and 4-1. Herman Wehmeier was the 10-1 and 11-7 starpitcher.

Leafs Lead Out

The double bear win and the setback suffered by the Leafs cut the Toronto hold on first place to three full games. With all teams listed for twin bills Saturday and Monday because of the July Fourth holiday and Toronto's Maple Leafs also tangling in a bargain attraction today, the pennant scramble undergo a violent shakeup over the week-end.

Al Ott, young Buffalo hurler, proved a cousin to the Newark Bears in the opening game. He started the first game and he couldn't relate a single batter before he was pounded from the hill. He then went in as a relief hurler in the second frey and was touched for Frank Bumgarner would undergo a violent shakeup over the week-end.

Score Five in Frame

Baltimore also had a fat inning while trimming the Leafs, the runs coming in during a hectic fifth frame that wasn't stopped until the veteran Jim Bivin had his third beat post and took over on the mound.

Tom Sunkel hurled another good game for the Little Giants after giving up only three hits in the 10 innings of action but Wehmeier proved stronger in the pinch. Each of the hurlers walked six rivals.

Montreal and Syracuse traded big innings, each club registering four times in the fray but the three runs the Chiefs scored in the first game gave them the edge.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Jake Girl"

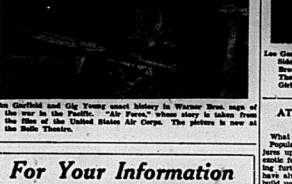
One of the season's strongest films will make its debut Sunday midnight at the Capitol Theatre when Warner Bros. latest, production, "Juke Girl" starts its run. The starring roles are alluring Ann Sheridan, fresh from her triumph in "Kings Row," and Ronald Reagan, who has been given an impressive list of fine performances to his credit. The supporting roles are made up of such Hollywood favorites as Richard Whorf, (remember his grand portrayal in "Blues by The Night"?) George Tobias, Gene Lockhart, Alan Hale, Betty Brewer and many others.

"Juke Girl" is a film that really jacks a wallop and there's no letdown in the action-packed story. The story takes place in a little Florida town where Stonecrop fruit pickers work hard all day and their main source of entertainment is the local "juke joint" where Ann Sheridan works as a hostess. Curtis Bernhardt directed the A. I. Bezzerides screen play. Kenneth Gamet adapted Theodore Pratt's story.

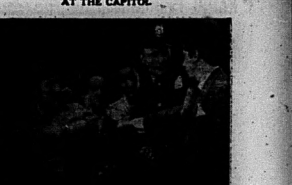
East Side Kids

An exceptional cast appears in "Neath Brooklyn Bridge," the Monogram East Side Kids picture which comes to the Capitol Theatre Sunday midnight. The gang of wise guys, starred at heels, is headed by Leo Gorcey, Bobby Jordan, Huntz Hall and Gabriel Dell, and the roster of the group also includes Sammy Morrison, Billy Benedict, Stone, and the newest member, Bennie Clements. Ann Gillis plays the principal feminine role, and Noah Beery, Jr., appears in a prominent part. Other prominent members of the cast are Marc Lawrence, Jack Mulhall, J. Arthur Young, David O'Brien and "Bud" Osborne.

AT THE BELLE



"Air Force"



The life story of a Flying Fortress is the theme of the new Warner Bros. film, "Air Force," which opens at the Belle Theatre today.

Produced with the co-operation of the United States Government, the story is concerned with the trials and tribulations of one "Mary Ann," a B-17, caught unprepared above the embattled waters of the South Pacific during the treacherous attack on that fateful December 7.

Starting when the "Mary Ann" and its crew of nine leave on a peace-time mission to Honolulu, the story tells of the emergency landing when the crew learns of the attack on Pearl Harbor. With their destination Wake Island, they arrive there only to learn that they must take off at once for Manila. Encountering difficulties on the way, they finally make their run landing at Clark Field, where they are attacked while loading ammunition. It is the battle of the Coral Sea that is responsible for the end of the "Mary Ann," but not until she is safely landed on Australian territory.

Except for a couple of incidental roles, the cast of "Air Force" is composed of the bomber's crew, including Sammy Harrison, Gig Young, Harry Carey, George Tobias, Arthur Kennedy, James Brown, John Ridgley, Ray Montgomery and Ward Wood.

Lee Gorcey, Bobby Jordan and Huntz Harrison of the Monogram East Side Kids, who make their debut in this week's "Neath Brooklyn Bridge," their latest roughneck adventure at the Capitol Theatre, starting Sunday midnight with the added attraction "Juke Girl" starring Ann Sheridan and Ronald Reagan.

AT THE McCARTHY

"NEXT OF KIN"

What is a spy really like?

Popular imagination usually conjures up a vision of a glamorous female decoy or mysterious-looking furtive man. Films and books have always in the past helped to build up this illusion.

In real life, your spy is the most ordinary person in the world. There is nothing romantic about him. He might even be a chap who is working next to you all day.

The Next of Kin, Universal's British made release, coming to the McCarthy Theatre, Sunday, tells the fictional romantic spy convention. In an authentic film, made with the fullest cooperation of the English Army authorities, and it shows you how a German spy works.

The spy in the picture is that grand actor Mervyn Johns, and his character is that of just an ordinary, average Englishman. He has worked and lived in this country for years before the war. He is more at home there than in Germany, for country he works for.

In one part of the story, he is a factory worker. He gets a job as a tool-carrier and being a spy is a expect a bad-carrier of being a spy? Yet the careless talk on the part of his fellow workers gives him some valuable information.

Another thing he is a quiet little man staying in a small country hotel bookkeeper and bookkeeper, doing nothing to excite suspicion.

He has a code arranged throughout the film, to all intents and purposes a humble British working man, of the type you meet in any country hotel.

That's your real spy.

Others in the film is "The Man What It Takes" with Jinx Falkenburg, Hugh Herbert, the Radio Rogues, and grand actor Mervyn Johns, and his

WHAT'S DOING IN SPORT

PATTY BERG WINS

Chicago (AP)—Patty Berg had no score against Phyllis Otis in Women's Golf Championship yesterday than she had against Hitler in an amateur tournament with the women's reserve corps of the United States Navy. Patty is afraid however that her knee injury may cause trouble when she takes her physical examination next Wednesday.

REALLY BURNED IT IN

Niagara Falls, (CP)—When the Niagara Falls Purnishers beat St. Catharines 13-3 in a senior district baseball game last night, they really rubbed it in. They got seven runs in the eighth inning of their contest-mate, Dominic Bonase, now pitching for the Saints.

MAY BE SPECIAL CONSTABLE

Waterloo (CP)—The Parks Board has asked Mayor Frank Belyea to confer special constable rank on umpire Fred Anderson giving him authority to eject disturbers from the park. The board was told that some disturbances in recent minor ball association games have been too frequent, and caused "mostly by ladies."

SIMPSON'S DEFEAT ROYALS

Montreal (CP)—More than 1,500 persons turned out yesterday for a girls' softball game in which Toronto Simpsons defeated Montreal Royals 6-5. It was the first of a two-game series between the servicemen's sport funds.

LEAVE FOR WINDSOR

Toronto (CP)—About 200 athletes of the Royal Canadian Air Force from all parts of Canada were engaged in a track and field meet at Varsity stadium yesterday. It was the first commanding officer's inspection day to be held at the station—No. 32 pre-airwar educational establishment. A 48-hour leave pass was the prize for members of the winning flight, Flight 36.

MOOSE SQUADRON OFF WITH ANNE'S BOMB FOR DUSSELDORF

A bombing raid on Germany is seldom a sentimental journey, but the attack on Dusseldorf, which marked the 1,000th sortie of the R.C.A.F.'s famous "Moose" squadron, had a sentimental touch. The chalky crew pictured with carrigt a 1,000-pound bomb as a special gift from "Anne," a Stile Dutch refugee girl living in Woodstock, Ont. In the last Victory Loan campaign she sent $500 personally to Air Marshal L. S. Breadner, chief of the staff, with the request that it be used to buy a bomb to drop on Germany. These boys and their Halifax delivered it. The trio in front are Flying Officer Beckwith from Buenos Aires, Flight Sergt. M. F. "Bill" Gray, of Vancouver, the pilot; Sergt. Cliff Wiby of Winnipeg. In the second row are Pilot Officer Russ Harling of Winnipeg and Sergt. Gord Lee of Edmonton. In the rear are Flight Sergt. Chico Hancock of Sirome, Alta., and Flight Lieut. Bert Saunders of Annapolis Royal, N.S., in charge.

Potato Question Surveyed By House Members

Will Discuss Resolution to Seek Amendment to the B.N.A. Act

By JAMES McCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, July 3 — (CP) — Potatoes, in short supply in many districts only a few weeks ago, now have appeared in embarrassing plenty in North America, the House of Commons heard Friday night.

The potato question was one of a series surveyed by members as they discussed agriculture department estimates following the 1941 general census. On the basis of this census, the loss of population in some prairie areas would have resulted in fewer members in the Chamber.

Members from British Columbia and New Brunswick, both provinces which produce potatoes in quantity, were interested in an order announced yesterday providing for the removal of the 15-per-cent war exchange tax and three-per-cent special excise tax on potatoes and similar vegetables imported from British countries.

C. A. Cruickshank (Lib. Fraser Valley) said he was concerned as to the effect or removing the taxes on the sale of potatoes produced in Canada.

Turned Over To U.S. Gov't.

H. H. Hatfield (Prog. Con. Victoria-Carleton) said he had just received a telephone message from Washington stating there were 5,000 cars of potatoes on track in Philadelphia, New York and Boston at the close of business yesterday and asking if he could open a starch factory in Maine to process them.

"This is almost unbelievable, coming only a month after there was such a shortage of potatoes all over America," he said. "But the potatoes of North Carolina and Virginia, which had a floor of $2.25 a 100 pounds, were higher that June and these supplies all were turned over to the United States government, which does not know what to do with them.

"This represents more than a week's supply of potatoes for the country; yet in spite of that situation the prices board takes off the import tax on potatoes coming into Canada just when the Ontario new crop, the Quebec new crop and the British Columbia new crop are coming on our market.

"We are now paying a subsidy on imported potatoes today. I can get these potatoes for 30 cents a bag, delivered in Canada."

Serious Situation

"This is a serious situation, with the new crop in Canada coming on the market."

Mr. Gardiner: "But I would say it was a very serious situation just a week or two ago on the part of the Dominion friends when we had 20 carloads on this side they wanted to get over to the United States. These 20 carloads went to the United States. We cannot have those things both ways." If we are going to have arrangements to have potatoes to go to the United States when we are short in Canada, probably somebody has to do something to get some back here."

Mr. Gardiner told Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House leader, that to get them in the quantity required for the United Kingdom the standards had been lowered and, generally speaking, they would not be high enough to compete with the bacon Denmark was sending to Britain before the war.

Mr. Gardiner said that while these products were down as compared with last year exports were higher because of the large production of 1942.

Some Being Paid Out

Under the Prairie Farm Assistance Act, the minister said about $30,000,000 had been paid out and more than $4,000,000 collected previous to this year under a levy on grain marketed. He hoped this year's abundant world bring the revenue to a total of $9,000,000 with which payments could be made.

In discussion of research activities, Mr. Gardiner said he would not advocate the manufacture of any commodity in Canada unless the difference in the cost when it could be obtained more economically on a basis which would render it unprofitable.

At the moment, Canada had to pay 10 cents a pound for rubber because of the cost, but this did not mean when war was over and rubber might be obtained more cheaply elsewhere, the production would be continued.

It did not follow that because rubber might be produced within Canada at a cheaper cost that Canada should make such rubber without regard to the cost, he said in answering inquiries about the use of grain alcohol.

Mr. Gardiner said that Canadian experts might be trusted for rubber after the war.

He promised, however, that there was something to be said for the production of butadiene rubber from grain alcohol, especially when the cost of the plant was taken into consideration. Such a plant could be built more cheaply than one using the petroleum process. A pilot plant to use grain alcohol in the process now was being constructed by the National Research Council laboratories.

Nothing Brightens a Room So as Bright Plants

Attractive Flowers

How delightful these plants look arranged against the window so they receive just what they need, while giving plants and flowers give pleasure. They serve to make the room more alive, more human, more livable.

Plants and flowers are easily grown indoors, with little beginning in all sorts of queer places—even tubs. Pre Rec suggests you begin like mushrooms throughout the province.

"To many rural centres in British Columbia, Pre Rec is the only form of public recreation. Some of these miles around—on horseback, in buggies — to attend their bi-weekly classes. Afternoon is for the children, evening for the older teenagers. Finally mother and dad have their evening out.

"Every year we begin with a set purpose in mind," continued Mrs. Keasley. "At first exercises are simple, then get gradually more complex. Only at the close of the term do our students discover to what end they're been working—perhaps a Spanish, Danish or Russian theme. Then we have our mass display each Spring in Vancouver sometimes to prove the complete effect.

"There are no stars in Pre Rec's annual May Display," she continued. "We think it better to have everything taking part in the physical activity than to build up stars to the detriment of the majority."

Pre Rec centres are also offered skiing, indoor swimming, and life-saving instruction as well as facilities for playing soccer, grass hockey, basketball, volleyball and badminton.

From Salegirls To Grandmothers They 'Bend Down'

By B. C.'s "Pro Rec" Activities

Extend to Willie the Welder as Well as Rosie the Riveter and Do They Keep Fit! Well!

By KATHLEEN REX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Vancouver — (CP) — They're turning the "Keep Fit" movement in British Columbia. They've been practising for nine years — boys and girls early teens, mothers, fathers, grandmothers — from the midnight to the sockalite, the hefty trucker to the beauty business man. Now that war is here, Willie the Welder and Rosie the Riveter attend their "Pro Rec" classes more regularly than ever.

Bend down, sister, and bend down! Brother Bill, you might still have a set. B. C.'s Provincial Recreation is a sweeping organization and its "Pro-Rec" ideas have filtered into the United States and overseas to England. In Australia and New Zealand the B. C. plan is well known and the wartime health scheme of these countries is in much the same pattern.

British Columbia's Recreational and Physical Education branch under the Department of Education was inaugurated in 1934 by the late G. M. Weir, Minister of Education on behalf of the Pacific Government. In 1937 the provincial grant for this service was matched by a grant from the Federal government under its Dominion Provincial Youth Training scheme. When the Program expired in 1942, the current Yenta'mal Co-ordination Act was passed by Order-in-Council. The Pro-Rec Committee under the creation program continues under this new act.

Forget Troubles

"We started out in the darkest days of the depression," said Mrs. Hilda Keasley, provincial chief instructress. "Everyone was out of work, with little money but lots of worry. People came to Pro Rec to forget their troubles. We didn't care then if they ever touched their toes — him'lar regard to their still corporary relief from their cares.

"Our classes had their beginnings in all sorts of queer places—even tubs. Pro Rec organizers began to like mushrooms throughout the province.

"To many rural centres in British Columbia, Pro Rec is the only form of public recreation. Some of these miles around—on horseback, in buggies — to attend their bi-weekly classes. Afternoon is for the children, evening for the older teenagers. Finally mother and dad have their evening out.

"Every year we begin with a set purpose in mind," continued Mrs. Keasley. "At first exercises are simple, then get gradually more complex. Only at the close of the term do our students discover to what end

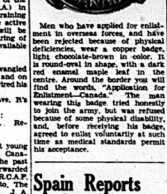
Lapel Badges Tell Army Service Story



Discharge Buttons or Badges Showing Effort to Enlist Worn by Many Civilians

Ottawa, July 2 — "By their badges ye shall know them," is sage advice for those who wonder at the meaning of lapel-badges worn by many Canadian men in civilian clothes. These men have been rejected by the Armed Services, or have been discharged from them.

Discharged soldiers of the present war wear a small, shield-shaped badge, surmounted by a crown.

Within the shield is displayed a sprig of three scarlet maple leaves on a silver background. The lower border of the shield are inscribed the words, "General Service." When you encounter a man wearing that badge, you know that he served in the Armed Forces of Canada, and has been honorably discharged before being issued the badge, he declared his intention to go back on Active Service again if the Government ever needs his services.

Men who have applied for enlistment in the Armed Forces, and have been rejected because of physical deficiencies, wear a copper badge, light, chocolate-brown in color. It is round-oval in shape, with a dark red enamel maple leaf in the centre. Around the border you will find the words, "Application for Enlistment—Canada." The man wearing this badge tried honestly to join the army, but was refused because of some physical disability, and, before rejecting his ability, agreed to enlist voluntarily at such time as medical standards permit his acceptance.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the R.C.A.F., Somewhere in England, July 3 —(CP)— Curiosity killed the cat, they say—but always.

Pilot Tom Thurgood, virginian operator-air gunner from Bankhead, Sask., was returning from Essen in his Lancaster when he decided to have a look at the flak pattern in the sky.

No sooner had he left his chair and walked a few steps towards the hatch than an anti-aircraft shell blew his chair to smithereens. Though he was lucky not to have been blown to pieces, he didn't escape unscathed. A piece of jagged steel embedded itself in the side of his face and damaged one eye.

"I'm not so badly off," the 22-year-old airman said. "It might have been a lot worse. But I'm sorry to hear I won't be doing any more operational flying."

PO. Paul Goransson of Vancouver and a group of his R.C.A.F. artist colleagues are in England recording in paintings and drawing the activities of Canadian airmen overseas. Their works will be used for historical records, gallery displays and reproductions.

Goransson's works show the fliers in their aircraft, being briefed and interrogated, lying around their billets, and in the mess on rainy nights from neighboring towns when there are no operations. He also has done riggers and fitters at work on the giant aircraft.

"War art is essential," Goransson said, "for it brings home more forcibly than camera studies just what our boys here are doing. We can intensify our activities and get the cream of action which the camera so often misses. The artist can record the spirit of the event."

When you hear airmen talk of something as being a "piece of cake," they're speaking figuratively of course. But recently Flt.-Lt. L. W. Powell, D.F.C., of Simcoe, Ont., really collected cake.

He won it by adding another FW190 to his score of enemy aircraft destroyed. The cake was offered by the station to the first member of the new squadron on the station to destroy an enemy aircraft.

When he called up PO. A. B. Ketterson of Montreal on his radio telephone after the engagement he was asked if he was with the formation.

"I'm with somebody," came the reply, "but they don't seem very friendly." Together they were able to turn the enemy for home and rejoin the formation.

The crew of a Lancaster in which there are three Canadians, Sgt. Pilot Jack Price, a Canadian resident of Los Angeles, and Sgt. Gnrs. Marcellus Heffernon, formerly of Hamilton, Ont., and Charlie Glover of St. Boniface, Man., are believed to have destroyed a German night fighter over Denmark during a recent flight to Stettin.

THROUGH THE DIAL SIGHT

A Weekly Column Devoted to the Activities of the Members of the Armed Services at Home and Abroad

Are you interested in the firing of a modern army rifle or machine gun?

If so, here's your opportunity to realize your ambitions and under the supervision of military experts.

On Sunday the Argyll Light Infantry (Bn.) is holding a field day of training at their new ranges and training grounds along the Jones's Creek road some three miles west of Belleville north of Highway No. 2.

Lieut.-Col. B. C. Donnan, officer commanding the Argyll Light Infantry, announced today that arrangements for transportation to and from the training area would be available from the Armouries commencing at nine o'clock Sunday morning.

Actual practice for civilians in rifle and Bren gun firing, ensuing flare and battle drill as well as other branches of active service training will be available to those service men between the ages of 16 and 56 years with no obligation to enlist in any branch of the service.

"We merely wish to acquaint the public with the operations of reserve army routine and give civilians some insight as to the proper method of handling fire arms during wartime," assured Lieut.-Col. B. C. Donnag.

The classes will be under the direction of Lieut. Kalbfleisch, special army drill instructor for the unit.

Remember the time and the place — nine until three Sunday—north of the Jones's Creek turn near Potter's landing field about three miles west of Belleville off Highway No. 2.

Bearing out the record of Belleville and district of being one of the foremost districts in the Dominion of Canada regarding the number of enlistments per capita in the Royal Canadian Navy, announcement from Kingston navy recruiting officer indicates that in a little more than two months up to the middle of June, no less than 46 district men have joined the navy.

Of this number 22 were from Belleville and the balance from the immediate district. Following is the Belleville list: James S. Price, 210 MacDonald Ave.; Hugh Edmonson, 285 Foster Ave.; Frederick D. Turner; Robert A. Maxwell, 19 Jack, the sailor, had broken with his girl. After ignoring several letters recounting the return of her photograph, he received one threatening to complain to the captain.

Deciding to silence her for all time, he borrowed all the pictures of girls available on the ship from his pals and sent them on to her in a parcel with the following note.

"Pick yours out. I have forgotten what you look like!"

Incidentally, the unit is holding a rummage sale at the Armouries today and Major Maloney wishes to extend the appreciation of the unit to those who assisted in the provision of articles.

Little Benny's Note Book

I burned my finger in the kitchen lit'ul while off of things to see what was making the swell smells, and I was in the kitchen frying some bacon and holding my finger out and washing it, and pop was also sizzling in his private chair smoking to himself on account of being home early on account of Sunday, and he said, I hear your little friends out in the street screaming in innocent merriment, perhaps if you went out and joined them you'd forget about your finger.

Aw Gee, pop, they make too much noise, I said. They cant do anything without yelling and arguing. I'm getting tired of them. I think I'll just try staying by myself reading and studying and getting along good in school, I said, and pop said, A man named Kipling or perhaps merely a man who had been reading Kipling, once wrote, He travels the fastest who travels alone. But just a same, there is no such thing in Nature as complete independence. Neither the strongest tree nor the most delicate alom is completely irrepondent, and somethat terrible would probably happen if it tried to be, especially the strongest plant. This whole war is the result of certain people thinking they were strong enough to be completely independent, and the success of the peace to come will depend on whether the big countries and the little countries agree to admit that they need each other, so unless you're a great exception you'd better stick to community life, dont you think so? he said.

Sure pop, I'm going out right now, I said.

Which I started to, and pop said, That's the spirit. In union is the only true independence. Always be swayed by reason and you'll always savvy greatfully, he said.

Sure, pop, and anyways, my finger has stopped hurting, I said.

Being the main reason.

THERE'S NOTHING like a big black or white suit to dress up a simple frock. White bengaline makes a big hat trimmed with big pink chiffon roses and a misty pink veil.

Gen. Sikorski On Way to Britain After Visit With Polish Troops in Middle E.

DAUGHTER ALSO KILLED

London, July 5 (CP) — General Wladislaw Sikorski, Premier of the Polish Government in London and commander of its armed forces, was killed last night when the Liberator plane in which he was travelling crashed shortly after taking off from Gibraltar, the Air Ministry announced today.

Nineteen of the 17 passengers and crew members aboard also died, it was added.

Among the victims was Sikorski's daughter, Mrs. Sophia Leskiewicz, 25, who travelling with her father as liaison officer between the London headquarters of the Polish Auxiliary Territorial Service (Women's Forces) and the Middle East, and Lieut.-Gen. Klimecki, A.T.S. umbrella. Her husband is a prisoner of war in Germany.

Stanislaw Mikolajczyk Leader

Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, Deputy Polish Premier and leader of the Polish Peasant Party, was designated today as acting premier by the cabinet, pending election of a successor to Mr. Sikorski.

According to the coalition agreement under which Poland has been operating, the republic's president must appoint a new Premier agreeable to all four parties.

Gen. Sikorski, Polish military leader of defence, has placed in charge of Polish armies, replacing Sikorski.

The cabinet decreed national mourning for all Polish nationals the world.

The news was beamed to Poland by radio.

The only survivor of the crash was the pilot of the big plane, who was seriously injured.

Sikorski had been visiting Polish armed forces in the Middle East, and was in Cairo as recently as last Saturday.

His death came at a moment when the forces which he had been organizing to fight for the liberation of Poland were at last ready to take part in the offensive operations they had been planning since the humiliating days of September, 1939, when their country fell before the German invaders.

Ministry Issues Statement

The fatal accident first was announced by the Polish Government in a brief statement which gave no details. Later afterward the Air Ministry issued this brief communiqué:

"The Air Ministry deeply regrets to announce that General Sikorski was killed last night when the Liberator aircraft in which he was travelling crashed shortly after taking off from Gibraltar.

"The aircraft was accompanied by Major General Klimecki and other members of their staff. The only survivor of the accident is the pilot who was seriously injured and is in a hospital."

Other Victims

Other victims included Gen. Tadeusz Klimecki, chief of the Polish general staff; Col. Andrzej Marecki, chief of the operational section and deputy military science and a British Colonel, Victor Alexander Cazalet, who was a political liaison officer and sometimes served as an interpreter for Sikorski's public speeches.

Shortly before Sikorski left for the Middle East he spent an hour with Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, discussing the entire field of relations between Poland and Russia.

He had been expected to return from Cairo either late today or tomorrow.

Sikorski had served as Prime Minister of the Polish government and commander in chief of the Polish army since 1939.

He was born in 1881 and educated at the University Technical College at Lvow, where he was graduated in 1908.

The leader's disapproval of the proxy vote for delegates in favour of the armed forces serving outside Ontario was endorsed. Several delegates described the Progressive Conservative Association of Ontario as a "dead army" existing in name only and elsewhere in Canada may designate a Hitler or relative to cast their ballot, as "a denial of democratic voting methods."

167th Anniversary of Independence Of U.S. Celebrated Around World

New York, July 5 — (AP)— Americans around the world celebrated the 167th anniversary of their countries' independence today despite the thuntastically assisted by their Allies.

In Moscow's Philharmonic Hall, London's Hyde Park, at Allied headquarters, North Africa, and in the capitals of Latin-America, Americans and their friends gathered to celebrate the day.

British and French officers and men joined the celebration at Allied headquarters in North Africa at which Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower was the principal speaker. The Royal Navy under Admiral of the Fleet Sir Andrew Browne Cunningham fired a 48-gun salute.

In London 26 American enlisted men were hosts to a like number of British guests at the old-fashioned hayride — in Hyde Park — while officers and others toured historic spots along the Thames River as guests of Vice Admiral Sir Geoffrey Blake, ending at Windsor Castle, where they were presented to King George and Queen Elizabeth.

At historic St. Paul's Cathedral half of the service was relayed from Washington Cathedral in Washington, D.C. at Bulgrave, North-amptonshire, ancestral home of George Washington, British and American flags were raised.

RUSSIANS SMASH GERMAN EFFORTS FOR NEW ATTACK

Belgorod Area North-East of Kharkov Is Scene of Latest Outbreak

NAZIS LOSE HEAVILY

London, July 5 (CP) — The German high command claimed today that a sudden Nazi thrust against enemy forces in the bagon district of the Kuban bridgehead yesterday successfully thwarted several weeks of fighting over difficult terrain.

Two thousand Red troops were killed or captured and quantities of war material destroyed, the Nazi communique, broadcast from Berlin, asserted.

At least 700 Russian hosts were captured, destroyed or routed by land forces aided by units of the German air force, the communique said.

The Russian midday communique, broadcast from Moscow, said preparations for a German attack in the Belgorod-Kursk area north of Kharkov and midway between the two cities, which lie on the Moscow-Orel road have been smashed by artillery and armor fire with heavy loss to the enemy forces.

Speculation Unanswered

Speculation as to whether this increased activity on the Russian front presaged an immediate large scale offensive by either side remained unanswered.

The Soviet bulletin reported only minor action had taken place in other sectors of the "1,200-mile central down" Nazi troops were killed in a night raid on Orel, in the central front and a reconnaissance detachment was dispersed in the Caucasus gun fire, the communique added.

North of Chuguev, 22 miles south east of Kharkov, Soviet artillery destroyed two self-propelled German guns which had been shelling Red Army positions, the communique stated.

An attempt by a strong German punitive force to encircle a guerilla unit in the Leningrad area was smashed after several days of fighting, the communique added.

Wipe Out 800 Germans

Action which developed on the northern sector of the world, where the Russians said yesterday they had wiped out 800 of Hitler's tank supported Elite Guardsmen in fierce fighting around Lake Ilmen, apparently has not attempte to the Nazis.

From the Russian account of the battle it appeared that the Nazis in it took place in the Velikie Luki sector, about 45 miles from the Latvian border.

Front line Berlin radio came reports that the Nazi high command was greatly concerned over Russian transport movements indicate that a Soviet offensive may be in the expected almost any day. The German radio also confirmed the Soviet announcement of fighting in the Velikie Luki area, but described the action as "local activity" lack which had been repulsed.

The Soviet midnight communique bulletin recapitulated Germany and Soviet claims for the past 24 hours stating that Red army fliers and anti-aircraft detachments had downed 46 Nazi planes against 18 Russian losses.

British Land Forces Raid Cretan Air Fields, Operations Successful

Special Broadcast to People of Crete Advises Them "This is Not an Invasion" — Number of Axis Aircraft Destroyed on Ground by Small Forces — Patrols Then Withdraw Safely, Says Middle East Communique

By LEWIS HAWKINS
(Associated Press War Staff Writer)

London, July 5—(CP)—All-British forces jabbed into the island of Crete last night, destroying many planes—an air fields and withdrew successfully, a special Middle East communique disclosed today.

This was the first landing reported since British forces were driven from the Mediterranean island by air-borne invasion forces in May, 1941.

There was no indication of the size of the forces used but it was assumed in London military quarters that they were small bands of commandos who are highly trained in such work.

While official military sources declined to discuss the operations the Ministry of Information disclosed that a special broadcast had been made to the people of Crete, warning them not to be tricked or to thinking this was the start of a real invasion.

The broadcast urged them to be calm and added: "Only a little action is required from you. This is not an invasion."

The radio constituted the first commando-type operations against there.)

Crete disclosed here since it was announced June 1, 1941, that British forces had abandoned that island under the hammering of German air-borne units.

The invaders, however, apparently have never fully conquered the people and since Allied troops remained behind when British forces withdrew to the coast.—

Harry Flannery, CBS correspondent in Egypt and lastly conceded defeat in history" in May, 1941 between the sea and sea power.

(Andrew Michaelopoulos, Greek Minister of Information, announced in Washington last July that 1,200 British, American and other various Greek forces were maintaining violent resistance. He said the Nazis actually held only "a narrow strip around the coast.")

The fourth largest island in the Mediterranean with a total of 3,234 square miles, Crete lies approximately midway between the Greek mainland and the Libyan coast. It is 160 miles long. The pre-war population was 400,000.

(It is a logical stepping-stone for the Allies' invasion of the Balkans and the new operation supplements many air raids previously carried out against Axis installations there.)

Two Canadian Pilots Play Principal Roles in the Experiment

28-HOUR FLIGHT

London, July 3 — (CP) — Two Canadian pilots — Sqdn. Ldr. F. M. Odell, R.C.A.F., of Montreal and Flt. Lt. W. S. Langham, R.A.F. of Toronto — played principal roles in the experiment that had a freight-laden glider flown the Atlantic, 3,500 miles of the Atlantic, the air ministry announced today.

Sqdn. Ldr. Gobell shared the hard and exhausting job of piloting the glider with Sqdn. Ldr. R. G. Seys, R.A.F. Flt. Lt. Langham handled the controls of the tow plane. Two other Canadians who took part in the flight were accident setting trip, P. O. Wrightman, Toronto, R.C.A.F. air senior radio officer, and Wing Cmdr. R. Dickson, R.C.A.F. pilot who was the deputy flight engineer.

Others in the crew were Flt. Lt. C. W. H. Thompson, New Zealand, pilot and Flt. Lt. Ronald Bailey, engineer PO. R. H. Wormington, Staffordshire.

Announcement yesterday of the completion of the first successful and hitherto untried glider flight of 26 hours duration and 3,500 miles distance was the first operation that in the near future speedy "sky trains" would be hurrying to and from the battle fighting fronts.

However, no official statement regarding that was given, air ministry officials preferring to stick to the word "experiment" when describing the flight that originated from the flying fields near Montreal.

Planned by Sir Frederick Handley Hill, Commander-in-Chief of the R.A.F. Transport Command, preliminary experiments were carried out with test hops near Montreal for months before the big transport and its glider headed for the Atlantic crossing.

Tests Very Trying

The final test was aimed as trying as an actual flight itself, covering a triangular course to and from Montreal by way of Baie

Statesmen Determined to Destroy German Philosophy That Causes War

London, July 5—(CP) — Labor Minister Bevin declared in addressing an Independence Day luncheon of the American Society here today that after the war "every possible step must be taken to uproot and destroy the abominable philosophy which had actuated the war powers of Germany for so many years."

Behind the whole of that philosophy is a "cold-blooded and calculated militarism," he added.

The great statesmen of all nations, however long the struggle may go on, however bitter it may become, in order to carry on their obligations to generations yet unborn will see it through to such a conclusion that there will not be another 1918.

"There will not be another opportunity for that third world war to take place," Mr. Bevin concluded.

Pounding its way through bad weather most of the time, the transport and its following glider made the trip at medium altitudes and at an average speed of 135 miles per hour.

Glider Crash Lands

Unable to climb out of the storms encountered on the way, the tow rope was cut and the glider landed. At one time they were forced to ride out a storm for two and a half hours when, according to Sgts. Lehr, Gobeil, the glider was buffeted "like nothing on earth."

Ebenezer's instructions were transmitted between the two aircraft by wireless. Position of the tug was given from time to time in darkness, or both, made the navigation of the glider possible, it was determined by Longhurst who worked out his conclusions by figuring the angle of the tow rope and the longitudinal axis of the glider.

Announcement of the successful test of the sky train came as no surprise to Belleville residents living near the Dorval airbase of the R.A.F. Transport Command.

They had watched the big transports towing gliders over their heads from Dorval almost daily. Many civilian owners would not pass for the weekend without one of these Canadian tests.

Older trains seen at Dorval sometimes included more than two gliders—craft strung behind transport planes.

foundland and Labrador.

Then, satisfied with their tests, the transport command loaded a glider with vaccines for Russia, radio, aircraft and motor parts, attached it to a big, twin-engined Douglas C-47 transport popularly known as the Dakota and headed it across the ocean.

The glider used had a wing-span of 84 feet, a freight capacity of 4,000 pounds and room for eight. Its mother ship with steel attachments designed to take a strain of 30,000 pounds.

COLOGNE DISTRICT

It was the third exchange in a week, after a long lull. The British guns opened up with a 15-minute barrage and the Germans fired back at irregular intervals, most of the shells landing in the Dover area.

The United States 8th. Airforce lost eight bombers on the Sunday raids, which involved a round-trip of more than 600 miles to Lacon and more than 300 miles round trip to Le Mans. Bombing results were good, a communique said, although more than 20 per cent station was met at Le Mans and Lacon. It was stated that seven enemy fighters were 'destroyed, the communique added.

R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. fighters and bombers roared over the continent Sunday, hitting at railway yards at Amiens and knocking down enemy planes, with a loss of four of their own.

Britain itself began its second week of respite from German air raids.

The Berlin radio reported a few "nuisance raids" over western Germany last night. Isolated bombs caused little damage in Karlsruhe, said the broadcast, recorded by The Associated Press. It claimed that five bombers and one fighter were shot down by the Germans yesterday.

Food Rationing

Minister of Interior Lawrence has warned Durban and Cape Town that food rationing may be introduced there owing to the critical situation by which the native and Indian population are particularly affected by shortages in rice, maize, meat, butter, milk. The situation is caused largely by increased demands of a large wartime floating population and the heavy cuts on convoys.

Railway Group For Army Work In Basic Camp

Stratford, Ont. (CP) — After six months of recruiting and basic training the 1st. Canadian Railway Troops Battalion is under command of Lt.-Col. P. E. Wootton, is gradually attaining its goal and speed, Lt.-Col. Wootton said he is up to required strength. Basic training is being given by the staff of No. 8 Basic Training Centre here with command assigned to Major D. M. Ross.

Lt.-Col. Wootton who was formerly assistant superintendent of the Kenora District for the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, is pleased with the progress of the officers, non-commissioned officers and other ranks and is looking forward to taking the battalion, force of trained men overseas, to Britain or to one of the other fighting zones.

Mostly Railwaymen

A veteran of the First Great War and one of the early volunteers of this conflict, Lt.-Col. Wootton has brought a wealth of railway experience into the staff of his battalion. Most of the men specially trained in the battalion's basic training here are railwaymen, from all parts of the country, with a sprinkling of men from the house across the border. Those in charge of the various basic training courses are experienced railwaymen in civilian days on the Canadian Pacific Railway and for the Canadian National Railways. Others served with the Canadian Northern and western Canadian lines. Many enlisted with other army formations and transferred to the 1st. Canadian Railway Operating Group upon its mobilization.

While Stratford is the home of the C.N.R. locomotive shops and a divisional centre, men of the Group are drawn from all railroading here. This phase of their military life will be taken at another place.

Meanwhile men who were not railroad soldiers on their enlistment to Stratford barracks were given their basic training. Others took more advanced work. All were "hardened" in the basic course which was developed under the supervision of R.S.M. "Windy" Clark of the Royal Winnipeg Rifles, a veteran who served overseas in this war before returning for training duties in Canada.

Different Trades

Railway operations are set exactly what their name implies. The first group here has brought together conductors, trainmen, firemen, engineers, telegraphers, telegraphers, operators, shop trades: men such as welders, molders, machinists, car repairmen, boilermakers and others who are specialists in the art of making repairs, castings from steel, brass, copper and other precious wartime metals. Administration troops such as clerks, stenographers, accountants and so on, not to forget the important cooks, and all to be found in the ranks of this highly specialized formation.

VANCOUVER ALERT ITS ARP SET-UPS READY FOR RAIDS

Six Thousand Men and Women Right Up to Their Job in Theory and Practice

(By MARGARET ECKER)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Vancouver, July 5 (CP) — A death and fire ever rains from the skies like Hitler's bombs as will in the John Does and the Caspar Milquetoasts who will save the city when it is the opinion of Group Warden F. O. Fish, of the city's A.R.P. organization.

And Mr. Fish says this goes for every hostile city in Canada, within easy reach of enemy planes, whether operating off aircraft carriers or airbases. Canada's Air Raid Precautions setup needs its executives—admits Mr. Fish—but when the sirens (banshees to Mr. Fish) sound it will be the quiet little man from the house across the street who will be the most conspicuous in last week's practices, running about in his tin helmet, who will save Canadian homes and Canadian lives.

The same thing happened in England. Civilian Defence started to recruit volunteers in 1935. Men and women enlisted—they thought—for the duration, with reservations, first aid. They held practice "blitzes" and air alarms, feeling self-conscious in tin helmets and gas masks.

Enemy's Objective

Mr. Fish thinks it can happen here—and that it is important that nearly 9,000 of Vancouver's 245,000 have been trained with him ever since Pearl Harbor.

"I'm no fanatic, strategist," he admitted to a Canadian Press reporter. "But, in my humble opinion, it might be to the enemy to thwart transport and defence of any city from the rest of Can-ada.

"Vancouver is a city of wooden houses, and a target is going to whet on fire."

Mr. Fish thinks if fire that may happen here is what Mr. Fish and his wardens think it might be. And it's no glamorous job, the chief warden is the first to admit.

"It's amazing—the way our warden's duty starts," said Mr. Fish. For three or four nights a week since ARP was organized here they've been patrolling their area. But Mr. Fish is proud that he still has 6,000 carrying on.

"They have to have the courage of civilian conviction," said Mr. Fish. "The men know they're sitting on a keg of dynamite, but they have to keep up interest, if they don't realize things may go off here any-time. And if they do, those men will save the city.

Women May Too

Working alongside of the men wardens are about 600 women—auxiliary block wardens, stooges and understudies for the warden himself. They have to know just about as much as he does—how to message catastrophies and casualties to the central depot, and how to clean up the wreckage if necessary. The Japanese may be so unobliging as to choose a time when the men of the city are at work, for their first raid.

Some Vancouver citizens don't hold much truck with all this ARP business and they have hard things to say about the chief warden and his workers. "They're the foolish ones," said Mr. Fish. "The average citizen—the people they know what ARP may mean."

Victory Garden Trampled, Uprooted

The pilfering from Victory gardens in Belleville and environs is arousing considerable ire, and rightly so.

The latest instance William Blakley, of Rossmore, who prides himself in the fact he had planted a victory garden of which to be proud. However, when he arose Saturday morning the sight that greeted him was far from pleasing. Not only had the garden been raided, not only trampled over his young vegetables, but many uprooted many of the tender plants and stole some of the more mature vegetables.

Although such actions are attributed to the work of juvenile delinquents the fact they are of the adolescent age does not condone such actions. This is not the first incident where Victory garden plots have been raided and garden vegetables destroyed and stolen and in the event of repetition some young persons are quite liable to find themselves in serious trouble.

Congress in Full Retreat in Stand Against Subsidies

By J. F. SAUNDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Washington, July 3 — (CP) — The stand Congress has sponsored so to be in full retreat today from its almost strong stand against government subsidized retail price rollbacks, conquering President Roosevelt a resounding political victory.

President Roosevelt's move means squarely up to the lawmakers yesterday by vetoing a bill which started '43 as legislation to continue the commodity credit corporation for another two years, then grew into a proposal outlawing the administration's program to pay processors as prices to the consumer could be cut.

Though both branches had passed this bill by huge majorities, the House of Representatives refused to override the veto. The Senate put that action until today with sentiment growing for some curb on subsidies, rather than outright prohibition.

The cave-in started after Mr. Roosevelt charged in his veto message that the action "blacks out the program to reduce the cost of living." President Gives Reasons

Mr. Roosevelt said he would not be responsible for holding the line against inflation if his wishes were over-ridden. He said:

"This bill completely outlaws the recent reductions in the price of meat and butter. . . . Congress will soon be compelled to put five cents a pound more for every piece of butter which goes to the table and to pay higher prices for every pork chop, game or fowl, every slice of ham or bacon.

Arguments that the public put Congress' subsidies first failed to take into consideration, the President said, "millions" of married workers, teachers, clergymen, policemen, firemen and others whose salaries have remained low but whose living standard are being cruelly and inequitably shaken by higher food prices."

Returning 301 to 84 to send the bill back to committee for further study, the House then voted 228 to 134 to uphold the veto.

HOMES AFLOAT HELP TO SOLVE HOUSES PROBLEM

Seug Cabin Cruiser and Lowly Houseboats Take Care of Part of Overflow

(By KATHLEEN REX)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Vancouver, July 5 (CP) — The yelling college lad on his way home from a post-hole. A few yards down somebody's radio is tuned to a symphony. A boat whistle quavers from the harbor. A sea gull answers.

This is Denham wharf. Families are solving Vancouver's housing problem for themselves. They're taking to the water. Not only from necessity, often from preference, men and women are living on boats. Is it entering a wartime movement. One family has had 31 years of houseboat life.

Writers, war workers, students and shipyard workers—they find not only is life more economical, it's twice as exciting when viewed from the hole-in-hole of a houseboat's deck of a fishing-sloop. Up and down Vancouver harbor, at the mouth of the Fraser, docks are packed with boats tied up because of fuel shortage. Owners have become landlords. They're renting them because it's better for a boat to be lived in than to lie empty and idle.

Veteran's Experience

Lyle Paul has lived on his float for five years. A veteran of the First Great War, a world traveller he has twice circled the globe, Mr. Paul is now security guard at an aircraft plant. He boasts running water, electric light, telephone and oil for heating and cooking. "My bills, including rents, don't cost me more than $15 a month," he said.

A woman walked gingerly, with all the carefulness of a landlubber along the narrow planking to which these homes are anchored. "You sure how I'll like it yet," she added. "My husband and I have bought that boat over there." She pointed to a snub-nosed little smack. "We're painting it now. I think it will be better than the rooming-house we were in. And it's so hard to find any good apartments. . . We may fix the engine and go out in it some day. I imagine if we can get the gas."

Houseboats on boats rent from $4 to $10 depending on the space they and hand. The Telephone and electric light is wired from the mainland. "But since the boats are on city property the only cupants cannot have city privileges. When the postman comes he must have the mail at the wharf office on the mainland.

As the tide ebbed, barnacles showed on some of the timbers. A well-fed bull dog ambled up and barked any hand. The Telephone and inspector counted 23 dogs out there, said Mr. Paul. "They don't go for strangers like land dogs—and they all get along with each other.

SELF-SEALING CLOTH REPLACES RUBBER

Manchester, England (CP)—Discovery of a method of water-proofing cloth without rubber, oil, wax or other materials was announced today and the "self-sealing" fabric now is being extensively supplied to the government for military purposes. It is said to be of the civilian market, but a big part of the production is for export.

The method was evolved by Dr. J. B. Speakman, of the Colour Chemistry Industry Research Association's laboratory. The "self-sealing" cloth resulted from the combination that if the fibre of cotton could seal when moistened, it could stop the interstices and make fabric water-holding without waterproofing.

A Noble Canadian

The sudden passing of the former Conservative leader the Hon. R. J. Manion came as a shock to the people of Canada of all political parties for Dr. "Bob" Minion possessed a charm of personality which made him a popular national figure. He was a man of great gifts, as surgeon, business man, author and as a statesman and was ambushed by the noblest motives in his every effort.

Mr. Manion was a man of intense activity. During the Great War he served his country, going overseas with the 21st Battalion, C.E.F. He served with the rank of Lieutenant and with a field ambulance. His keen interest in the soldiers was always marked and was a proof of the personal charm and deep sympathy he possessed. At Vimy Ridge he was awarded the Military Cross. During that war he was elected while overseas as a Liberal-Unionist favoring conscription in 1918 at the early age of 37. He took the post for which he was eminently fitted of Minister of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment in the Meighen Union Cabinet. He was reelected in 1921 and in 1925 and became Postmaster-General in 1926. In 1930 he filled the post of Minister of Railways and Canals in the Bennett Government until 1935 when the Conservative party in the last election in 1940 when the King Government was returned.

These many posts he filled with administrative ability and he worked tirelessly. His desire to give his best prompted him after his experience in the London blitz to arouse Canada to the need for an ARP organization among the civilians. He was no alarmist, but he believed in being ready.

Dr. Manion had many of the kindly characteristics of the family doctor. He possessed unusual enthusiasm and zest for all phases of life as stories of his heroism in the London blitz showed. He was observant because he loved human beings and so he wrote of experiences at the front in the First World War.

His passing has evoked many tributes from all parties, leaders and leaders in Canada's political life who noted his zeal for service, his perfect friendship, his high ideals of national life and of public service. One of the tributes to his wholehearted and devoted and brilliant service to Canada is in the 250,000 volunteer workers in the ARP organization.

Canada is proud and grateful that such a man as Dr. Manion had been called to serve this nation in so many ways. He has left a deep impress upon the Dominion for his wholehearted brilliant and unselfish service.

879 New Ships in 6 Months

In the first half of 1943 United States' shipyards contributed to the Allied merchant fleet the grand total of 879 ships of 8,818,622 dead-weight tons against the record of the whole of last year of 747 ships with 8,089,732 dead-weight tons.

June itself presented enough ships to more than meet the average rate per month to bring in about 19,000,000 dead-weight tons of new shipping for this year 1943.

This is dealing with giant power. It is a proof of the mighty industrial nation which the United States is. Against such resourcefulness and power, and against the power of Britain and the other Allies, and against the justice of their cause, the evil genius of Hitler and Nazism cannot prevail.

Goering Reported Ill

Hermann Goering, Reichsmarshal and head of the German Luftwaffe, is reported "seriously ill" with a "nervous breakdown with serious heart trouble." This may or may not be true, but there should be no surprise if other Germans, particularly the Nazis who engineered the Second World War fall ill. Hitler said Germany was not to lose a second time as she did in the last struggle but everything proves that Hitler, like the ex-Kaiser, was wrong, because the doom of German aggression is written in the series of events which have taken place in the past six months or—Stalingrad, the loss of all North Africa, without a vestige left of the whole continent of Africa, Allied air raids which smash German war industries to smithereens and so devastate the works and railway lines that the interruption to the war effort is having a very disastrous effect on Germany and on German morale. Such events are enough to disappoint greatly the men who plotted against world peace for the sake of German conquest.

Events are turning out the opposite of what Hitler and the other Germans believed. They must know what is ahead. They see the mounting wave of Allied power and realize what it means.

Hitler himself has been ominously silent for a long time and Goebbels has had to do probably all the propaganda work. He has had to go back on all the pledges that the Nazis made to the German people and has had to "play up" some of the conditions (for some he could not hide) in the hope of stirring the people to greater effort. But everyone remembers what Mr. Churchill said not so long ago when speaking of the great victory in Tunisia, respecting the surrender of the large army of Germans, that "the suddenness of the collapse of these armies of brave and skillful fighting men with every form of excellent equipment must be regarded as significant and in a sense characteristic of German psychology generally after Jena and after the first war" but he warned "no undue expectations should be placed on it."

Treasures of Malta

(Mr. B. D. G. Little in London Times)

Few of our lovers of Renaissance and Baroque have studied Malta's architecture on the spot, and there are few, if any, good photographic collections available. No expert profit and loss account of the artistic damage has yet appeared, so that interest in this part of the reconstruction task of Malta's towns and villages is harder to arouse than it need be.

Yet what we know gives ground for hope. The damage is seldom caused by fire and is perhaps more local than in the gutted wastes of calcined buildings at home. It is not as a rule reckoned in terms of demolition. Much of Malta's solidly built stone buildings are not unduly vulnerable to blast. Some buildings no doubt are hopeless wrecks. Yet I am told, by others, which I have myself seen to possess great architectural merit and exquisite Renaissance and Baroque decoration, are little if at all harmed.

I am told that the lovely old city of Natabile, the original capital, is intact. In all possible cases and they may well be many, scaffolding and loving care would be better than demolition. Extra funds, to be spent beyond those voted by Parliament, are needed. If Malta calls for it, expert guidance may also be a great help.

Churchill is Mobile Statesman

(London Times)

By no means the least of Mr. Churchill's services to the United Nations is that he has made himself the most mobile of their leading statesmen. Superior lines are a handicap to counsel as well to action, and without the Prime Minister's unfailing readiness to undertake the most arduous journeys, Allied leadership, seeking unity of strategic direction through the methods of free cooperation, would be at a heavy disadvantage against a system in which the word of an imperious telegram of summons and a special train to Berchestesgaden or the Brenner Pass.

Belgian Fools Naz's

How a Belgian fooled the Nazis by an apparently chance remark in a cafe, is reported in Brussels. He said he was hurrying home to hear the British Broadcasting Company's broadcast. He found the secret police on his doorstep. "Do you listen to the short-wave?" they demanded. "Every day," he replied. "Where in your radio?" "I haven't any," just listen to the German officer's set next door. I can hear clearly as the walls are so thin."

PRAYER

When all the smoke has cleared away
And silent are the guns;
When home come once again to stay
Our daughters and our sons;

When shelled is every flashing blade
And every foe hath fled,
God grant the peace that shall be made
Will keep the cannon stilled.

When all this agony is done
And comforted the pain,
God grant the peace that shall be won
Shall not be lost again.

God grant, when tyranny shall fall
And all it's power has passed
When freedom has been won for all,
This war shall be the last!

Hoarders One With Goering

There are analogies for the hoarder and hoarding in every mind to reveal him, even to himself. If he were one of a family at dinner, and because he got first choice could reach farther, piled his plate with all the meat available, he would have a time squaring himself on any score of fronts—decency, ness. He would be called by his right name as he should be in the larger family, which is the community. Actually he is one with the hoarding Goering, no less Germans the other week that whatever the fate of the conquered countries, they could be assured they would not lack for food. "We eat first" is the Goering platform, as it is the hoarder's. There can be no doubt that, with sugar, for example, if every householder had bought according to his or her minimum requirements, there would have been no call for rationing of that item. Nor would rationing ever be necessary if one and all would similarly restrict themselves to quantities which, informed opinion decides, represent an equitable division of the common supply. Rationing is necessary because among us there are those without social-mindedness, incapable of thinking in social terms.

43 ENEMY PLANES

Sciacci, Comiso and Milo were among Saturday's largest.

Apparently the Saturday night raid on Trapani was intended to finish off some of the damage started in a raid Friday night and 54 medium work the Italians had started in Sicily's west.

Thus the Allied bomber and fighter planes which had closed out last week's scourging of Axis invasion barriers with the opening attack and inaugurated a new week with a series of sorties which boded new and worse days for Mussolini's men.

Three raids were carried out in daylight Saturday against Comiso, and adjacent airfield at Biscari in Southern Sicily, Palazzo in Southwestern Sicily and Milo, the airfield adjoining Trapani, while aerial reconnaissance photographs revealed the Italians were also having up harder rehabilitation. Trapani northwest Sicilian port is only 100 miles from Cap Bon, Peninsula in Tunisia.

Heavy damage was done to buildings and to parked aircraft in the attacks, Allied fliers said.

Feared at Algiers

In Sending bombers and fighters ponded at Algiers airport in the northwest; at Chiltrand, in the north-central area; Milan, in the west-central area, and Capoterra, in the central area.

(The Italian Sunday communique also said that Sardinia was hit). Allied planes bombed Cetia, a seaplane base at the mouth of the Tiber River, at Civitavecchia and Rome, and Fulmicino, two miles north east of Rome, and at Orbetello and the bombers cruised repeatedly over Rome-in defiance of the fierce fire of the capital's anti-aircraft batteries.

"The Allies provided no confirmation of the reports of heavy Allied casualties in this theatre of war often delay announcements of losses for days or even weeks.

Heavy bombers of the Northwest African Strategic Air Force, Flying Fortresses and Liberators, based in Southeast Sardinia and Northeast Sardinia and Northeast Sardinia and Tunisia, were set in the Olbia railway yards and Olbia airport, Sardinia.

It was in aerial reconnaissance flights Saturday to assay the damage to the Axis that Allied fliers discovered a chain of demolition bombs which had been laid by the 9,000 foot quay line adjacent to the Mediterranean harbor. Also on the quay was the Polish request that an investigation be made by the International Red Cross of the German propaganda charge that the Katyn Forest massacre of 10,000 Polish officers whose bodies the Germans declared had been discovered in Katyn Forest, near Smolensk.

The Polish government later withdrew its request, but the bitter feeling between the Kremlin and the London exile regime did not entirely vanish.

Sikorski had conferred several times with Stalin in the last few years and mutual pledges of aid and protection of Allied success were exchanged.

DUCK-EATING TROUT

Dundalk, Ont., July 3 — (CP) — There's a duck-eating trout in a Mahaffey township pond said to be here. Miss Millie Marshall, saw a big trout grab one of her ducks as she was bringing them food the other day. It was the fourth or fifth duck to disappear from the pond. Now all kinds of lures are being tried on the duck-eater—except ducks.

MAE TO STAGE PLAY

Hollywood, July 5 — (AP)—Mae West, who did her share to glamorize the gay nineties, has gone back to work after a two-year vacation. Jason Robards announced today, during an interview, that she has started work on a musical film with Mexican atmosphere for Columbia Pictures. Miss West denied that she has written a play about Cafferine. Empress of the Barbary Coast, intends to stage it in New York this fall.

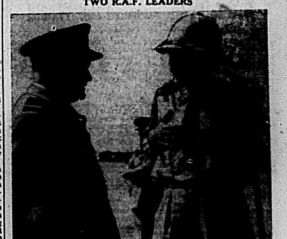
pre-war Polish military organization, and Gen. Sosnkowski, the lieutenant-colonel of Polish Legions in 1914, Gen. Kukiel, who has been a prominent part in the defences of Lwow and Przemysl against the Ukrainians in 1918.

He was commander of the Fifth Polish Army which fought valiantly in the war against the Bolsheviks, in 1921. Gen. Rowecki was named chief of the general staff and a few days later was appointed commander-in-chief of the Lwow army region from 1923 to 1928.

After Poland fell to the German invasion in 1939 he went home in England, as an official of Polish government-in-exile.

General Lived Simply



Sikorski lived simply in a small country house near London, with his wife and daughter, Zofia. Recently widowed, Gen. Sikorski was one of his characteristics.

One example of him by his countrymen was that he evidenced charity of thought, patience of decision and speed in action.

"Only when indecision is reached, execution must follow." It was his belief that the best that was possible he is liable to become impatient and abrupt with those around him.

As Prime Minister and Commander-in-chief he has at one time or another come to Canada to recruit a Polish legion, and then went on to Washington in May of 1941, where he conferred with President Roosevelt.

Almost a year later, in March 1942, Mr. Sikorski left for the United States and discussed Poland's position with President Roosevelt then a contested point with Soviet Russia —with President Roosevelt at that time he pleaded for full aid to Russia.

Last December he made a third trip to the United States to confer with President Roosevelt and also visited Avila Camacho of Mexico.

In his latter part of June Mr. Roosevelt sent him a secret letter by the hand of United States Ambassador Anthony Drexel Biddle, Jr. The contents have not yet been disclosed. There was some speculation it may have dealt with the Polish-Russian boundary question.

Target for Editorial

Shortly thereafter Sikorski announced that the Poles were eager to see action and he reviewed the Polish contingent in the Middle East on a tour through the states.

As recently as last April 26, Sikorski was the target of a bitter editorial in Moscow's Pravda, the Communist party newspaper.

Basis of the Russian outburst against the Polish government-in-exile was the Polish request that an investigation be made by the International Red Cross of the German propaganda charge that the Russians murdered 10,000 Polish soldiers whose bodies the Germans declared had been discovered in Katyn Forest, near Smolensk.

The Polish government later withdrew its request, but the bitter feeling between the Kremlin and the London exile regime did not entirely vanish.

Sikorski had conferred several times with Stalin in the last few years and mutual pledges of aid and protection of Allied success were exchanged.

Hon. G. S. Harrington, 59, Succumbs to Illness of Lengthy Nature

Halifax, July 5 — (CP) — A former Cape Breton member of Nova Scotia, Col. the Hon. Gordon Sidney Harrington, 59, died at his home here yesterday afternoon after a lengthy illness.

Taking no part in political activities since 1937, when he was defeated in the provincial election, Col. Harrington had been in ill health for several years. Last week he suffered a severe heart seizure from which he never fully recovered.

He is survived by his wife, the former Katherine Agnes MacDonald of Glace Bay; a son, Lieut. Gordon F. H. Harrington of Toronto, and two sisters, Mrs. C. R. Hickerson of Toronto and Mrs. H. B. Roberts of Dorset, England.

He served in the Canadian Expeditionary Force from 1915 to 1918, and was Deputy Minister for the Dominion's Overseas Forces under Sir Edward Kemp and Sir George Perley.

Col. Harrington was first elected to the Nova Scotia legislature in 1925 when he became minister of public works and mines. He was appointed premier in 1930 when Hon. E. N. Rhodes resigned to enter the Dominion cabinet.

When the Conservative government was defeated in 1933, and Hon. Angus L. Macdonald, now Canada's naval minister, came into power, Col. Harrington resigned his leadership of the opposite ranks.

Born in Halifax on Aug. 7, 1883, he was educated in the public schools here and at Dalhousie University. He set up law practice in Glace Bay, and was mayor of that city from 1909 to 1915.

YOU'D /BE SURPRISED!

By GEORGE W. STIMPSON

Protected, 1942, by The George Adams Service.

LAUGH AND WEEP

Laugh, and the world laughs with you,
Weep, and you weep alone,
For this old earth must borrow its mirth—
But has trouble enough of its own.

These famous lines are from the first stanza of the three-stanza poem entitled "Solitude" and written by Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

The New York Sun paid the poet $10 for the poem and printed it February 25, 1883.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox was born in Wisconsin in 1885 and began to write poems for publication when still a child.

She became one of the most prolific and popular poets and novelists of her day and before her death in 1919 published eight or ten volumes of poems in addition to numerous books of prose.

For many years she made it a practice to write two poems a day.

Around the turn of the century her autobiography of "Laugh, and The World Laughs with you" was challenged by Col. John Alexander Joyce, a picturesque and colorful soldier-poet, who claimed he had written the poem himself under the pen name of Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

Col. Joyce, the "Colonel" being of his own choosing, was born in Ireland in 1842 but reared and educated in the old south where he was a friend of Jefferson Davis.

After serving in the Union Army as a private and second lieutenant during the Civil War and being wounded in battle, he practised law.

His latter years were spent in Washington, D.C., where he died in 1915.

The controversy between Col. Joyce and Ella Wheeler Wilcox over the authorship of "Laugh And The World Laughs With You," came to the press at the height in the years and those of this minor controversy flared up at least occasionally.

Col. Joyce carried the controversy beyond the grave.

Shortly before his death he chose for himself a burial lot in Oak Hill Cemetery in Washington and had a three-sided shaft erected, resting place a monument on which he had inscribed, in addition to his poems.

"One of these was, "There is no pocket in a shroud, and "Laugh, and the world laughs with you."

Ella Wheeler Wilcox left a long book out of Col. Joyce, the work of the Irish sculptor Jerome Connor. The memorials soldier-lawyer and poet posed for his photograph standing by the monument erected to perpetuate himself over his grave.

The long and continuing evidence indicates that Ella Wheeler Wilcox, and not Col. Joyce was the true author of "Laugh, And The World Laughs With You."

Roseneath United church was the scene of a pretty summer wedding on Wednesday, June 30th, when Marion Grace Yarcoe, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Yarcoe, Roseneath, became the bride of Samuel James, only son of Mr. and Mrs. James Black of Ashworth. The church was banked with white and pale pink peonies, tall spikes of delphinium and pale pink canterbury bells against a background of ferns, provided an effective setting for the ceremony. The bride's pews were marked with white ribbon and pink bows.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a floor length gown with slight train, the white triple sheer over white taffeta, trimmed with gilt lace and with bracelet length sleeves. Her finger tip veil of white net was caught in a halo with white flowers. She carried a bouquet of red roses, and a double strand of pearls, the gift of the groom, were her shoes as the "something old" in the bridal costume completed the picture. Miss Maxine Comfort of Hamilton, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid. She wore shell pink palmted organdie over taffeta underskirt, with puff velvet, with puff sleeves. A hat of shell pink velvet with pink veil and with bracelet length sleeves. Her bow gloves, silver shoes, and a colonial bouquet, completed the costume. Miss Betty Bray, sister of the groom, was flower girl. She was dressed in a floor length gown of pink organdie, over which was worn a short dress of pink organdie, with pink roses with pink ribbon streamers, introduced a touch of picturesque. She also had flowers carried by the bride's aunt at the reception which followed. The ring was carried by the bride when she was two years old by Norma Kilpatrick, the groom's cousin. The flower girl carried a gift for the bride, and for the groom. Max Thain of Warkworth, supported the groom, and Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Alger of Cobalt, cousin of the groom, was the soloist. Mendelssohn's Wedding March and Schubert's Ave Maria were the soundscapes.

Miss Margaret Atkinson, organist, wore a gown of mauve chiffon, with a white hat and corsage of pink roses. At the bridal party proceeded to the altar she played Melody in F, Mendelssohn and after the ceremony Mendelssohn's Wedding March.

The bride and groom left on a wedding trip to Ottawa, Montreal and points east, the bride wearing a navy blue costume with navy and navy and white accessories. After their honeymoon they will take up residence in Warkworth.

Uplift for Sagging Breasts

Evelyn Keyes has a Beautiful Figure.

Oh! HELEN! FOR ALL WOMEN AMONG numerous defects that stems through poor posture are sagging breasts. If the chest is pushed high, as it should be, if the abdomen is flat, and held in close, if the backbone is erect, stretched full length all the time, the muscles of the upper portion of the body will be strong.

The afflicted lady should be fussy when she selects a brassiere. She can get one with the right uplift if she seeks an experienced fitter. Comfort is more important to have alterations made in this useful aid to figure control.

Treatment is successful in some cases, but the presto-change act from flabbiness to firmness isn't done in a hurry.

Every night massage gently with olive oil or cocoa butter; you are both good. Anoint the hands, rub them and then flattened fingers and gentle upward pres-trils, exhale through the nose. Rough treatment won't do; there is a chance of injuring the delicate glands. While doing this exercise, (straight) feet chair with figure erect. Continue for 10 minutes by the clock.

Stand tall, do arm swinging exercises. Swing the hand high. Swing far out—front, side and back. Swing the hands right and swing, pulling hard on the muscles of the chest. Do hard at a time. Five minutes of that.

Every morning lave the breasts with cold water. Use a large sponge for this purpose. Try not to shiver. Keep at it. Friction of the blood streams will be concentrated.

Dry gently, friction with eau de cologne using the fingers in the same manner as when you massage with lanolin.

Five minutes of deep breathing should follow. Stand tall, hands on hips. Inhale through the nose slowly, expand your lungs to capacity, hold a few seconds and there are no movements. Exhale through the nose. There may be some twitching of the muscles. That's because there's more frequently than do the attacks which may be slight, but there may be 100 or more of them a day. The tearing of the brain is called a psychomotor attack. During such attacks the victim sometimes makes quite complicated movements. Such attacks, which are rare, may not appear greatly abnormal to others, though they may last for a few minutes or even several hours, the patient has no memory of what occurred. The brain tracing in such cases shows that no seizure occurs.

In some cases of convulsions there may be a tumor or some disease of the brain. Hence, whenever a person has an attack such as those described, he should have a careful study made to find whether any damage to the brain has occurred. Hemorrhage into the brain at the time of birth, a blow on the head, arteries or veins within the skull, and conditions which may be congenital, as, or a collection of fluid in the brain, can be the cause of attacks which may be responsible for convulsions.

In certain cases of convulsions, treatment by surgery may be necessary, but in the vast majority of cases the cause of the convulsion is due to a tumor, blood clot, or other disease. Because in a few cases in which no damage to the brain can be found, drugs are helpful. The drugs usually recommended are the bromide bromides, phenobarbital and dilantin. Of course there are always used in the dose prescribed by the physician who is under his direction.

Convulsive Attacks Attributed to Brain Disturbance

Many of the convulsions which occur in various disorders can be prevented. For example, convulsions in children, in pregnant women, or during pregnancy do not occur when the toxemia is corrected. However, there are certain recurring types of convulsions which are due to some trouble in the nervous system, which cannot be attributed to prevent: for example, the convulsion of epilepsy.

Attacks may occur only at intervals of years, or some patients may have convulsions several times a day. The nature of the convulsion also may vary to a great extent. It would appear that a convulsion occurs when there is a disturbance of the function or action of the brain. The brain gives off electrical impulses. Experiments have been made of the discharges from the brain in patients having convulsions and it has been shown that these discharges are greater than normal, at a slower rate or irregularly. When the brain disturbance causing the convulsions develops, however, it still not known.

The most common type of convulsion is that known as the grand mal attack. This may occur at any time once a day or once or twice a year. In such an attack, the patient suddenly becomes unconscious and there are at first contractions of the muscles, causing rigidity or stiffness of the muscles. Tracings of the brain made during the attack show that there is a sudden outburst of rapid waves of high electrical energy. The rate of discharge is also increased. Following the convulsive attack, all of the electrical activities of the brain cease.

A second type of attack is called petit mal epilepsy. In this type, the patient may have momentary unconsciousness. They may last for a few minutes or even several hours, the patient has no memory of what occurred. The brain tracing in such cases shows no seizure occurs.

In some cases of convulsions there may be a tumor or some disease of the brain. Hence, whenever a person has an attack such as those described, he should have a careful study made to find whether any damage to the brain has occurred. "Alcoholics Anonymous" Hailed for Its Reading Assistance

You may have seen in the papers the other day where a workman picked up a gold nugget in the Klondike that netted him a very comfortable little sum. Thousands of people had passed by the same spot, but to the man with the "camera eye" went the nugget.

I wish to call attention today to another nugget many have overlooked—an organization known as "Alcoholics Anonymous" which enables the unfortunate drink addict to be rehabilitated free or charge, without cost, either down or, or smug scoldings.

The man who could never keep a job, who is losing opportunities, family, friends has a chance to get his pinsea opened up for him by this remarkable organization. The following letter explains itself:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"When I was married, everyone thought I was the most fortunate girl in my circle. I had a fine start graduation. My husband had a good position in a bank, in which his family had a considerable interest. But he began drinking, congenial to him. Even in the early days of our honeymoon I could never face the ups and downs of business without bracing himself with a drink.

"Later his distrust of himself grew to such proportions that he constantly depended on his flip-flask to get by. Then he was fired from his position, went from bad to worse, until we sank to pawning. Even my wedding ring had to go.

My husband is crazy about children.

"I stuck by my husband because I believe I understand him as no one else did. His better qualities are there, but alcoholic poisons are sunk in the rooted belief he was a failure. Everyone urged me to divorce him, but I couldn't. He seemed so helpless.

"Then one day I happened to read an article of yours in the newspaper, telling of the work which has been accomplished by Alcoholics Anonymous, and offering to send word how one could get in touch with their general organization. You answered immediately and I wrote them.

"The only thing the organization asked was that a victim should really desire to be cured. There were no drugs, no money asked for, no preaching. Patients handed out only brotherhood—a genuine fellowship. Many of them had been rescued from the curse of drink. At first the struggle was terrific. My husband refused the help he received, tried hard, and I believe that any man who puts up a valiant fight can be saved.

Gradually I regained again, my husband, the children and I, and I write this letter in the hope that it may accomplish for some other family what it has done for me.

I am now

A HAPPY WIFE

I shall be delighted to put anyone in touch with the central headquarters of the organization, upon receipt of a self-addressed, three-cent stamped envelope.

Sometimes she tis that binds a woman to a man is her hunch that another girl is waiting to grab him, the minute he turns him loose.

The saddest thing about breaking off with a man is that there is so much easier to forget his faults in his absence than it is to forget his arms and his kisses.

A girl's vanity is the thin that fools a man. It is always carelessly and unconsciously treating and getting burn the fire.

A man sometimes feels that he has been terribly unappreciated when he discovers that, just because he was married, he has become engaged to a girl for the garden.

The Victory Reading Contest has been won by Enid and Cory Curby Public Library. A number of others have been played and we hope that many more will be interested in it.

We think that the children will enjoy reading the books which have been awarded in the contest. The Victory theme is present in stories about Victory Gardens, the home and enemy-occupied lands as well as in stories concerning ships, planes and aeroplanes. There are other stories, too, which tell about children all over the world would like to read for fun.

Titles of books read will be entered in Victory booklets which will be given to the winners at the close of the contest. The names of those who have not been placed inside the large "V" Honour Roll may be hung with them on them"towards the end of the summer vacation.

The menus of our Victory Contest we hope to increase the children's interest in Victory Gardens, helping to help w make them good citizens.

SHANNONVILLE W.M.S.

The June meeting of the W.M.S. of Shannonville United Church was held at the home of Mrs. Fred Mordon with the president, Mrs. Frank Doxtator in charge.

A hi-jac-ed-chaus was read from Mrs. W. D. Robertson for the beautiful plant and card sent from the society, also for cards, letters and calls from the members. Mrs. J. F. MacFarlane took charge of the business. There was singing "Japanese Canadians." Mrs. MacFarlane, assisted by members of her group, put on a dialogue telling more facts about the Canadian Japanese. Readings were given by Mrs. MacFarlane thanked all who had helped her with the work in connection with the Red Cross.

A second type of attack is called petit mal epilepsy. In this type, the patient may have momentary unconsciousness. They may last for a few minutes or even several hours, the patient has no memory of what occurred. The brain tracing in such cases shows no seizure occurs.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECHEAM

It's Good Form Not to Take Gifts At All Engagement Party.

Dear Mrs. Beecham:

1. Is it proper to bring gifts to an engagement party?

2. If so, is it proper for the bride-to-be to open the gifts as they are given to her?

Ans.

1. There is no rule as to the propriety of bringing a gift to an engagement party. However gifts are "required gifts" but engagement parties are usually entertained given only by relatives and close friends, and these usually bring gifts to the engagement party. Then, too, if some guests take gifts to the engagement party, it certainly is likely to be embarrassing for those who don't, and they would then feel they should have brought gifts too.

2. If gifts are brought, the bride-to-be would, in compliment to the givers, open the gifts as they are presented to her, and thank each donor for her "gracious" words of appreciation.

Rule for Obituaries

Dear Mrs. Beecham:

Is there a definite rule about the form of notice for married daughters that should be used when a notice of the death of a husband or father is sent to newspapers? I have seen several forms used, and I wonder which is correct.

When the name of the deceased's married daughters are given, either Mrs. or Mrs. and husband's name is correct. That is, the notice may read: Mrs. Arthur Lee, Mrs. (husband) of Mrs. Arthur Lee, Mrs. John Thomas and Mrs. Gordon Wall, of "Eastwood," Miss Lee, Mary Wells Thompson and Sara Wells Ward."

In other words, if the title of the husband is used the married name should be used "... Mrs. Arthur Lee. If the title of Mrs. is not used the husband's name is used ... Esther-Mrs. Wells Lee."

In As in all other circumstances, it is definitely incorrect to use the title Mrs. with only the husband name. Therefore, the form (which you often see) Mrs. Ezbenezer Wells Lee is incorrect.)

Answering an "Informal" Bid

Dear Mrs. Beecham:

If a friend has given a buffet-party invitation, written on an "informal"?

— MAYE

If you are accepting, you may write on your visiting-card or "informal", from your name.

Wrm. Penn!

Sunday, June 27th., at seven. If you are unable, you may write above your name:

So sorry I can't come.

I'll be away that weekend

Or you may write a brief note of regret, stating the reason on note-paper, or on the inside page of your "At Home" card.

THE MIXING BOWL

Picnics on the Lawn

Hello @homemakers! Laughter . . . sparkle . . . colour! There's no busier time for those little folks than picnic time. And there's no greater relaxation for busy workers who realize that by strenuous labour and concentrated efforts they can help to secure security and freedom from tyranny.

Balmy weather brings vagrant wishes for a cottage by the lake. However, there's a shortage of gasoline and tires and all of us have duties to do, often with no time to waste on pleasure. So why not make friends with the home town park or even enjoy your own lawn where there'll be no worry about forgetting the most important item of lunch (which is often the one thing left behind)

As you probably know, "caring" the lunch for dozens takes planning and effort—if you make a big spread. The scheme is, therefore, to plan a simple, delicious meal using the food to be carried and the fire that's already started to make it a "foot-aching job.

Picnic Sandwiches

1. Sandwiches—of course save on time. Suggestions: Cheese, hot pulp, fish, cheese, eggs and raw vegetables.

Meat, now rationed, may be stretched out in sandwiches and it may be combined with relishes or salad dressings to give zest. Cottage cream cheese or old cheese (ground) may be combined with chopped green pepper, grated raw carrot or chopped figs. Cooked, left-over fish goes good mixed with minced celery or cress. Shredded bits of cooked meat may be used in nutritious fillings—green onions, cucumber, tomatoes, spinach, lettuce, etc. For sweets, try parkin, beet tops, nasturtium leaves, cress, parsley.

Vary the bread—use enriched flour, whole wheat, cracked wheat, oatmeal, tea biscuits, muffins or scones.

Stretch the butter—beat with milk or cream.

2. A salad bowl is always attractive. Try a tart jelly of cider and pepper shakers. In the bowl place small whole tomatoes, green onions, celery, cucumber, cubes of cheese, pieces of cheese, hard-cooked eggs, etc. Or to each small plate add sliced shredded greens, fruit salad, etc. And cheese sticks, salted crackers go well with salads.

3. To top off the picnic lunch, take out favourite cookies — oatmeal, ginger or fig-bars and of generous size—everybody will love 'em.

Tarts made with fruit filling or even a firm cream filling are more satisfying if a top crust is put on. Cakes baked in muffin tins are easy to handle—plain ones, or covered, are economical—because it wouldn't be surprised if the neighbour's kiddies join you. Other accompaniments for desserts are: cookies, fruit, nuts, fruit, nuts, etc.

4. Fruit in season or custard cups filled with the kind of mixture to balance the meal. For instance, if you've included lots of starchy foods you'll want to include lots of meat and/or vegetables.

5. The question of thirst may be solved by taking along milk, chocolate milk, tomato juice, fruit juices or lemon, iced coffee.

Remember Official Food Rules and include one from each of the above groups.

RECIPES

Seashell Spread

2 tbsp. chopped onion, 1 tbsp. fat, 1 cup thick tomato pulp, 1 egg slightly beaten, 1 cup grated cheese, ½ tsp. salt.

Cook onion, tomato pulp, cheese together until cheese is melted (about 5 min.) Stir a small amount into beaten egg and then egg mixture into hot mixture. Add salt and cook 2 minutes. Cool.

Fruit Loaf

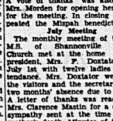
1 cup sugar, 1 egg (beaten), 1 cup hot milk, 1 cup flour, 1 cup fruit, 1 tsp. baking powder, 2 tsps. lemon juice, 1 tsp. grated rind, 1 tbsp. melted butter.

Add sugar to eggs, then melted fat, rind and fruit. Add sifted flour and baking powder alternately with milk. Bake in a greased loaf pan in moderate oven at 350 degrees for 45 minutes.

THE QUESTION BOX

Miss F. S. asks: Should bacon be cooked over high or medium heat?

Answer: Bacon should be cooked over medium heat and the fat drained off as it cooks, but not while cooking. Of course we save all fats. Some housewives prefer to use fats in dripping for salvage if not used in cooking.



Miss J. D. asks: Carrot strips and celery tops are useful to crisp up in salt and water in refrigerator.

Answer: Salt draws out juices. Raw vegetables require only a sprinkling of water (no salt) and a cold atmosphere for about ½ hour to crisp.

J. R. C. asks: Is it true that chicken feet make good jelly and how?

Answer: Yes, they contain gelatine. Scald, skin, cut off nails and then cook in about a pint of water for each child, add pieces of meat for a mould.

National League Leaders Sweep St. Louis Cardinals In By Leading Loop by 4 Games

Break Dodgers' Hearts by Sweeping Three-Game Series

YANKS CROWDED

In baseball there is an old saying that the club which leads the league on the fourth of July will win the pennant, but in the National League there is a new saying —that the club which led the league on the fourth of July already has won the pennant.

St. Louis Cardinals battered Brooklyn Dodgers twice yesterday to complete a sweep of their three game series in Ebbets Field and today were on top by four full games.

A year ago the Cardinals, even with Johnny Beazley, Terry Moore and Enos (Country) Slaughter in the lineup, were 9½ games back of Brooklyn. They came on to win sensationally and spoiled the old 4th of July legend. But they created the new one to take its place, because few persons think the Redbirds ever will be stopped now.

The games yesterday seemed to break the backbone of Brooklyn's pennant hopes. Having lost on Saturday to Mort Cooper, the Dodgers banshed hawsily on getting at least a split yesterday before the day's biggest crowd at the major league season, 32,207 paid. The total turnout in the two leagues was 131,068.

Banked on Davis

In the first game manager Leo Durocher started old Curt Davis, who had pitched 19 scoreless innings, against Lefty Howie Pollet of the Cardinals, who had pitched a shutout in his last start, too, for nine innings; these two talented hurlers struggled in a gruelling, scoreless duel.

Then in the 10th the Cards clustered four hits and won 2-0 while Pollet completed a three-hit job and his second straight shutout. In the second game the Cards simply made doormats of the Dodgers, winning 7-3 with Max Lanier pitching six-hit ball and his teammates getting 16, including home runs by Walker Cooper, Whitey Kurowski and Danny Litwhiler.

New York Yankees managed to hold a one-game advantage at the top of the American League by splitting a doubleheader at Detroit while the second place Washington Senators were getting pushed around twice at St. Louis.

In the Detroit-show Ernie Bonham, the big Yankee ace, pitched four-hit ball for a 1-0 shutout in the first game but Frank (Stubby) Overmire, the Tigers' rookie star, retaliated with a five-hit 8-0 whitewashing in the nightcap.

Washington was beaten 4-1 and 12-3 by Jim Browne, who's recent spurt has brought them 18 victories in 27 games.

Chicago White Sox swept two games 5-3 and 9-1 from Philadelphia Athletics, who now have lost eight straight and 10 of their last 11.

Boston at Cleveland was postponed.

Boston Braves paddled Pittsburgh Pirates twice 3-1 and 13-0 with Red Barrett pitching four-hit ball in the first game and Jim Tobin allowing just six hits in the second.

New York Giants beat Cincinnati 6-3 in 10 innings in the first game of a doubleheader but Ed Heusser held New York to seven hits as the Reds won the second contest 6-1.

Si Johnson beat Chicago Cubs 2-1 with five-hit pitching, but the Phillies were beaten in the second contest 5-3 as Bill Lee held them to seven hits.

Saturday in the National League New York took two both ends of a doubleheader from Cincinnati, 7-3 and 2-1, while St. Louis trimmed Brooklyn 5-3 and Pittsburgh smothered Boston, 10-1. Chicago dropped Philadelphia 6-1.

In the American League that day New York dropped two one-run decisions to Detroit in a doubleheader, losing by 6-5 and 10-9 counts. Chicago beat Philadelphia 6-4. Washington took St. Louis by the same count and Boston humbled Cleveland, 13-4.

PREPARING FOR 36-YEAR WAR

London, July 3 — (CP) — The Rome radio, in a broadcast recorded by the Associated Press, declared today "we are preparing for a 36 years war."

The statement came at the end of a broadcast which said Germany was preparing an autonomous bomber fleet which would be employed only against Britain.

Still in a Tangle

Whither softball?

Maybe Pvray Harry Knott's softballers will be out of the woods by Christmas, but it's doubtful. After playing doubleheaders four and five nights a week for the past six weeks the local softball tangle is still perplexing. Although four of the eight teams in the two local loops are not much further ahead than they were last May, with the possible exception they may have accumulated more victories in the field than the remaining four. However, today Secretary Ted Schwab declared that No. 5 I.T.S. "Flyers" and Bonisteel Aircraft would tangle in a saw-off game tonight, a replay of the game of last week. The winner tonight will take over the final standing, top shot position. The same thing holds good Tuesday night when the Army of Navy Juniors play-off in a sudden death game with the Belleville Foundries and maybe by Wednesday the local softball picture might be cleared up and ready to announce some concrete form of league playoffs. After all teams can only sign players for the next ten days for O.A.S.A. competition, July 15th being the deadline.

Due to the curtailment of racing, Sporting Life, Britain's daily racing "bible" was temporarily suspended three years ago today, after 118 years of daily publication. The newspaper, which had many fans settlers in Canada, is published once weekly now.

Record's Fired Protest

Eddie Schricker, secretary of the local Ladies' Softball League, says he has a protest on his hands following Friday night's Bell-Sargent-Optical game. According to the allegations of the losing Optical team, the Bell-Sargent management played two innings with only eight players in their line-up. This might be a technicality, but it is in direct violations of the rules, if such is the case. Bell-Sargent contend they were forced to field a team of eight players after Marylin "Pudge" Donovan, their short stop, was injured. The protest will be heard some time this week.

Russ Collins in Navy

Local baseball fans will recall Russ Collins, who played a lot of baseball around the keystone sack for Belleville in the final days of the C.O.B.L. Well, Russ is in the Candaian Navy and still trying his hand at playing second base for the "Tars" somewhere along the Atlantic sea-border.

Another Pocketer Passes

It was with regret the hockey-loving public learned of the death of Edwin (Ted) Whalen over the weekend. Ted Whalen was better known to a previous age of hockey when he excelled as a rover player in the days when seven men composed a team, a rover being used, and no substitutes or alternates permitted at any time. Players had to stick it out the entire 60 minutes in those days, two halves of 30 minutes each. The late Ted Whalen played centre for the Belleville Intermediates of 1916 when the local seven advanced to the intermediate finals. A shifty centre player, Ted Whalen was a pastmaster at gaining the draw during face-offs, an art now considered considerably in the old style lateral passing game before the introduction of the present helter-skelter forward passing came into vogue. Incidentally, Doug Whalen, a younger brother and also a hockey player in his own right, died earlier in the year. The bereaved family the sporting public extend deepest sympathy.

Tennessee Hill-Billy

Although he is far from boastful, Wilbur "Toar" Morgan, former United States Marine hero who accounted for 32 Japs at Guadalcanal, comes by his zniping honestly. Morgan is a native of long line of Tennessee squirrel hunters and in the early years could shoot the eyes out of squirrels with his trusty rifle. However, Morgan says he was plenty scared at the Tulagi spot where he was creased by a Jap bullet. Never before has a wrestler received such an ovation as was tendered the likeable Tennessee hill-billy here last week. He meets Al Dunlop in a return bout at the Hume Arena this week when his popularity should be even keener, as the bout is being staged by popular demand of the playing patrons.

HE'S ALIVE!

No, it's not a scare picture, but only The Blimp, Sammy's latest freak who weighs 642 pounds. The Blimp will wrestle Jerry Monahan the little blimp weighing nearly 300 pounds, in an added attraction at the Hume Arena Wednesday night and what will happen even the contestants won't suspect.

This is only an added attraction as the main bout of the evening sees Wilbur "Toar" Morgan, the Yankee fighting Marine who accounted for 32 Japs at Guadalcanal before being wounded a year ago. Morgan meets Al Dunlop in a return match that was demanded by the wrestling-going public who attended the weekly shows at the Hume Arena each Wednesday night.

What This Single Room Meant in Ottawa

Ottawa, July 3 (CP).—A Toronto business woman, who had heard of the lack of accommodation in Ottawa, was more than surprised when she saw a card tucked under the glass top of the dressing table in a hotel room here. The card read: "The price of this room for one person is $5 a day. For two people $4 each. For three, $3 each. For four, $2.50 each; for five, $2.10 each."

What amazed her most was that the room was an ordinary "single" hotel room.

WALLET WITH MONEY SENT AFTER OWNER

North Bay, July 3 — (CP) — Herbert Dixon of Toronto was a happy man when he went to the police station here and found his wallet containing $113 waiting to be claimed. Dixon had notified police earlier of his loss and said he thought he had left it in a restaurant at Sturgeon Falls. Police there located it and sent it to North Bay.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 126

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Does your bidding seem to be just before it's in the bag? Do you feel your bids will fade just before you reach the grade? You can overcome the slump if you learn when to jump.

No bid in bridge is much sweet music as a one-jump bid in its approved spot. It relieves you of that what-shall-I-do-now-mama feeling.

O one-jump bid notifies partner you have discovered tricks enough to make a game, orders partner to help you keep the bidding alive until your side reaches a game contract in something.

To make a game, your pair needs (1) 11 tricks in a minor suit (clubs or diamonds) or (2) ten tricks in a major (hearts or spades) or (3) nine tricks if played in no-trump.

When should a player one-jump in no-trump? Only when he has been able to discover nine no-trump tricks in his partnership.

When can he do this? When he makes? Only when he has located ten tricks in his pair.

When should he one-jump assist in a minor suit? Only when he has seen 11 tricks in the combined hands of his side.

When should he one-jump in a new suit (takeout)? Only when he knows his partner has 11 tricks. Because he does not yet know what will be trump. And it's easy not in a minor.

How does a player discover or see or locate or know the number of tricks in his pair? He knows the number of tricks shown by his partner's bid. He merely adds them to the tricks in his own hand.

How does he decide the number of tricks in his own hand? At no-trump, he merely counts one trick for each high card (ace or king or queen). At a suit bid, he totals his high cards, and short cards.

Your partner starts with an opening bid of one heart and you have this hand:

♥ A K 10 6 3
♦ K Q J
♣ 8 9 7 4

Bids follow T-A-N; takeout, assist, no-trump. You have no takeout suit you have adequate support for an assist in hearts. Your first response should be a heart response.

You have five tricks; an ace, two kings, a queen, and a short card in clubs. Your response right now is three hearts, a one-jump assist in a major suit.

Five and five are ten. Even an expert is unable to change that.

Hour of Grace

By Margaret Gorman Nichols

CHAPTER 1

She saw it as she sat at the dining room table on the first morning at the island — Mr. and Mrs. Payne Christopher, who recently had been living in New York will occupy the house of Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Bayne, on Stuart Island for the summer." So they were coming back after five spectacular years lived almost under the sea. Every morning which she had furtively followed them in small newspaper articles this time and through pictures of Clara, but never one of Payne, in fashionable magazines. Though she did not notice the day of the paper that morning, it was a day in May with the majority of the summer residents of that picturesque Maryland and Island were or would be, as she was, more interested temporarily in the return of the fabulous Christophers than in events which were marching them inevitably to war.

The stone cottage, a relic of more prosperous days when her father lived, sat sturdily atop a hill from which the whole of the island and a good part of the Chesapeake Bay was visible. She had arrived from the Baltimore apartment yesterday with her mother and Toby, her brother, and all day yesterday they had diligently worked to remove the dust accumulated over almost a year and weeds grown tall and stubborn on a lawn that had once been almost as smooth. The house she had known and loved as a child, the house of her happiest times, would not be theirs a year hence. Not if progress values increased. Meanwhile it was as a beloved friend who takes a long while to say good-by but who will go in the end to return no more.

She had fought against coming this year though, she had to confess, her own sentimentality had fought with her common sense. In recent years she had had to outlive a good bit of the latter, but it had seemed to her vastly more important because it would have been vastly less expensive for her to go on with her job in Baltimore and for Toby to get another job. But he had had an appendectomy in the spring and their mother who spoiled him always and who had never been practical while her husband lived, had been certain that Toby needed a summer by the country and that she, Meegan, could earn a little by "minding" other people's children. In the end she had acquiesced, as she always did, finding it impossible to defy her mother's sweetness and genuineness and genuine concern over Toby's health. So hangure-on they were to be, objects of pity, doubtless to be invited out to dinner by their more affluent friends who knew that they had neither money nor servant. Of course, Meegan could earn money minding children while their parents went to parties and dances in the island house where heretofore she had danced and she could take them to the beach and watch them paddle gleefully in the shallow water while their parents sailed the swift, graceful little boats that so colorfully dotted the bay. She wondered who had had the fall boat now. Perhaps it had changed names more than once since she had sold it, had to sell it, crying over it in secret as though it had been a living thing she should know no more.

One of the odd things about her looks was that in a crowd few people would remember her or remember her it was only after one was with her and looked long at her that she was remembered for her clear sensitive beauty and for her mind so was clear and sensitive. For in a crowd she was too slight and decidedly fragile and there was nothing to distinguish her. She was neither vivid nor fashionable. But alone with her people had the habit of forgetting the subject at hand and thinking of the delicate strength of her face and the contemplation behind the brown eyes and the fair hair worn with careless ease. Almost, they listened so well that most people who had talked at length about themselves left her with the thought that she was an unusually intelligent girl.

Her coach juice growing warm, her coffee cold, she read again of the Christophers, the Christophers. What would Adele, with whom she was playing tennis this morning, say about the return of Clara to whom she hated with a hate unmitigated by the Post plain fact of it: who still loved a dead boy and wiped vile hatred of Clara was understandable when one realized that their loneliness and unhappiness had been fuel to keep her hate alive. Would all be thinking about Clara this morning. In the club house, over bridge tables, at the bar, on the beach and, of course, over the telephone and even in the servants' quarters? Meegan would talk of nothing else. Newcomers would be told the legend of Clara and of her marriage in the quaint, ivy-covered island church on a June day five years ago. Meegan thought, I was so young then. But it's a day I've never forgotten. I've never been able to forget Payne Christopher either.

Her mother and Toby were still asleep. She finished breakfast and washed the dishes and laid their places. Then she got her racquet and left the house and walked down the hilly, rolling hill, a moving white silhouette against the blue morning sky. But she was tense at the thought of meeting Adele and dreaded the revival of the tragedy of Jane Jerry O'Neill.

With her unfailing punctuality Adele was waiting at the high, enclosed, athletic girl with thick features and small eyes, she was sitting on the edge of the court swinging her old tennis shoe and wrinkled white cotton blouse. She cared nothing for clothes; she made no attempt to improve her looks nor straight, dark hair. Adele had never really cared about anything. Meegan had often thought, sternly, Jerry had died. Moreover, Meegan was certain that she cared nothing about the sports she participated so savagely and well that she was always shouting over which were never displayed in the spacious town apartment where she lived with an old servant. Poor Adele who had found nothing to do except to encourage her talents and grieve for a boy who was dead.

"Hi," she said as Meegan reached her.

She did not get up and grin her usual likeable grin which was one of the nice things about her looks which Jerry had liked. One of the nice things. Her honesty and generosity had overcome for him, as they had for most people who met her, the plainness of her face and the wholesome disregard of fashion.

She took cigarettes from her blouse pocket and offered them to Meegan.

"No, thanks," Meegan said.

"Stopped smoking?" Her voice was rough but friendly. Adele had always liked to hear her great wholesome laughter and of late she had been laughing more than she had since Jerry had died.

"Yes," Meegan said. "I stopped last Winter." She did not have to add that she had stopped for reasons of economy. Adele knew. "Is your mother okay?"

"Oh, yes, she's fine, thanks."

"And Toby, of course is as fit as a fiddle, the big lug. Other people get over an appendectomy in a few weeks. He has to have months beside many to recuperate from his. The lazy loon."

Picking an ash from her cigarette, she turned to Meegan. "You always looked at you straight, "Did you, by any chance, read the morning paper? You probably didn't have time. I can guess what's the coming home. They've taken the Haynie house for the summer. The Haynie house down there. How do you like that?"

"Yes, I saw it."

Adele's mouth was thinner than usual. She cried out bitterly. "She's had all the men in Europe and New York and now she wants to pick off a few here, the few she didn't pick off before she left! Oh God, how I hate her! Can't you hear her coming in triumph with her rich, good looking husband? I'll bet he's still fooled. I'll bet he isn't on to her yet. But she's got it coming to her and she'll get it yet."

Her vehemence made Meegan wince a little yes, she could see Clare coming back in triumph with her rich, good looking husband. It was of him she had been thinking most. It was of him she had thought when she had seen Clare's pictures and she had wondered if he had been with her and if such a plago to Clara had made him different. Two years seemed really indeed that could keep the image of one so sharply clear. Other faces had come and gone crashing as he had it was though his, as a pattern appliqued, stood out from all others, calling her attention to it with a quiet insistence for no reason at all.

She said, "I wonder if they have any children." A child of Clare and Payne would be beautiful . . .

Adele's words were as though sent by magic. "You can bet your life they never had a baby! She wouldn't go through with it. She's never lived anyone but herself. You know that." She raised her eyes, low, in which there was dark misery. "You were pretty young at the time. Maybe you don't remember. But you can't beat her. You can't defeat Clare like that. Every time she'll ever be defeated, is when she thinks it is herself accomplishing it and she's too clever for that ever to happen. She has years ahead of hurting people, my dear . . I wonder if she's ever hurt herself. He looked at me right out to me."

Meegan nodded, merely nodded because she had always been afraid it to discuss Jane. Perhaps it would be better if she said lightly, do you know I had the awfullest crush on him? I fell in love with him that one time I saw him. Couldn't that, couldn't he, . . Mother thought I was ill and should send for the doctor. I was totally miserable . . But somehow she could not be flippant about that which had touched her so deeply when she had been so very young. As one grows older or one learns to laugh at oneself and it is a discovery of the first magnitude. But about Payne whose face burned as a light inside, her and any jest she would make would be immediately transparent. I am over it, she thought. I am over it completely. Then my world was different, an easy and pretty world.

Now my world is often harsh with me and, if I am not careful, quite ugly . . .

Little Benny's Note Book

Humphree Bond was late for school again today. Miss Kitty said, Now Humphree if your lateness was absolutely unavoidable I'll let you off this time, but otherwise you will kindly maintain a more or less settled distance and remain a half an hour after school.

My shoes are kind of tight and I was kind of afraid to run in them, so I walked, and Miss Kitty said, I never heard a more makeshift excuse, you may remain 5 additional minutes over the half hour.

I wonder if anybody in this clean hustle bustle nation of the world hearing of the expression, unavoidable lateness? she asked.

Which Karel Lont quick weed his hand, saying, I happened to be walking in back of 5 enemy spies and I heard them planning to put a bomb under the reservoir and blow the water all over the city, and if I ran all a ways to the police station to give the alarm because I didn't see any policeman on the way, it would take a good set of time so I'd be unavoidably late.

Well I must say that's extremely far fetched to say the least, Miss Kitty said. If no one can give a more matter of fact and plausible excuse within two periods, she said, and I quick waved my hand, Humphree Bond you may stay asked me to help her across the street?

I said, that's a more plausible idea, but it would have to be a very old lady indeed to require enough assistance to make you late, Miss Kitty said, and I said, well that's not all, I mean supposing while I was helping her across I noticed that there was spots on them under her dress and I realized it was a spy instead of an old lady, and supposing the spy sake me all kinds of questions to get information and I told him all wrong answers to throw him off the track, and by that time I'd be unavoidably late.

I realize there's a war going on but that's no excuse for the entire class having spies on the brain, Miss Kitty said.

Manoeuvres Held Inside Armouries Due to Weather

Inclement weather conditions don't dampen the activities of the Argyll Light Infantry when and as it comes to manoeuvres. On Sunday the local Argyll regimental infantry unit was scheduled to take a complete army training period on their own parade floor. Under the supervision of Lieut. Kahlbfleisch, unit training officer.

Although the program had to be curtailed somewhat inside the armouries, the civilians present gained more than a general knowledge of what the reserve army training. We hope to have the whole programme printed later in the summer, however, Lieut. Kahlbfleisch, in charge, stated the Argyll Light Infantry unit was scheduled to go to military camp for a week in August next month. "Any man wishing two weeks' of active army training should get a vacation in the bargain can obtain same by contributing what the Argylls immediately," concluded Lieut. Kahlbfleisch.

A full day of training was gained by the officers and members of the local reserve army unit yesterday.

Delinquent Cones Subject to Fine

In spite of warnings issued by the local Salvage Trat officials a considerable number of Hastings County householders are delinquent in filling their income tax returns and, consequently, will be liable to the fine which has been imposed upon citizens were of the opinion that, having had their taxes deductible at the source, the filing of the returns was unnecessary, their total tax being adequately or more than covered by the amount already paid by their employers. However, although this amount was in excess of the total tax due and is generally coming from the government, the necessity for the returns by midnight June 30, made them liable to a fine. One case was explained where a man had the sum of $40.50 for his tax due and, because he had failed to have his returns made, was liable to a fine. At the same time, the employer had deducted from his salary the sum of $43.50. When the 5 per cent. fine was added to the $40.50 to $6.10, he discovered that he owed the government an extra dollar and instead of having a rebate coming to him. The fine is not imposed for failure to pay the income tax but for failing to file the Income Tax Returns. This neglect is going to cost several people, a few unnecessary dollars, in this district throughout the Dominion will amount to a fine total of unexpected revenue to the government.

ARMY CADET CAMP AT WELLINGTON IS LIVELY SCENE

Prince Edward County Villages Population Has Greatly Increased

TASTE OF ARMY LIFE

Visitors to Wellington over the weekend were surprised to find the village alive with lads in uniform and the school ground covered with khaki-colored tents. This is the ten-day summer camp of the army cadets from all over Ontario and Quebec and for the next week 1,000 to 1,500 cadets certainly make themselves noticed. They aren't a bit concerned at it! One of the boys remarked, on being asked his impressions of Wellington, "I think it doubled the size of this town, and added to it!" He added the characteristic reply, "O, it livens it up a bit."

They are from ten 12 to 19 years of age, and come from the various public-schools, and the majority of the two provinces. Some of these interviewed were from Ottawa, Millbrook, Lindsay, Windsor and La Salle, Quebec.

Among other things the boys are learning is their ten days of camp life, in the planned activities of the camp that they are mapp-reading, weapons, field-craft, rifle sighting and carrying and camouflage. These boys if they make good in the camp are eventually to enter an officer's training camp, and from there they will have some years of school to put in and so they have to do so before enlisting.

The Daily Life of Army Life.

The boys are getting a real taste of army life. They get all of crawling under the fence on the orchards, and through swamps on their hands and knees, and they do the 36-mile route march taken the day before, though it is suspected that it just felt like thirty-six miles!

Entertainment in the line of sport is provided every night, usually in the form of a concert, and some amateur contests are also held. Lake Ontario has been too cold for swimming except for the hardy. One boy said he had been wading in, but no place to go further. Another said "The water's all right after the first few minutes, because by then you're so numb you don't feel it. It's a relief after digging a trench, though," he added.

The boys eat in shifts and rise at six or six-thirty, depending on which shift they are in. Some of the boys were gloating over the fact that they wouldn't have to rise until six-thirty the next morning, the boys have to be in camp at ten and lights out at ten-thirty.

The cadets of one company feel that they aggrieved. Their corporal had K. P. duty on the first day of camp, and since the number of days camp was divisible by seven parades, they are also detailed for K. P. duty on the last day of camp. The other companies only have this unpopular service on one day.

Every place outside Wellington is out of bounds to the cadets, to the sorrow of many. "No matter what you do you're always late, even if two minutes afterwards," was one comment.

A street dance on Tuesday night is being eagerly looked forward to by the boys, though just what it is going to find enough partners. It is being arranged by the army with a ding down the street with a girl each numerically as near as the unfortunate comrades, most of whom are left to wait their turn to be in his place. A novel way of record raising was given a lad who had received a letter from someone better from—well, you guess.

Prize time is the last day in a tent. One boy was very popular with his tent-mates when he had made friends with the cook, and was also in possession of one of the movie' snacks. Sleeping on the floor has been rather cold, they admitted, but they didn't seem to mind.

Loyalty to schools and Home Towns

A very noticeable feature was the strong sense of cleanliness of the boys from the various cities. The cities they come from can never be thanked enough for the love of their citizens if these boys are any example. Loyalty to their schools was also greatly in evidence. "Rum, rum, rah, rah" for their town and schools was carried out consistently in a spirit of fun, however.

The camp closes on Wednesday and probably most of the boys have the same idea as the youngster from one cadet, "I'm looking forward to that train ride Wednesday, I'm going to sleep all the way home."

SAYS FRENCH PATRIOTS BLOW UP MAIN RAILWAYS

London, July 5 —(CP)— A Moscow broadcast recorded by the Soviet Monitor said today French patriots at Marseille reportedly blew up Germans military barracks, killing and injuring at least 30 Nazis.

The report, given out by the Soviet Information Bureau, said that in Paris a French patriot group hailed a column of German trucks from ambush, killing 30 Nazis and destroying 11 vehicles.

Many Trainees Urged To Help Farmers in Haying

One Farmer Gives Work to Dozen Men in Fields—Nearly All Farmers Require Help

HEAVY HAY CROP

The Initial Training School for Airmen again came to the rescue of farmers at the weekend to assist in the housing of the hay.

Many of the trainees volunteered to give up their prospective "forty-eight," or Saturday leave, to assist in what has become a most difficult situation.

One farmer gave work to twelve of the airmen in his haying operations, and many other agricultural hands asked for their help in cases where two teams were available for the drawing of hay.

It is not yet realized in the city how serious the labor problem is for over Hastings and Prince Edward counties.

There is scarcely a farm of any size in either county that does not have two additional helpers are not engaged to look after the care of the manifold operations now facing every farmer.

Hay Crop Bumper

It is not only the unprecedented hay crop that is waiting but the corn and the potatoes and other hoeings are in a deplorable condition and heeding. Canning-factory and seed crops will be ready to handle before long be ready for the harvesting.

One farmer at the front of Belleville, who has 100 acres of hay to take 120 loads of hay and only assistance is a 70-year-old boy to do the work. He requested three airmen be help out on Saturday.

Flight-Lieutenant C. Anselmbaugh, township, not far from Rossmore, has advised that he will have between 500 and 600 loads of hay. He has requested that 50 airmen be assisted at the weekend.

Flight-Lieut. said his wife in Thurlow township are all alone on a big farm. Both are too old for the strenuous work and they are struggling along and doing their best to meet if desperate situation.

Relief Needed

Instances like these can be multiplied. The greatest relief is needed there will be enormous losses in the hay crop for the want of all important in our basic war industry.

The airmen have given invaluable assistance and warmly have acted as far as military regulations would permit them to do. But they came to Belleville, not to farmers, to engage in farm work, but to undertake preliminary training to prepare them to go overseas and fight for Canada. That is the big and all-essential job they have set out to do.

Helping in Evenings

The Chamber of Commerce has received the names of a limited number of citizens who are willing to work from among our factory employees after supper hours.

Some of these have gone out to farms and helped in the evenings from 6 o'clock until dark. Others have given up their Wednesday half-holiday and have gone all day on Saturday.

A. Bruce Herity, director of sidney, had four of these citizen volunteers last week and reports the fine satisfaction.

Scores of additional volunteers are needed. Send in your names at once to the Chamber of Commerce, Phone 612. After 6 p.m. call J. O. Herity, Phone 613.

"Million Dollar' Rain in District Over Weekend

Sun-parched fields, gardens and lawns in the Belleville district literally soaked up the generous two million dollar rain, which intermittently fell over the area from noon on Sunday and Sunday evening to give new life to growing crops and vegetation. Measured by the rain gauge at the Belleville Water Purification plant, the rainfall for the period totalled approximately .85 inches.

Although there was a considerable number of thunder showers and coiled in the district, farmers and gardeners alike declared that the rain which will give new life to late sown grain crops, Raspberry patches, garden and tomato crops were badly in need of the moisture, it was stated.

Greatest benefit of the rain will naturally be felt by district farmers but city residents with aspirations of growing bumper garden crops and autumn vegetable requirements were also in the picture. Gardens also welcomed the downfall of rain despite the fact that it spoiled planning patches, and other outdoor events scheduled for the weekend.

Lawns and lawns will also get new life and Dad or some member of the family will be spared for a day or so the regular evening chore of watering the plot with the garden hose.

Hon. R.J. Manion Buried at Ottawa

Ottawa, July 5 — (CP) — Surrounded by men with whom he served in war and politics, the body of Hon. R. J. Manion today was carried in its grave in Notre Dame Cemetery here.

For the solemn requiem Mass chanted by Rev. Joseph Birch, St. Joseph's Church was filled with cabinet ministers, former ministers, members of parliament, government officials and old military and political associates of Dr. Manion who died suddenly on Friday night.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King, against whom Dr. Manion led the Conservative Party in the 1940 general election, was one of the pallbearers. Another was Hon. G. Cowan of Ottawa, and Dr. Wilfrid Bovey of Montreal.

"The love for Canada has been a passion and from the inception of his interest in public affairs, and he spent himself generously for the national good. His love of country and his fellow citizens," said Father Birch in a brief funeral oration.

"He was a true and faithful Catholic custom to deliver eulogies at the dead but this man lived well in the case of public men who have distinguished themselves by God and their country and who left rich greatness and nobility of character.

East Hastings Liberals To Meet in Madoc

East Hastings Liberals will convene at Madoc on July 16th to nominate their candidates in the forthcoming provincial election, it was decided at a meeting of party officials this morning. This is the first time that West Hastings Liberals will meet in Marmora.

At least five prominent Liberals in the riding are mentioned as likely to be candidates for nomination at the convention, it is rumoured. The most prominent among these is J. V. Hanley, president of the Liberal Association for Hastings, and former Warden of Hastings-warden of the county; Ed. Jeffers, Madoc, is also mentioned as; Peter McLaren of Tyendinaga, former candidate in the riding; J. Gough of Foxboro, justice of the peace for the county, and member of the Foxboro school board.

Toronto, July 5 (CP)—Damage estimated at $25,000 was caused by fire which broke out today in the Sunnyside Amusement Park here.

The blaze, first in a concession housing amusement booths and suited three quarters of a hundred firemen and police before it was under the blaze.

Chief J. Beeton of the fire department said at one time the whole park was in danger of going up in smoke, and a second alarm had to be turned in.

Bill Collins, an employee at the park, was taken to hospital with severe burns on his hands after he was trapped in one of the booths.

Officials said the fire started damage to the building would exceed $15,000, and a considerable sum to replacerable for the duration.

U.S. Fleet Ultimately Will Sail Into Tokyo Harbor—Knox

Seattle, July 5 — (AP) — The United States Navy ultimately will sail into Tokyo harbor, declared Navy Secretary Frank Knox today, then tyrants of the Tojo type will learn their aggression has been done away with, this globe."

Speaking at the launching of the destroyer Montrose here, Knox told the navy secretary said that Allied successes of recent days in the Solomons and New Guinea furnished ample proof that Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt had made no idle boast when they asserted that the initiative had been wrested from the enemy.

Any part of a Japanese air force with the temerity to attack the west coast would stand only the barest chance of returning home, he added.

U.S. Warships Used to Shell Japanese Positions

Washington, July 5 (AP)—Shelling by United States warships in the Georgia and Kolombangara Islands of the Solomons group has struck positions yesterday, the United States Navy announced today.

The big ship, Imperial and Interprovincial, were unchanged. Base fractions and the utilities and industrials showed small gains. Buying was better in Brazilian and Canadian Breweries.

Aunor, Lake Dufault and Macassa were active and higher by 4 to 10 cents and Beattie weakened 4 cents to 81. Steep Rock tightened 4 cents to 3.12 and Hudson Bay advanced 3-4 to 20 3-4.

The shells blasted into the enemy positions and presumably caused much damage to supplies and equipment.

The communique said that "a number" of warships took part in the bombardment.

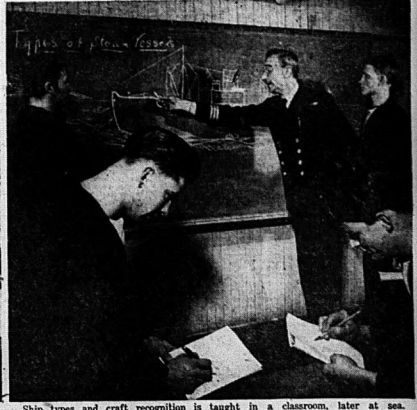
The cook — the lads at St. Margaret's call her Ma — likes to please the lads with appetizing, healthy meals, sometimes with a taste of "things to come".

In the dormitories the boys live as if they were in the foc'sle of a well-run ship. Here they relax or "make and mend" like good sailors. Some read books or magazines, others write home to their parents to tell them of their progress, or they study a point in tomorrow's lesson. More men are needed for training.



Ontario trainees Ivan Baker, St. Thomas, and Howard Lister, Hamilton, can find their position by sextant or "shooting the sun". Boys learn simple mathematics.

Commander Henry Milledge (R.N.R. Retired), chief instructor and chief officer of the school, shows Gordon Colquhoun of Winnipeg the model of a ship he once served on. It is made of raffia woven into shape and shellacked stiff.

Signalling is taught from the bow of the Bluenose, only ship in the Maritimes with no midships or stern sections. It is built on the ground beside school.

Ship types and craft recognition is taught in a classroom, later at sea. Commander Milledge, chief officer and teacher, leads lessons, the boys make careful drawings and list distinguishing marks in their copy books.

GERMANS REPULSED ALONG 165-MILE FRONT

ALLIED AIR FORCES STRIKE PARALYZING BLOWS

Long-Excepted Nazi Offensive Now in Second Day

586 Tanks and 203 German Planes Are Destroyed by Red Army Units

TERRIFIC FIGHTING

By WILLIAM McGAFFIN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Moscow, July 6 — (AP) — Vicious German thrusts by armored divisions and infantry have been flung back with heavy losses all along the 165-mile central front from Orel to Belgorod, the Russians reported today as the long-expected Nazi summer offensive moved into its second day.

Despite terrific destruction to their armored units, amounting in some cases to as high as 50 per cent of total attacking strength, the Nazi army kept hurling its mortally wounded divisions into the battle.

The Russian midnight communique said that in the initial onset of the battle they had put many units destroyed 586 tanks and 203 planes.

The midday communique reported an additional 153 tanks were knocked out of the fight, including a number of the new 60-ton Tiger tanks. In one sector alone in the Orel-Kursk area, the bulletin said, Soviet troops destroyed 59 out of a German unit of 130 tanks. The communique also reported 4,000 Germans had been killed in the area and 2,000 more in one sector of the Belgorod front.

The Russians acknowledged that the German had broken through their defence lines at one point on the Belgorod front, capturing two populated places, but said the enemy had been dislodged by counter-attacking Red Army forces.

"Hundreds of enemy dead remained on the battlefield," said the war bulletin.

Southwest of Mitenki, which is about 30 miles northeast of Orel, the German thing regiments of infantry against Russian hill-top positions which the communique described as "of great tactical importance."

May Soon Find Place in Ground Crew of Air Force

London, Ont., July 6 (CP)—Men with only one leg or one arm, or with one hand who have hitherto been rejected from military service because of these disabilities may soon find a place for themselves; in Royal Canadian Air Force ground crew, it was revealed today at No. 3 recruiting centre here.

A recent survey was conducted in R.C.A.F. hospitals across Canada to ascertain what percentage of such handicapped persons could be absorbed into ground crew for home service.

It disclosed that 20 per cent of each air force category could be physically disabled persons.

Under the contemplated lowering of medical standards, however, each category will receive only 10 per cent of such workers.

The move will be made, local officers explained, in an effort to replenish the depleted ranks of R.C.A.F. air crew.

The 85-foot tug, generally used to tow lighters and freighters for repairing ships, was conveying a large crew of workers and electricians to a ship in the basin when the accident occurred. She was believed unable to get out of the way of the other as the time. Twelve have been accounted for, seven of them picked up by the freighter itself. It was originally reported that there were four lives.

Meals Prepared in RCAF Kitchens Aim to Give Personnel Better Health

Toronto, July 6—(CP)— Squadron officer K. L. Jeffs of Ottawa, Chief Dietitian of the R. C. A. F., said in an address prepared for delivery today to the Canadian Convention of the Canadian Dietetic Association that the Royal Air Force is following a program of improving conditions of service and giving personnel better health.

Among the plan, dietitians supervise preparation of food in Air Force kitchens with the advice of the medical services on diet, ration changes and nutrition; cooks are trained to prepare food and given the benefit of methods and standardized recipes furnished by a test kitchen, and the findings of nutritional laboratories are utilized.

In addition, she said, a color film is produced under the direction of R. C. A. F. medical services and dietetic branch of the plan, for utmost health and physical fitness, and why those foods are necessary.

"In September, 1939, the ration which took effect the next month in Canada was very obviously obsolete in the light of new knowledge," So. Jeffs said. "Certain changes were made in 1940 and 1941, but R. C. A. F. foods adviser was not satisfied that the ration revealed "such deficiencies from the nutritional aspect" that in June, 1942, what is known as Ration 3 were adopted.

"This revised the addition of more milk, vegetables, oranges, tomatoes juice and ham to the ration, and the bi-weekly compulsory issue of canned tomatoes. An important part of the scheme was the further feeding in the R. C. A. F. school of cookery and four nutritional laboratories have been established under the supervision of the director of medical services for the training of personnel in conjunction with Canadian Universities.

3,000 Men, 29 Ships Canada's Naval Help In N. Africa Conquest

By DOUG HOW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 6 — (CP) — Three thousand men and 29 ships — that, in cold statistics, was the Canadian naval contribution to the conquest of North Africa.

To them in the Mediterranean, the figures credit three sunken enemy submarines, the probable sinking of a fourth, the probable damaging of a fifth. From their ranks, the figures say, fell the survivors of Louisburg and Weyburn.

Of these ships, four were corvettes and two were destroyers.

Of these men, more than a score won decorations, including two D. S. O.'s, three D.S.C.'s and two D.S. M.'s.

The human story of these seadogs and their diminutive fighting craft is the story of harsh action on the sea and in the air, of the protection of convoys, of combatting the forces that endangered the line of supply, of landing American shock troops on a dubious seacoast.

Canada's navy in the world navies is, in a fleet of flyweights. Her work is tedious, thankless, lasting task of the convoy. Her role in the African victory was that of protecting the supply lines which nourished the British divisions in the field.

She first sent 17 corvettes into the struggle, and steamed through a vast British fighting force. One combination of corvettes came out of the campaign with a record of 13 convoys conducted to their destinations with the loss of one merchantman.

The new corvette Ville de Quebec got the first enemy submarine Jan. 13 by combination of depth charges, gunfire and ramming. Six days later, the Port Arthur depth-charged another U-boat to the surface and a British destroyer gunned it to defeat.

The count rose to three Feb. 8 when the Regina pounced on an Italian submarine. The damaged U-boat was rectified to the Canseau and the "probably destroyed" to the bottom.

The corvette Louisburg fell to German submarine torpedo off a Sigyvy Feb. 6. Her commanding officer and 38 others were lost.

Canada's new Weyburn was due to enemy action of an undisclosed nature. Her commanding officer and six others were lost and an eighth pro-victim died in hospital.

SIKORSKI'S DEATH 'A HEAVY LOSS' SAYS CHURCHILL

Brig.-Gen. J. P. Whiteley, British Member of Parliament, Also Killed

ADDRESS IN HOUSE

London, July 6 — (CP) — Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons today that the death of General Wladislaw Sikorski, Premier of the Polish Government in London who was killed Sunday in an air crash at Gibraltar, is "one of the heaviest strokes we have sustained."

At the same time the House was advised that Brig.-Gen. J. P. Whiteley, a member of parliament, was among the 15 persons killed in the crash of the Liberator aircraft which was bearing Sikorski home from an inspection of Polish forces in the Middle East.

Representatives of the Polish government looked on from the gallery as Churchill paid tribute to the enemy told the House that "We learned yesterday that the cause of the United Nations has suffered a heavy loss.

"His personally directed the movement of resistance which has maintained ceaseless warfare against German oppression in spite of suffering as terrible as any nation has ever had endured," the Prime Minister said.

WIth Exterminate Germans.

"This resistance will grow in power until at the approach of the liberating armies it will exterminate the German garrison and tyranny of death.

Sikorski's body, meanwhile, lay in state today in the Roman Catholic Cathedral in Gibraltar.

Beside him lay the body of General Tadeusz Klimecki, chief of the Polish general staff, who met death in the same accident.

The crash of the four-engined Liberator took the lives of 13 other persons, including General Sikorski's 26-year-old daughter, Mrs. Sophia Leskiewicz, Colonel Victor Ujejski, chief of the Polish army operational section and an expert in military aviation, Colonel Alexander Kowalski and Fobiewski, Sikorski's naval aide; Adam Kulakowski, the premier's private secretary, and Colonel Victor Alexander Cavalet, a member of the British parliament.

JAPS MAY RISK FLEET TO STEM ALLIED DRIVE

Reports of Battle In Central Solomons Hint Engagement Near Its Peak

NO DETAILS GIVEN

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
Associated Press Staff Writer

Washington, July 6 — (AP) — Official reports of a naval battle in the central Solomons indicated today that the South Pacific offensive was rapidly gaining one of its most crucial objectives, the task of forcing the Japanese navy to fight or withdraw.

Even in the absence of word that major forces were engaged, this new Italian of the Solomons bombarded here as of great significance, for it showed that the Japanese felt compelled to accept the challenge that Allied air and naval forces in the South Pacific fleet in an effort to check the Nipponese drive southward.

The United States Navy Department's announcement of the battle said:

"Brief reports from the South Pacific indicate that a naval battle is in progress in Kula Gulf, north of New Georgia Island. No details of the action have been received"

The situation appeared to be somewhat similar to that during the fighting for Guadalcanal last fall which ended with the decisive battle of mid-November when American task forces smashed a Japanese sea borne drive to reinforce the island. The Japanese strategy at that time was to use intensive bombing until the climactic action was joined.

Fleet Divided Equally

While official reports have not commented on the Japanese fleet strength, it has been generally believe that the enemy's naval strength is divided about equally between a home fleet based on Japan itself and a South Pacific force probably based most of the time on Truk Island. Any great weakening of the South Pacific fleet probably would strain Japanese defence over vitality and there is considered to be not unlikely that the enemy would draw heavily on his home fleet to strengthen the southern squadron.

30 German Fighters Shot Down Over Sicily, Sardinia

Battles for Air Supremacy Fiercest Of Any Seen in Mediterranean

STRIKE AT GERBINI

By KELMAN MORIN
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, July 6 — (AP) — Allied Air Forces which shot down 30 German fighters, struck paralyzing blows at Axis resistance yesterday in battles for air supremacy over Sicily and Sardinia, it was announced today.

The smashing aerial offensive by the Italian and output islands went through its third straight day with bombers roaring over Gerbini, Marsala, Licata, Sciacca and Catania, Sicily and Villacidro in Sardinia — all of them bases for the defenders of Pantelleria, which fell.

In 24 hours ending yesterday, 61 enemy planes were shot down against a loss of 13 Allied planes, it was stated officially.

Fighters and bombers of the Northwest African Command was joined again yesterday by United States heavy bombers of the Middle East force which struck the Sicilian ferry terminus of Messina. The bombers started fires in the harbor, the railway station, supply depot engine sheds, a barracks, burned three enemy planes and then returned without loss.

Heavy Bombers Return

Heavy bombers striking at Gerbini was what is considered one of the most single-minded victories of the entire Mediterranean campaign. Thirty-two of 36 out of more than 100 German fighters attacking them.

Despite the spectacular and seemingly unlimited targets of Gerbini, the bombers successfully reached and bombed their objective. Their powerful explosives over the main airfield and nine satellite fields left 20 craters in the big four-engined craft participated in the raid. Outnumbered about four to one, they shot down an average of one enemy plane apiece and destroyed an estimated 25 more parked on the ground.

Three were lost.

They handed the Germans such a savage mauling that throughout the rest of the day only about ten enemy fighters rose to engage escorted bomber formations. Fighters downed five at that time.

Bombers of the R.A.F. and South African Air Force along the Sicilian coast and Sardinia ranged far and wide over Sicily and Sardinia. They found nesting hawks in their position but some anti-aircraft fire. Villacidro airfields and railroads in Sicily were raided by night bombers.

The 42 enemy aircraft lost in 24 hours included only those shot down in combat, not those destroyed on the ground.

In contrast, the German communique as broadcast from Berlin and recorded by The Associated Press asserted the British-American Air Forces "suffered heavy, mostly four-engined bombers, "in repeated Tunisia against the Sicilian coast.

(The Italian communique, recorded by The Associated Press, said the raids at Messina, Catania airfields and Augusta caused "limited damage and destroyers.

A Navy communique said that "sufficient details have not been received to give the full extent of this engagement, but it is believed that while some damage was suffered by the United States forces, considerable damage was inflicted on the enemy."

At the same time the Navy announced that the United States destroyer Strong was torpedoed and sunk Sunday night while engaged in a previously announced bombardment of Japanese installations at Kula and Vila on Kula Gulf, one of which lies between New Georgia Island and Kolombangara island in the Solomons.

Battle of Kula Gulf Believed Very Costly to Japanese Forces

Washington, July 6 — (AP)—The Navy communique said today that on the basis of incomplete information to hand, the Japanese apparently had caused the Japanese damage in the naval battle of Kula Gulf.

Details of the action, fought yesterday (Solomon Islands Time) and apparently all over now, still were lacking, but there was no duplication in authoritative quarters here to consider it as a major encounter with decisive bearing on the Solomons campaign.

The impression prevailed rather that it was an action between fairly light surface forces of cruisers and destroyers.

The Navy communique said that "sufficient details have not been received to give the full extent of this engagement, but it is believed that while some damage was suffered by the United States forces, considerable damage was inflicted on the enemy."

At the same time the Navy announced that the United States destroyer Strong was torpedoed and sunk Sunday night while engaged in a previously announced bombardment of Japanese installations at Kula and Vila on Kula Gulf, one of which lies between New Georgia Island and Kolombangara island in the Solomons.

VITAL SICILIAN FERRY TERMINUS OF MESSINA HIT

Fires and Explosions Caused in Harbor Area by U. S. Attack

SUFFER NO LOSSES

Cairo, July 6 — (AP) — United States heavy bombers, operating from bases in the Middle East, attacked harbor installations at the vital Sicilian ferry terminus of Messina again yesterday and returned without loss, a communique announced today.

The communique said fires and explosions were caused in the harbor area by the attack, carried out by the 5th United States Air Force. The bombers, a night bomber group, engine sheds and an infantry barracks also were hit.

Fighters and fighters were shot down, the war bulletin said.

The assault continued the steady pounding of Sicilian airfields and ports carried out virtually without letup during the past three days by Allied air power in the Mediterranean.

(New Allied air attacks on Sicilian airfields, among them Messina, Catania and Marsala, were reported in Algiers dispatches broadcast as broadcast from Rome and recorded by The Associated Press.

The communique said they caused "great damage and casualties."

(The communique asserted 51 Allied planes were shot down, 32 of them by bombers and 14 by anti-aircraft defences.)

reported an Axis raid on the harbor of Bizerte, a claim not immediately confirmed by Allied sources.)

The swarms of enemy fighters and bombers over Sicily raided new indications that the Axis has started aerial reinforcement to the Mediterranean theatre, where the overwhelming Allied offensive reach a new peak of intensity with near all-out attacks on Sicily and Sardinia and a British command-type jab at Crete.

Fighters rose in force or mere fighters in a desperate attempt to drive off British and American aircraft that bombed five Sicilian airfields and virtually all day Sunday in a mighty attack, but only five of the enemy were downed, 43 of them fighters, an Allied communique said today.

It was one of the bitterest days of the Mediterranean air campaign, the communique declaring, "the enemy resisted determinedly."

The heart of the land of the Mediterranean, small bodies of British paratroops landed in the hardest of Axis-held Crete from shallow boats, presumably launched from raided airfields, destroyed grounded planes, and a report said, "left a trail of fire and wildfire safely. The raid was announced last night in a Cairo communique.

In a broadcast to the Greek people over the radio, the British ministry of information in London declared that "the liberation of Crete is not an invasion" and cautioned Greeks not to betray themselves by premature resistance.

The hard, quick thrust, which caught the Axis unawares, was described by the Cairo communique as a raid.

Swarms of virtually every type of Allied bombers and fighters carried fire and explosives from one end of Sicily to the other in the Sunday offensive, starting before dawn and going on through the day.

Allied losses for the day were 14 planes, testifying to the fierce enemy opposition.

Betty Needs Rest Before Facing Movie Cameras

Beverly Hills, Calif., July 6—(AP)—Actress Betty Grable, worn by hours of desert travel and the nuptials—a pre-dawn marriage ceremony, returned here yesterday with her bridegroom, trumpet tooter Harry James, relying on getting a few hours rest before she faces the cameras today.

Miss Grable said she had been continuously on the move since 5 a.m. Monday when she boarded a train for Las Vegas, Nev., where she was married to the swing-music idolon after 13 a.m., yesterday. She had to make most of the arrangements for the ceremony herself, she said, because James was en route from New York by train and didn't reach the Nevada city until less than an hour before their marriage.

After the ceremony the newlyweds and their party grabbed a hasty breakfast and set out by private automobile on the 250-mile ride home, much of it over desert, and the bandleader told her she'd have to be on the set this morning.

They were married in the Little Church of the West by Rev. Dr. C. H. Sloan, Baptist minister.

Miss Grable is the former wife of Jackie Coogan, former juvenile film player now in the U.S. Army Air Forces. The band leader was divorced in Mexico last week by the former Louise Tobin, who once sang in his band.

Belleville Athletes Given Awards Won in Trenton Youth Week

Presentations Take Place at Belleville Rotary Club Meeting by Trenton Officers

Youthful Belleville athletes who won championships at the Trenton Youth Week sponsored by the Trenton Rotary Club last May received their trophies and other awards on Monday when they were the guests of the Belleville Rotary Club at their regular weekly luncheon at the Hotel Quinte.

Officials of the Trenton Rotary Club, headed by its president, George Cobley, and chairman of the Youth Week, Ernie Collins, presented the prizes to the local boys and girls who won championships at the meet. Judging by the amount of silverware and other medals carried home by the prize-winners, the meet should have been all Belleville.

Margaret Taylor was presented with a suitable silver trophy as champion in the junior girls' events. She attained the highest aggregate total winning the high jump and 50 yard dash and placing second in the ball throw. In the Intermediate girls' events Beatrice Gannon was champion and was presented with a silver trophy as well as runner-up cups for placing first in the 50 yard dash, the 75 yard dash, high jump and ball throw. She also placed 2nd in the high jump.

Junior boys' winner was George Wonnacott who was 1st in the hop step and jump and placed 2nd in the 100 yards dash, the broad jump, and high jump. Ken Sunnon placed 1st in the broad jump, 2nd in the 220 yard dash and in the hop step and jump and third in the 100 yard dash and high jump. The local Intermediate relay team of Gerry Moher, Dick Fitzpatrick, George Ryan and Vincent Massey were presented with medals.

Past Governor J. Owen Herity was honored by the town club when he was presented with a merit certificate in view of his association held during the Trenton Youth Week.

Youth Week Plan

Mr. Collins related in detail the program of the Youth Week sponsored by the Trenton Rotary Club, they had received every co-operation from Belleville Rotarians. At the Rotary meeting he stood out a challenge to the local club to stage a like meet in this city. "Youth is the brightest star in the sky today," he claimed. "We can't do too much for the boys and girls".

The luncheon meeting was the first presided over by the new club president, Jack Deacon, who fell into his duties responsibility with an ease of manner which belied the fact he was a tyro at the job. He started his term as president with the announcement that prospects for new club members were bright. Several new names would be recommended to the club, he said.

Rotarian Deacon congratulated the Trenton Club members on the success of their Youth Week stating that it had proved a "really worth while project" and that their invitation for Belleville to stage a like meet "was a worth while challenge."

Among the visitors at the luncheon was Mr. John Hayes, former Belleville boy who is past governor of the Toronto Rotary club. Noted for his acts of charity, Mr. Hayes offered to donate a prize for any worthy project to be sponsored by the Belleville club. The amount of the prize and for what it would be given was left to Mr. W. B. Beacon when the offer was accepted by President Jack Deacon.

Leo Riggs was in his accustomed position at the piano while Harry Moorman acted as song leader, and Art Francis as sergeant at arms.

Argentine Letter

By LUCIE WALKER-LEIGH

Canadian Press Correspondent in Buenos Aires, July 6 — (CP) — Argentina has rapidly returned to normalcy since the sobriety and resolutely back to work after the revolution.

The general trend of opinion is that the new government of General Arturo-Ramirez will use clean sweep in cleaning up the accumulation of dishonesty, corruption, abuses and confusion which the last administration seemed to surround the previous regime.

There are convinced that the army officers who have taken control are really imbued with the highest patriotic motives and that, whatever self-imposed task has been accomplished, they will make way for a proper duly elected and constituted government.

Only a few days after their successful coup d'etat, the new authorities set in motion a campaign to cheapen the cost of living at once, dissolved Congress, dismissed three judges and "suspended" five others from their functions, accepted most of the resignations of the outstanding officials and appointed interventors to several provincial governments.

Feathering Their Nests

It was obvious that some high functionaries of the previous administration had been feathering their nests" and an early declaration by the provisional government was that none of its members would accept any emoluments beyond their regular salaries as military leaders of state.

The general feeling that itself was extremely well organized and carried out with the minimum of bloodshed and that it was very near still-born due to a dramatic episode now revealed, and which almost changed the whole course of events.

Before the revolt, the revolutionaries led by General Rawson marched on the capital from Campo de Mayo, military headquarters near the seat of the government, the general with an escort of about 15 officers had stopped at the home of his staff near Ciudadela Barracks. The group was surrounded by a civilian who told them that about 500 yards away government forces were advancing to attack the rebel troops.

Col. Montes gave orders to deploy trie, and face the impending danger. Rawson then went up to the front of the General and his staff. This position had barely been taken up when three tanks and a detachment of motorized infantry arrived on the scene.

Col. Montes commanded the government forces to stop. The officer in charge, Capt. Quintetro, covered Col. Montes with his gun and demanded his retirement, otherwise he would order the arrest of Montes. Col. Montes issued a sharp command to Quintetro's men who hesitated. Neither side opened fire, and the revolutionaries continued on their way without any action taking place.

After the successful conclusion of the revolution, a touching demonstration took place in the headquarters of the 2nd Infantry Regiment when Col. Montes embraced Capt. Quintetro and thanked him for sparing his life, thus continuing towards the success of the movement.

In Good Position

A few days before the revolution, the government took the public by surprise when it announced the figure for the 1943 budget. The announcement was accompanied by a plan of new taxation to meet the mounting deficit of more than 192,- 000,000 pesos. (A peso is quoted in New York at 29.26 cents.

In spite of this deficit, Argentina is in a better position than most countries at this time. Production, for one, was disapproving when the figures were published and said there is every effort within the government to face the fact that the actual deficit was as great as 500,000,000 pesos. This figure was quoted by La Prensa.

In addition, the government's message carried a comprehensive review on the general economy of the country. It said a national manufacturing industry should be built up, despite the fact that Argentine is a land of cattle raising country. The former government's plans for the future were built around post-war immigration and Europeans, whose admittance into the Argentine would be regulated according to the domestic market for tariff-protected indus-

Gen. Sikorski's Death

The tragedy of the death of General Sikorski, Premier of Polish Government in exile with fifteen others, including his daughter in a plane crash near Gibraltar came as a shock to the world and to the Polish people in particular.

Premier Sikorski has been bearing a heavy burden as commander of the Polish troops and political leader of his country in its resistance to the Hun and in its preparations for the assault on Hitlerism which will free Poland as well as the rest of the overrun world and the entire globe from the treacherous and foul aggression of Adolf Hitler and his Fascist associates.

Sikorski with the tenacity of his people and their love of liberty has been a stout believer in the day of triumph which will come to liberate Poland and free other lands from the grip of tyranny. Poland has written a deathless story of courage and her reward it is hoped will soon come with the destruction of the Axis.

Typical in his outlook, General Sikorski never doubted the eventual liberation of Poland and the punishment of the enemy. He lived to that time dream near though he will not see the crowning of the efforts of the Poles and their Allies in freeing the world. He has been the spirit of Poland throughout the years of the Polish Government's exile.

General Sikorski is a casualty of the war and will be looked upon as the hero he was by his life for his native land. He had just been visiting camps of Polish forces.

A message which he had written to send to President Roosevelt but which there was not time to deliver before death struck the Polish chief was expressed in terms of faith and conviction that the day was near when the Axis would be overthrown. He never doubted that the evil of the tyranny of Hitler and Mussolini would fall before democracy.

Poland has been called upon to endure great trials but her spirit is heroic. A new leader will rise to lead her to the achievement of the goal of liberation and freedom.

Safeguarding European Peoples

The British broadcast to the people of Crete on Monday telling them that the raids made on airfields during the night were "an invasion" and advising them for the moment to be careful of German tricks and to remain quiet and watch, shows the care the British are taking to protect the vanguard these people and those of all overrun Europe from the enemy. They are warned particularly that the Germans will try to drive the people into exposing themselves into premature action and into giving the Germans an opportunity of exercising their savagery on the overrun peoples.

The broadcast is made public by the British Ministry of Information was couched in these words:

"Special message to the people of Crete. You have heard a communique which announces raids in Crete by British forces. You know that these forces neither asked nor received any assistance from the local inhabitants.

"The Germans know this too. They may spread the story that the British have landed and that invasion has begun. They want to drive you into exposing yourself into premature action and into giving them an opportunity of wreaking their savagery on you.

"For the moment resist those tricks and remain quiet and watch. The Germans will commit their usual crimes and you may expect their so-called reprisals on innocent persons. If this happens you must bear it, knowing that the victims by their suffering and calmness contribute to the longed-for purpose of the common struggle.

"Furthermore the Germans know you have no responsibility for these raids. If they take action against you they are committing a breach of international law. They know they will be punished for any outrages they commit. The day is coming when they will pay for all their crimes.

"This time no action is required of you. This is not an invasion. The day is coming when the signal will be given for the warriors of Crete to fight side by side with the invasion forces to exact justice for your enemy's crimes.

"Till then stay in your places. Avoid giving provocation to the enemy. Await your moment."

Resuscitation

Because of the summer water hazard, the Industrial Accident Prevention Associations have sent out a special bulletin dealing with artificial respiration by the prone pressure method.

The timely bulletin is designed for factory bulletin boards. It illustrates the preliminary and general rules for resuscitation. The preliminary rules are:

Electric Shock — The victim must be freed from the contact as promptly as possible. Use a dry stick, dry rope, dry coat or other non-conductor. The use of your own hands is dangerous and may add another victim to the accident.

Gas Asphyxiation — The first thing to do is get the patient into fresh air quickly. Fresh air does not mean out of doors in cold weather. Do not breath gas yourself, even for a short time. If it does not overcome you it will cut down your strength.

Drowning — Quickly remove victim from water and place on ground or other hard surface. If possible have head slightly lower than the rest of body, so that water and other liquids will drain away from the victim.

Churchill's Great Decision

(Montreal Herald)

Among the greatest decisions in history was the decision of Mr. Churchill two years ago this June to range the power of Great Britain on the side of Russia — and it was an instant decision.

The same day that cables brought the news that Hitler had launched what Churchill has called his "cataract of horrors" on Russia brought also the cabled news that Churchill had ranged Great Empire on the side of Russia—would give Russia all possible help.

Neither in Britain nor on this side of the water was there any chance given by Mr. Churchill to those who, blinded by Communism, would have discussed the question "Should we help Russia?"

The issue was decided before the question arose, on the principle that he who hesitates is lost.

Said Mr. Churchill that same evening in announcing the decision to the British Parliament:

"The Russian danger is therefore our danger and the danger of the United States, just as the cause of any Russian fighting for his hearth and home is the cause of free men in every quarter of the globe."

We did not know then how scant was the margin of our safety any more than we could assess the inherent power of Russian resistance.

Girl Recruits Really Needed

(Vancouver Province)

There is nothing fancy or decorative or auxiliary about the jobs these girls of the three services do. The jobs are essential. If girls will not enlist to do them, men must be kept back from the fighting fronts to attend to them.

It is estimated that there are in Canada today about 900,000 young women eligible for enlistment in the three services. Of these, about 200,000 are already engaged in war industry. This leaves 700,000. Canada does not need so many in uniform. But she does need a good many thousand more than she has.

There is a silence, the child of love, which expresses everything and proclaims more loudly than the tongue is able to do. — Alfieri.

JUST FOLKS

WEDDING THOUGHT

I thought myself correctly versed
And rightly trained the role to play;
The scene we'd several times rehearsed,
But when I heard the rector say:
"Who gives this woman fair away?"
My thoughts went furiously astray.

I'd slowly paced the alter aisle,
Been out of step and in again,
On all who watched us I could smile.
Rehearsals cause but little pain;
They put upon the heart no strain,
But practice oft is done in vain.

And then the wedding march began!
The bridesmaids slowly led the way.
In came the thought: be brave! you can!
This is your daughter's wedding day.
A few more steps you'll hear him say:
"Who gives this woman fair away?"

Now this is real! A step or two
And you must give to him her hand
And turn away, your duty through.
It was for this her life was planned,
But should you lose your self-command
A few tears friends will understand.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

JAPS MAY RISK

The present fighting, therefore, confronts the Japanese with risks which they can ill afford, even in lighter units such as light cruisers and destroyers, ordinarily considered expendable.

It would not be surprising if the Kula Gulf battle started with a brush between opposing forces of raiding parties. How fully it may develop beyond that would depend on the importance which both sides attach to a naval decision in the present phase of the Allied offensive.

Fliers with Action

Allied Headquarters, Australia, July 6 — (AP) — The Solomons area of the Pacific offensive flamed with continued action both on the sea, where American warships moved ashore the ground from Into Kula Gulf, and in the air over newly-seized Rendova Island, the Allied High Command reported today.

(A navy announcement in Washington Monday night indicated Japanese and American warships were in the battle in the Kula Gulf. The Tuesday noon communique from headquarters of General Douglas MacArthur made no reference to such a battle but did confirm an earlier announcement from Washington that Rendova Island, located in the Gulf had shelled Japanese positions.)

Fires at the enemy air base of Vila, Kilombangara Island, on the west side of Kula Gulf, and at Bairoko Anchorage, New Georgia, on the east side were kindled by the shells of the warships and bombs dropped by medium bombers the night of July 4 and in the predawn of July 5, the communique said. Some 1,000-pound bombs on Bairoko which is above the mesquito control base of Munda, also in New Georgia.

Lose 127 Planes Since June 30.

Japanese troops within artillery shelling distance of Munda, the Japanese base in New Georgia, suffered a continued effort to halt expansion of action in that sector. Allied fighters shot down two of the down two of the Zeros and dispersed the remainder of the enemy plane. The Japanese now have lost 127 planes since the Rendova land invaded June 30.

The Japanese, on the offensive since virtually monopolized developments reported in today's communique. At the same time the 700 mile arc at Salamaua, New Guinea, Port Moresby and Guadalcanal bombardment of the Salamaua airdrome and air attacks on shipping continued between Salamaua and the Nassau Bay area, 13 miles down the coast, where the Allies landed last Wednesday.

Destructive air strikes in the Solomons area was directed by torpedo bombers at the seaplane anchorage base at Rekata Bay, on Santa Isabel Island above New Georgia.

LONG-EXPECTED

Regain Lost Territory

In the beginning, the communique said, the Nazi troops succeeded in occupying the Izyum bend in places. Counter blows struck by the Red Army threw the Germans back, however, and the Russians regained all lost territory, and more besides. German losses in the battle are huge, and great quantities are captured, the Russians declared.

(The Vichy radio referred to the Russian counter attack as "a fighting in the Orel sector, said today in a broadcast heard here." The broadcast Press that "Berlin comments insist this operation is of strictly local character.")

Yesterday dispatches reaching Moscow from the front told of the start of the battle just after dawn Saturday.

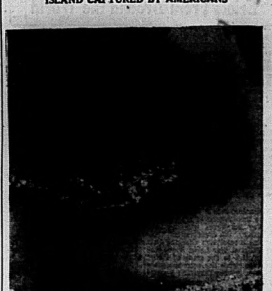
The Nazis, these advices said, used dash tactics in the attack, artillery barrages coupled with heavy tank concentrations, and with Stuka dive bomber men and guns and tanks. Behind the Nazi attacking line for the German infantry and armored divisions.

The Germans were firing with everything they had — long range artillery, mortars, tanks, howitzers, multiple-barrelled mortars and even short range weapons.

Withering Fire

Russian batteries countered with withering fire and as the artillery duel continued the Germans attempted various stratagems — such as suddenly switching targets in an effort to confuse the Russian troops.

The dispatches said the first wave of German tanks and infantry to reach the Russian positions found that the heavy barrage designed to halt lines though the Nazi attack had failed and that the Russian infantry was still there.



The succeeding steps in the assault appeared to be that Germans employing the familiar pattern of attack by tank units, followed by infantry and then by troop carrying bombers supporting from the air.

Large German infantry forces rushed into the battle on a narrow sector of the front. Following this way, front line reports said, were more than 200 German tanks of all sizes and descriptions, including the heavy Tiger tanks, as the British and Americans have already faced in Tunisia.

Low-flying groups of bombers numbering 30 to 50 in a flight came ahead of the German infantry forces.

The battle was joined and immediately developed into one of extreme sharpness and intensity both on land and in the air.

Say Admiral Robert Threatened To Dump French Gold Into Sea

By a Staff Correspondent

New York, July 6 — (Unan) — The boast of Admiral Georges Robert, who still styles himself rather pompously "High Commissioner of the French Possessions in the Western Hemisphere and Commander-in-Chief in the theatre of operations of the Western Atlantic," has consistently been that in spite of the economic blockade and of the half-starved and discontented population he Martinique he would be able to hold fast to the end. For months he was convinced that the United States naval authorities at Puerto Rico would not dare deal drastically with him.

To intimidate those authorities he has been reported to have told his visitors that:

(1). At the first appearance of a threat directed against him, the three warships, the eight tankers and the two big cargo boats moored in the waters of Martinique would be scuttled within half an hour.

(2). The part of the gold reserve of the Bank of France stored in the island (15 per cent of the total, or the equivalent of 300 million dollars) would also be sunk.

So as to carry out that threat with real greatness, Admiral Robert threatened to dump the 300 million dollars' worth of gold in the deepest part of the sea, reaches several hundred yards.

PENETRATING POWER

A bullet does not necessarily have the greatest power of penetration close to the muzzle of the gun from which it is fired.

Penetration is not the measure of striking power and depends on the type of bullet and the composition of the object that it strikes.

A bullet has its greatest striking power where it has its maximum velocity and greatest mass and momentum. Velocity is governed by the amount of powder behind the bullet, has a penetration, of eleven inches, whereas the same cartridge with the full patch bullet will penetrate fifty boards, the remainder of both being the same.

Other things being equal, the bullet that resists deformation most will generally give the greatest penetration.

The bullets used in the U. S. army service rifles of 15 years ago gave the greatest penetration at 30 to 35 yards from the muzzle.

Pointed bullets fired into sawdust, sand, loam and materials of similar description have an increased penetration at beginnings. When pillnied bullets were fired into moist sand at a distance of some years ago, the penetration was not limited as at 50 feet, 14 inches; at 100 yards, and 16 inches at 300 yards. When the same type of bullets were fired with equal force into boiler plate the penetration was .3 of an inch at 50 feet, .4 at 100 yards, and .1 at 500 yards.

Some materials offer less frictional resistance to soft bullets than they do to hard ones.

The penetration of war bullets might be greater in some substances than that bullets of the same shape and size fired with the same force.

How Famous Hotel Chefs Meet "Meatless Tuesday" Challenge

MEATLESS Tuesdays and rationing generally form a challenge and inspiration, to all cooks. That challenge has been accepted by the culinary experts of the Canadian National Railways Hotels, who also exactly the same problems as those of Mrs. Housekeeper; they must serve intelligent, appetizing nutrition to provide savoury substitutes. Chefs in Canadian National Railways Hotels—there are eight of them in as many cities of the Dominion—see "meatless Tuesday" which offer pleasant gastronomic adventure to meatless days.

Here are selections taken from a big list of Meatless Tuesday dishes served in National System Hotels. They have been prepared by men of international reputation yet each item presented can be prepared economically in any kitchenette with modest resources.

FRIED CHEESE SANDWICH

The fried cheese sandwich Edward Albert Gebhardt, Chef at the Macdonald in Edmonton, a hotel with a sterling reputation in that busy city, and throughout the West, vouches for the excellence of its dining room service.

During the Royal Tour in 1939, Chef Albert Gebhardt, who served Queen Elizabeth, were chosen as an official dinner at the Macdonald and chose present on that occasion combinations of delicious delicacies, both choice and appropriate. Here is Chef Gebhardt's suggestion for a delicious supper dish:

Bake a well buttered cheese sandwich with a slice of Canadian cheese ¼ inch thick between two slices of bread well, with a tablespoon of cream and a speck of salt and pepper. Fry the mixture on both sides and fry in butter in a golden brown. Put in the hot oven for five minutes to be sure that the cheese is sensitively melted. Serve very hot. It is possible to do without butter on the sandwich bread.

MEATLESS MACARONI SHEPHERD'S PIE

This suggestion came from Nicholas Gerbasi, Chef at the Nova Scotian Hotel, Halifax. He also suggested some excellent fish recipes but the Shepherd's Pie, a favorite in many Canadian homes, was selected as a basic recipe of an old friend. As given below it will make six servings.

2 cups small cut macaroni 1 onion
1 green pepper chopped fine
2 cups grated cheese 2 eggs
1 can tomatoes (drained) or salad water (not too well cooked) Slice the green peppers and onions, braise in butter or other fat. Mix cooked macaroni, cheese, eggs and milk together. Salt and pepper to taste. Pour in a small greased deep pan; bake in medium hot oven 350° F. for 30 minutes. Serve hot.

GNOCCHI NEW ORLEANS

Before we imposed travel restrictions as well as rationing, Canadians who found themselves at Sobo in London, Greenwich Village in New York, or the neighborhood of Fisherman's Wharf in San Francisco, spoke with delight of the gnocchi discovered in Italian restaurants and found unobtainable at moderate price. It is a real "find" yet Nicholas Gerbasi, Chef at the Canadian National Prince Arthur Hotel in Port Arthur, Ontario assures that it is well within the capabilities of every housewife and the possession of all good kitchens. Chef Schmidts adds mushrooms, but says that when the market considerations and price make them scarce and expensive they can be left out. The recipe provides four to six servings:

½ lb milk
2 whole eggs
2 cups flour
½ cup suet

B
1 cup diced onions
1 cup diced celery
½ cup diced green peppers
½ cup diced red peppers
½ cup sliced mushrooms (optional)
2 cups thick stewed tomatoes
1 tbsp. salt
½ tsp. pepper

Method: A—Whip all items into a thick paste and drop into slightly simmering boiling water through large piping bag, pushing gently. Drain off and fry with a little butter and grated cheese.

B—Fry onions, celery, green pepper and mushrooms till tender. Add tomato pulp and cook well, adding red pepper last. Season with salt and pepper to taste. If fresh, of course, cook them with the other vegetables. Add red cayenne pepper to make a rich hot flavor.

Put (A) Gnocchi in buttered bowl and cover with hot tomato sauce (B) Sprinkle with grated cheese and bake.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECHMAN

Bridal "Showers" Aren't Good Taste When Given Late, and by Relative

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

A girl friend of mine got married and has kept it a secret for almost a year. Now her mother has found it out and wants to give a miscellaneous shower in honor of the bride. Katherine.

For this girl's aunt to plan to give a shower for her now is certainly not be proper. This would hurt the feelings of the numerous guests of a "promotion" to equip the new home with miscellaneous furnishings. It's not considered good taste for a relative of either the bride or the groom to give a bridal shower, and holding a bridal shower so long after the secret marriage is too obviously has only one point . . . pressure.

When Wedding Bids Are Correct
Dear Mrs. Beechman:

1. Is there a difference between a wedding invitation and a wedding announcement?

2. Even though one knows that it is impossible for them to attend the wedding, because of distance, is it proper to send an invitation, or is a wedding announcement only?

3. Is it just relatives and very close friends who are invited to the reception, or is it the custom for more friends of the families rather than friends of the bride and groom who are invited to the reception?

4. If a girl's fiance is unknown to her parents, is it the custom for me to send him an invitation, or do I merely send one to boy and let her invite him? Jean.

1. Wedding invitations are sent before the wedding, to bid guests to come to the wedding. Wedding announcements must not be mailed until after the marriage ceremony has taken place . . . they are the formal news that the ceremony has taken place.

2. Yes. Invitations are sent to all relatives and intimate friends, whether they expect to come to the wedding or not. They are a courtesy, showing how to relatives and friends, saying in their friendly way, "We want very much to have you with us at our wedding." If many, or even quite a few, invitations are declined for a wedding, then if we receive an announcement it means that we are not considered an intimate friend and so were not invited to the wedding.

3. The number of guests invited to a wedding reception depends entirely on preference and convenience. All the guests invited to the ceremony may be invited to the reception, or the reception may be limited to only the families of the bride and groom, and a few intimate friends. The intimate friends are usually more those of the bride than those of the groom, or those of the families.

4. If you wish to invite a girl's fiance to your wedding, don't have the invitation sent without the invitation. Ask the girl if she would like to have her invite her fiance, and if she says yes, ask her for his address and send him a direct invitation. The reason for this invitation is not a proper or gracious kind of invitation for your wedding.

When Bridesmaid Is "WRONG"
Dear Mrs. Beechman:

My husband-to-be is a lieutenant. I have been his fiancee for years. I have invited to be my maid of honor has joined the WRENS. She is stationed in the west. In July, and by that time she will have her white dress ready. Is it all right for her to carry flowers?

S.H.

No, she would neither carry nor wear flowers with her uniform.

The Marry-Go-Round

How You Can Tell . . .

The young men of today are keen and discerning—slightest in their judgments of women. They are no longer "flying blind" when they choose a wife; they've learned to size up the situation.

Glamour girls and cuties don't dazzle them as more. They are looking for the new "charm-girl"—that intelligent bundle of charm, attractiveness and personality, alertness and good grooming.

Oh yes, they like some pretty wise in the ways of women. Yet, mixed with their cleverness and their frankness of the new type of "charm-girl," many of them prefer to be puzzled as to whether the girl they like really has designs on them for love or not. They want to be sure, and they ask for a definite sign.

Yet to a woman, the answer seems as easy as A-B-C. Whether whether a girl is marrying for love or just for advancement, for convenience or because all the other girls are married, anybody can tell except the MAN! And he is usually so confused by his own emotions or too scared at the proximity of marriage, to be able to see clearly. He's usually thinking about the prospect of a wedding that arises from a blissful blindness.

It is true, that while a man usually marries for one of two reasons—love or convenience—rarely a girl may marry for any one of a dozen reasons.

But you can tell whether a girl is marrying for love or for something else. Here are the fundamental trains of thought. For instance, now whether she concentrates most of her enthusiasm on engagement party, showers and planning a show-wedding or would prefer to have the whole affair done quietly and would rather spend her time with you in the moonlight than in shopping and rushing from engagement party to engagement party.

You can judge by her choice of a honeymoon trip, whether she wants to spend those glamorous weeks, alone, with you, or whether, before you sail, in some far-off, romantic port, she wants to meet all the folks together, or has set her heart on a trip to New York or South America where she can "see people and go places and do things."

You can tell whether a girl is marrying for love or for some-thing more "substantial" and material by looking her on her shopping tours, and observing where she places the greatest at the new kitchen gadgets and at baby clothes and personalizers or seems to be more violently interested in square cut diamonds, summer furs and the newest mode in hats.

You can tell whether a girl is marrying for love or just as an escape from spinsterhood or a job, by the excitement and triumph of marrying a man in uniform, by her willingness to share his dreamy or distrait and always planning how she will be able to help him when he's away on some duty, or by her willingness to be content with her friends.

And the suitor can always tell whether a girl is marrying for love or for advancement, for a meal ticket or things. And he can the man, if he will wipe the star-dust out of his eyes and observe her carefully.

Pneumonia, Heart Failure Among Ailments Benefited by Oxygen

Oxygen is literally the "breath of life." It is an essential chemical substance in the air we breathe and necessary in the chemistry of life. Our primary use oxygen in high altitudes to help them get enough to breathe because the atmosphere has less oxygen. Pilots of airplanes breathe Oxygen, too, is used to help sick persons to breathe if they need extra oxygen.

Early in the twentieth century, when oxygen was first used in treating patients, the funnel was kept at a distance of from six to twelve inches from the patient's nose, because it was thought there were dangers of oxygen poisoning. At present, various types of devices for administering oxygen have been invented so that the gas, which is a normal part of the air, may be administered in various ways without danger.

Treatment with oxygen for pneumonia, collapse of the lungs, and pneumonia, which is the lung and in acute heart has been found exceedingly helpful. A special tent is used to cover the clothes of the circulation due to hardening of the arteries which hinders the heart muscle with blood. This condition often responsible for attacks of severe pain around the heart. Slowing the patient's breathe in pure oxygen gives swift and considerable relief. It also improves the action of the heart by allowing the occurrence of a blood clot in the coronary arteries, called coronary thrombosis.

Mixtures of light gas called helium and oxygen have been used in the treatment of severe asthma and in cases in which there is difficulty breathing by obstructing passages in the lungs. These mixtures are used because they are lighter than oxygen and therefore can get into the narrowed bronchi. The method of giving oxygen is through a rubber tube that is put deep into the nose. Another method is to use a specially devised mask which fits over the mouth and nose. Even the most comfortable way of administering it is by placing the patient in an oxygen tent. In some cases a mixture of carbon dioxide and oxygen is used. This, it is thought, will tend to stimulate the breathing to a greater extent than the use of oxygen alone. It is employed in carbon monoxide poisoning, in drowning and electric shock.

Ten of Those Selected to Play In All-Star Game Fired Homers To Show They Are Ready

July 4th Bombardment Had Pitchers Scuttling for Dugouts

GOOD ATTENDANCE

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Now that baseball's booming fourth of July bombardment is over the Major Leagues can turn their attention round two Tuesday's annual all-star game—and some of the stars already have.

In the holiday celebration yesterday no fewer than 10 of the sluggers selected for the dream game at Philadelphia fired home run rockets for what might be considered signals to Managers Billy Southworth and Joe McCarthy that they are ready for all-star action.

The most spectacular fireworks was set off by Augie Galan of the Brooklyn Dodgers. He pulled the Dodgers out of a five-game losing streak by hitting a triple with the bases loaded in the first game and a grand slam homer in the second for a double victory over Chicago Cubs 6-3 and 8-2.

Bill Nicholson of the Cubs, Stan Musial of St. Louis, Mel Ott of New York and Vince DiMaggio of Pittsburgh, other National League all-star nominees who punished pitchers.

Musial's blow in the seventh inning decided the second game of a doubleheader at Philadelphia in the Cardinals' favor 4-3 and gave Howard Krist his seventh victory against one defeat after the world champions had been abolished 15-2 in the opening contest. The Phillies scored seven runs in the second inning and altogether made 16 hits, a round-tripper by Cooker Tripplett and one by rookie catcher Bob Finley.

Pirates Split With Giants

In the day's other National League show Pittsburgh bunched six runs in the third inning to beat New York Giants 8-4 and then was shutout 9-0 by Letty Ken Chase on six hits in the nightcap, when Ott hit his 12th homer of the season and fourth in two days for the Giants.

Cincinnati at Boston was postponed because of the weather.

In the American League New York Yankees reinforced their grap on first place by sweeping two games at Toledo 3-2 and 5-3, but the first affair was not won until Joe Gordon smacked his 9th homer in the 11th inning.

As a matter of fact, the Browns thought they had bagged the game with two runs in the ninth and were in the clubhouse eating ice cream when they learned that they hadn't. They thought they had tallied the winning run on John Lindell's three errors in the A. L. dugout, but after first allowing the run, the umpires yielded to the protests of Joe McCarthy that Milt Byrnes was entitled only to go to third, and called the Browns back on the field.

Besides Gordon, Chet Laabs and Vernon Stephens of St. Louis, Rudy York of Detroit and Bob Johnson of Washington, all American League All-Stars hit homers.

Home Runs Double

York's blow with two on figured in Detroit's 10-3 triumph over the Athletics, three Senators in a twinbill game played before 10,514 fans at Detroit, Johnson's with one on provided the margin of Washington's 4-1 victory in a twilight game played for 20,219.

Chicago White Sox split two with the Boston Red Sox, beating Tex Hughson 6-2 in the opener with the help of four Boston errors which led to three unearned runs then losing the second 6-1 on six-hit hurling by Yank Terry.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON

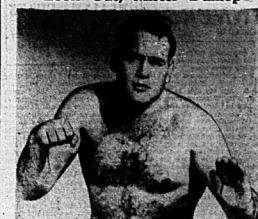
Somewhere in England, July 6 (CP)—There's nothing like a spot of sport to keep the boys on their toes, but the Canadian Army goes further than that.

A "work-plus-you-play" version of athletics has been adopted that gives relaxation and at the same time increases knowledge and signed forward handling with instructors.

Increasing in popularity, the stunt was tried most recently by the Army Service Corps of the Armored Division and competitions included sorting of ammunition and changing vehicle wheels.

Top honors at the meet, at which Sgt.-Cmdr. F. F. Worthington was a keen spectator, went to a divisional troops company which piled up 1,000 points more than its nearest rival.

A two-man team event, the Jeep wheel-changing race against time went to two Irish Columbian soldiers, Driver Wag Wagner of Vancouver and Sgt. McCousins of Victoria.



The champion divisional company won the ammunition sorting competition. Members were L. Cpls. C. A. Conner of Hamilton, Ont., and J. Bidiake of Vancouver; Pte. C. L. Kemp, Liverpool, N. S.; O. A. Grindle, Birch River, Man.; G. W. Baker, Cookshire, Que.; F. Malone, Winnipeg, and G. E. Friar, Saskatoon, of Victoria.

Five lads from London," Cockneys included in an armored battle company unit which won the softball competition. They were Sgts. J. R. Paton and I. C. Hodgson, Cpl. W. E. Blackwell and Ptes. A. Allison and L. C. Mote.

A sturdy signalman from Woodstock, Ont., emerged from the varied contests as outstanding athlete when the 12th Manitoba Dragoons held a track and field meet.

D. Blewett, member of headquarters squadron, won the running broad jump with a leap of 19 feet 3 inches, and the hop, step and jump with a try of 38 feet, 2 inches, to stand out as the only double winner. Just to show his versatility he placed second in the 220-yard dash, won by Tpr. N. Prokopanko of Winnipeg. Prokopanski finished second to Blewett in the broad jump.

Look Out, Mister Dunlop

It's none other than Wilbur "Tex" Morgan, the United States Marine who published 407 flops at Guadalcanal and claims to make a benny rabbit of Al Dunlop in their main bout wrestling go at the Mosque Arena, Wednesday night. "They call Dunlop, benny, eh? Well, he looked like a rabbit during for his bale work, but now I've got him into the main bout picture he'll look more like a rabbit pie," predicted Morgan as he signed to meet the Hamilton boy in the main semi-finale. Plenty of action was seen in Grand Circuit racing at North Randall, O., on Tuesday of the 1,296 American Stake for three-year-old trotters when Volo Song, heavy favorite, won the second heat. The year-old, finished 11th and last in the first heat and in the next two heat and concluded by taking the $1,296 purse. The winner of the first had to travel in the fast time of 2:07½ to beat Pinnegar Hal in the third mile. The driver of the winning horse was 70-year-old Ben White.

Playing coach and star player last season, Sammy Nixon led the champion Clippers in the Pacific Coast Baseball league has gone to Edmonton prior to enlisting in Canada's Armed Forces and his place in the lineup was awarded the distinction of being the most valuable player in the circuit.

Whirlaway, all-time cash champion of the American turf, made his last track appearance during yesterday's afternoon card at Chicago when he was paraded before the 35,000 fans by exercise boy, Pinky Brown. Because of a leg injury, Whirly is now in the role of a stud farm to live in retirement.

The two leaders among the six Canadian pitchers in the All-American Girls Softball League around Chicago are Doris Barr of Winnipeg, with seven victories in 10 games for South Bend, and Helen Nicol of Calgary who has pitched nine wins in 13 starts with Kenosha. Gladys Davis, formerly Toronto, is the leading batter with an average of .363. Shortstop Davis smashes 'em for Rockford, Ill.

Tommy White, former pro twirler with Canada Army in the Inter County Baseball Association, held the Terriers to three hits in the curtain-raiser of a doubleheader at Galt to win the tilt 4-1 but was charged with the loss of the second encounter when he went in as relief pitcher in the eighth innings with the score tied. The Terriers emerged victorious 2-1 on a squeeze play for the deciding tally in that inning although White did not allow a hit during the stanza. The winning run resulted from a walk, infield out, wild pitch and the squeeze.

The longest prize of the day at Polo Park, Winnipeg, was paid by Celebrate, owned by the Lewis stable of Dallas, Tex., when it won the $2,000-added handicap feature from the favorite Son of War of the Anita King string. Beverley Hills, Calif. Celebrate paid $25.60 for a $2 straight bet.

Twenty-seven rinks have been entered in the Ontario Lawn Bowling Association competition "which opens this evening on the greens of the Pernleigh Club, Hamilton. New York, July 5 — (AP) — The Empire City and Arlington Park Racing Associations are donating their entire holiday receipts to war relief today but neither track will be opened. RACING PLANTS IN UNITED STATES PROVIDE RECORDS

$2,564,124 Bet on Seven-Race Card at Jamaica, New York

LARGE DOUBLE PAID

By The Canadian Press

Big things, in a sports way, developed at the racing plants of the United States in the 4th of July holiday fixtures. A betting record for a seven-race card, totalling $2,-564,124, was run up by the largest crowd of the day, 41,792 persons, at Jamaica, New York, the program being sponsored by Empire City Club, the new mark wiped out the previous high of $2,333,385 which had been set at the same track only last Saturday.

The day was marked by the biggest daily double of the season at Arlington Park, Chicago, when 18 systems each collected $1,661 on the winning combination which included Mar, a 41 to 1 shot, in the first event, and Song Spinner, 10 to 1 shot in the second division.

The fans had to go back to July 5, 1939, to find the existing double-payoff record at Arlington Park—$33.20, paid on a couple of equines known as Lord Leander and Bluefield. The all-time world's record for a double, however, was established at another Windy City oval, Washington Park, Aug. 14, 1939, when the reward was $10,772.40 on the combined efforts of Joy Bet and Quick Reply.

The most bountiful races of the day were the $50,000-added Stars and Stripes Handicap at Chicago, which was won by Saunders, Irish-bred four-year-old, on a muddy track, and the $100,000-added Massachusetts Handicap at Suffolk Downs in which the winner was Count Turf-Ax. Eddie Arcaro, Wise, after a stirring stretch drive in sloppy going. A contending attention, was scratched from this event because he had kicked Stay self, during the previous night and was not in condition.

Rough Training

Nixson Denton, the Cincinnati Times-Star sports ed, tells this one but doesn't vouch for it .... seems that golfer Carl Landwehr spent some time last spring training his Irish terrier to retrieve golf balls.... recently he went out for a round of golf, taking the pup along, but every time he swatted the ball, the dog raced out and brought it back. Tiring of this game, Landwehr sat down at the edge of the rough and casually tossed a clone into some deep grass....the terrier went after it and returned with a golf ball in his mouth....Landwehr caught on immediately and when he started home he was fudged with 15 balls retrieved by the dog.

They'll Do It Every Time — By Jimmy Hatlo

CASUAL COMMENT
by K.J.C.

The trainer had two performing dogs on the stage. Then out for a booking agent.

"The act's good," said the agent, "but it's tame."

"Tame?" he shouted. "You don't mean THAT Billie dog is tame?"

"Naw," wearily said the trainer. "You missed the point. The big dog's a ventriloquist."

It's half over.

Behind Johnnie Bawden's four-hit pitching effort the Reliance nine took care of the 4 ITR. Flyers to assume the No. 1 slot in their group of the city league original schedule.

Tonight the Army & Navy juniors and Bell Telephones try the same saw-off, after which the leagues will attempt to reveal to the public a concrete picture of the City League softball playdowns. Reliance moved into the No. 1 spot last night, by beating Skipper Green's Flyers 4 to 2 and the winners had the pleasure of knocking Bill Colvin, the Flyer's No. 1 hurler, from the hilltop. Since the softball fans are concerned in tonight's Junior-Foundry saw-off, Cabe should have a more pitching experience in the last class "A" Eastern loop, where he pitched for the Harrisburg club in 1942.

Only a short time ago we suggested that if McCabe stuck with the Leafs until after July 6th he was as good as in. Strangely enough McCabe was optioned out on Independence Day, the day that all rookies fear. However, Ralph McCabe is leaving and will get more pitching experience with the Senators than with a team of the Leafs, who are battling for first place with every bit of strength. Manager Burleigh Grimes can muster these days. No doubt Ralph will return to the Toronto Club early in September after the Eastern League closes.

Remember when—

Suzanne Lenglen posted her fifth world's women's singles tennis championship at Wimbledon, twenty years ago today, defeating Kathleen McKane, No. 1 British player, 6-3 and 6-2. The great and temperamental French tennis star won the crown again two years later.

Some Bilmp statistics.

They tell us that Martin Levy, alias the Bilmp, not only weighs 942 pounds, but measures ninety inches around the waist. He is quite agile too, as he stands six feet and has actually kicked seven feet in the air, despite the fact he's advertised as the world's heaviest wrestler. The Bilmp meets Jerry Monahan here Wednesday night and ties in referee Cliff Pox's weight and you'll see over a half a ton of humanity in the Hume Arena all at one time and for no extra charge.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 107

LESSON NO. 108

BY SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

With yearning to learn and plenty to learn, a knowledge of bridge you may thirst. It may not take long. But don't get me wrong. The first 100 years are the worst.

Do your jumps like you drive? Do you start out of need? Do you bid because you have depth?

The Horse Sense method saved years of blundering through bridge. It peals off most of the errors and some coating. It comes right to the meat of every rule.

If so, you are jumping at the wrong time. Or you are shy some of the stuff you need for a jump in that particular spot.

Partners tell each other what they like for trump, if any. Also how many tricks they have. And they use signals to tell each other when they must bid again.

There is nothing mysterious about a one-jump bid. It is just a signal to tell your partner certain things. One is that you see tricks enough to make a game in some thing.

A takeout to a new suit orders partner to keep the bidding open for one round. A one-jump of any kind orders partner to keep the bidding open until at least a game is reached.

But there are times when your one-jump promises stuff besides enough tricks. Such a time is when you make a one-jump response at the first opportunity.

When you one-jump as a responder, you do not say you see in your own hand enough for a game. What you mean is that you see enough tricks with what partner has promised.

Another thing you must know about a one-jump response at the first opportunity. It shows something besides enough tricks for a game. It also adds a having two sure tricks in your hand.

That leads you into lesson number 108 in Horse Sense Bridge. It reads: In answer to an opening bid of one, an immediate one-jump response shows two sure tricks with enough tricks for a game.

Your partner starts with an opening bid of one heart and you have this hand:

- ♠K 8 3
- ♥Q 9 6 4 2
- ♦K Q 8 3
- ♣K 7 6

Your hand contains six tricks with two aces among them. Your first response should be two clubs, a lower suit than your three-card biddable spade suit.

If you did not have the two sure tricks, your immediate response would be one spade. But because, even with six tricks you should not one-jump at once unless you have a biddable suit.

There is a good reason for everything in bridge. Even for foolish things for export (half export).

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By CHARLES EDWARDS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, July 6 — (CP) — Some fans still blather about the theory that sport is being carried on, at government request, to maintain public morale. It is to laugh! Sport is dead in Canada — deader than most people realize because it died gradually.

True, a few fairly important leagues still function here and there but the big national and international spectacles that made newspaper readers turn to the sport section first, have practically disappeared. Many newspapers that carried two and three pages of sport before the war now are reduced to one page, and it's becoming interesting.

Some readers may not agree. But think back to pre-war days of colorful crowds at baseball games, were the major tournaments in golf and tennis — all now cancelled for the duration — and the annual meet of the Dominion Rifle Association at Canadian Military, the national championships in track and field, boxing and wrestling. There was the Dominion badminton tourney. All these have disappeared and with them the columns they occupied in newspapers. Most provincial sports, too, have sports have been cancelled, too.

The cause of the international sport have gone. There are no international matches for Stanley, Ryder and Walker Cups, Davis Cup tennis and the big tournaments at Wimbledon are a thing of the past. There now are no big rivalries between New England and Australia for the mythical "ashes." Old Country footballers are doing nothing but a skeleton of its pre-war body. There is no Grand Prize Car Yacht races, no big heavyweight title fights, no Indianapolis auto

Only important sports left to us are major baseball and minor baseball and a bit of salvage from our pre-war football, hockey, lacrosse, hockey and baseball are fading. All the sport pages have been folded except the American leagues and word of its demise is expected any day. The minor baseball circuits and ball leagues — Western International, Northern, Provincial and Dominion-American — have withdrawn from Canada or folded altogether. Only the International League continues to function in the sport sense there have been rumors even that long-established circuit might fold before another summer comes.

Basketball and lacrosse leagues still function, somewhat under the management shortages. Horse racing is flourishing where tracks can be reached by street car but many of the big meetings have been closed. Professional boxing and wrestling is practically fading.

Aside from these, nothing. It is small wonder the sport pages seem barren of interest.

Optical Girls Down Swacos By 4-3 Score

Jimmie Seaman's Optical lassies chalked up their second win of the season by matching a close 4 to 3 decision over the SWACO gals in a 6-a-side game at the Memorial Park on the Armouries last evenitde. The winners grabbed a two run advantage in the first inning and never headed.

Ev. Reid went the route for the Optical gals, and was seen at her best pitching advantage last year. Miss Reid rose in dizzy mound heights in the last stanza to strike out two and only failed to retire one aboard the runways. Norma Corbett fired circles for the losers and Colden's SWACO lassies, but her mates only failed to come across in the clutches.

Jimmie Seaman and T. Semark scored counters for the winners to open the scoring early while E. Delmore added 4 third in the second stanzas. E. Hill crossed the plate with what proved to be the winning counter in the third. The SWACO bagged their first run in the second when Lela Nelson raced home on M. Jackson's single. The losers scored single runs in every other inning with Lela Nelson scoring her second run in the fourth, while the last the SWACO gals could muster was a third and final run when Del Ronsky romped home on Lela Nelson's single. Incidentally when Mrs. Nelson wasn't scoring runs she was batting 'em in.

"East Side Kids"

A fast-moving act of times exciting story of the New York slum districts is told in "Heath Brooklyn Bridge," the Monogram East Side Kids picture which is now at the Capitol Theatre. Thrilling incidents follow one another in swift succession, and the picture makes a thoroughly satisfactory vehicle for the brash juvenile gangsters.

Leo Gorcey, Bobby Jordan, Huntz Hall and Gabriel Dell are the featured members of this refreshing group of kids who, despite their natural fondness for mischief, are at their customary forthright manner. Ann Gillis plays the leading feminine role, and Noah Beery, Jr., contributes his usual fine performance as a friendly but firm counsellor of the charming Miss Gillis. Others in the cast are Stanley Clements, Marc Lawrence, David O'Brien and Vince Mikhail.

"Juke Girl"

Tough fight spirit which kept Warner Bros. "Juke Girl" now at the Capitol whirling with left hooks and right crosses, boomed the business of Munby Calahan.

Munby, who among the better boys in United States boxing circles, now develops as a powerful man and physical training specialist as well as fighting man.

His somewhat complex assignment was to teach Richard Wheeler and Ann Sheridan, as Hugh Tobias to fight Howard da Silva, Pablas in fight Ceglia and Gene Lockhart to fight Reagan, Reagan to fight da Silva, and Tobias to fight Wheel.

Most the only one Munby missed was Ann Sheridan. "Who'd wanna hit her?" Munby explained. The universal news completes the bill.

AT THE McCARTHY

"She Has What It Takes"

Columbia's "She Has What It Takes," with its glamorous backstage hook, is now playing at the McCarthy Theatre with tuneful melodies galore.

Jinx Falkenburg, as a talented youngster who makes her first night in a Broadway musical, sings two numbers, "Moon On My Piano" and "I Should Love Hard On A Star."

In addition, Jinx, with a chorus of some of Hollywood's prettiest girls, presents a lively and tuneful time entitled "Let's Pull Together."

With Jinx and the rest of the cast are featured a comedy musical act, Hudson and Landi, who bring four specialties to the screen in the well-loved "Rancho Grande," "Home On the Range," "Honk Honk," and "The Wood-pecker Song."

The Vagabonds, well-known radio and club entertainers, also present their songs in amusing costumes, with hilarious musical pantomime.

In addition to Miss Falkenburg and The Vagabonds, "She Has What It Takes" also includes Tom Brown, Edmund Lowe, Isabel Lewyit, Joe King, Matt Willis and Thelma Rogers.

And feature hit is the thrilling picture "Pearl Harbor." Here is drama you will never forget.

AT THE BELLE

Walt Disney's "Fantasia"

Already there is tremendous curiosity about Walt Disney's "Fantasia" starting today at the Belle Theatre. Few people seem to know what it is all about, but all are terrible it—but those who have seen it are enthusiastic, or incoherent, or help their tongue over their front teeth trying a decribe the wonders of this revolutionary picture.

Usually such enthusiasm wind up with a firmly stated, "You've got to see it to believe it." The judgment been out originally as the critic of Esquire Magazine, who wrote the same comment—"It cannot be described, it must bee seen."

"Fantasia" is all things to all men, apparently. For the music lover, there are seven great masterpieces of music played by the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra under the direction of the mighty Leopold Stokowski.

It has drama, comedy, and unbelievable interest—above all, interest—entertainment.

The reader can be staggered by a few statistics, for instance. "Fantasia" was filmed in the Samuel Picture Academy Awards, including the Academy Award. Thaiberg Award, the highest honor the motion picture industry gives.

More than 450,000 feet of music were recorded on 8 separate sound tracks by the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra for the seven musical masterpieces which are "The Nutcracker Suite" of Tchaikowsky; "The Sorcerer's Apprentice" of Dukas; "Rite of Spring" of Stravinsky; "The Pastoral Symphony" of Beethoven; "Dance of the Hours" of Ponchielli; "Night on Bald Mountain" of Mussorgsky; "Ave Maria" of Schubert.

If you're beginning to think "highbrow," then let it be said there's also a jam session by the Philadelphia Symphony. And the "Dance of the Hours" is interpreted in the greatest slapstick comedy disney has ever created; while the "Rite of Spring" is a wild, new, primitive drama that will make you gasp. "Ave Maria" you can't put "Fantasia" into a category. Suffice it to say that Walt Disney has come back to where we start-ed.

The simplest way to put it perhaps is that "Fantasia" is pure music. That's slang, American —and true.

The latest news and an entertaining "Racing Royalty" complete the program.

CHAPTER 1

Adele lowered her head in what seemed to be a gesture of defeat. Her big, strong bony hand clutched her favorite raquet. Her voice was low when she said, "I feel sick when I think of having to look at her again. She's like a beautiful corset hiding something cheap and rotten inside." She looked up. "Will you mind very much if we don't play this morning? I am not in the mood for a game."

Meegan smiled kindly. "And the only time when I could probably beat you."

Adele grinned. "You've beaten me before, but why shouldn't I be the better player? I can keep in form and you can't. Besides, I'm sore at the ball and you hit for me. No kidding, I don't want to play today. Sorry pal."

"It's all right. Really it is. I should be looking up potential employers anyway."

Adele's voice rose again. "Are you still going through with that idea?"

"It won't be bad. I like children. And I'm not being a matry and don't feel sorry for me."

"Bosh. Toby sits on his tail and drinks juleps and makes passes at every pretty new girl! Oh, I give up. When are you going to get wise to yourself? There you are, the best looking gal on the island and you haven't sense enough to go out and take what you can! I'm not ask for it but take it! You can't fight for yourself. You use all your fight for those depending on you. You even defend Toby. I've never heard you make one nasty crack about him and God knows he's let you down."

"Oh, please . . ."

"Okay. I'm sorry. Maybe I don't know what I'm talking about anyway. No one needs me or depends on me. But complete independence isn't all it's cracked up to be. It doesn't give you any anchor. It's like that worn-out old line about not wanting to be the President because there's no place to mention to it. But if you're determined to go through with it, make them pay. Everything is higher this year."

"But I'm only an amateur, don't forget. I think I'll stop over at Sue's first. She has two potential customers for me and someone told me that her sister is to stay at night. She's afraid of the dark or something."

"I'll walk over with you. Do you think I'm a heel for letting you down on your game? And I thought it was going to be a swell summer, maybe our last. When we get into this war, it'll mean goodbye to leisure and a lot of things we've known and taken for granted. Some of the little guys will be on top and some of the big guys will take an awful beating."

"I don't think we'll seem to be any honorable way out of it. It would be dishonorable not to help, not to fight." But the thought of war like quicksand sucking in Toby and all those she knew, her generation, made her for a moment forget the return of Clare and Adele's private hate. War was everything she hated, the confusion, impermanence and dislocation as well as the pain and sorrow and loss. Already most of the young men she knew were in the service and there would scarcely be a young man to sight on the island by the end of summer. Why must it be? Let the fight be the fight of individuals, her kind of fight, for permanence and love.

Adele said, "At last Jerry will miss that. But on the other hand I don't believe he'd want it. Well, see you later. Sorry about our game. I'm glad for you."

They were standing before Sue's neat white clapboard house when Adele walked away and it occurred to Meegan that Adele was not playing in the direction of the clubhouse. Adele lived but in the direction of the uninhabited house to which Clare and Payne were supposed to live. And Meegan felt suddenly chilled as she visualized Adele's walking around the grounds and peering into the widows of the house when Clare would live. There was something sinister about it, something of a premonition of terrible things to come.

She had known Sue, as she had known Clare and Adele, all of her life. But while Clare was feared and Adele admired, Sue evoked both fear and admiration in her friends. Always she had been terribly efficient and terribly 'right' in her own mind. She had been a little girl who never looked dishevelled or skinned her knees. Now she was a young woman whose bureau drawers were as tidy as her personal soul and whose budget always balanced. She was an old but still repeated story that when Sue went to the hospital to have her first child, she had very crowded by a maid who had put up Sue's own despised at the bare hospital windows and Sue's favorite bedspread on the anonymous hospital bed and added other small personal touches to the sterile antiseptic room. Meegan had been a bridesmaid at her wedding to Van Ryan Armstrand, called Van by his friends, a gay and successful young man who, though still successful, drank more and more upon drinking to stimulate his gayety. Van liked nothing more than to give parties and to go to them, and while Sue who loved him dearly, gave them and went to them, one always felt that she never enjoyed them and would much have preferred doing needlepoint in a room with her children.

Brown-haired, blue-eyed, slightly plump now, she looked young and pretty in a red checked pinafore when she came to the door and led the way into the living room comfortable with wicker furniture and colorful with chintz.

"I knew you were coming down," she said in her rather haughty way of speaking. "When did you get down?"

"Yesterday. Mother, Toby and I."

"Oh, good. We've been down two weeks and having rather a time. Della, my maid, simply won't stay at night and I hate to leave the other maid-at my house in town to wait on Van's father. It's been terribly inconvenient. Della, you see, takes the bus and it's so late when she gets down in the morning and there's so much to be done for the children."

Maids simply did not do these things to Sue, Meegan thought.

She said, "That's what I wanted to see you about. I thought I might qualify as a nurse maid, a part time one at least."

"Oh!" She opened her eyes wide like a child and then dropped them. Meegan knew that she was ever embarrassed than she, "Oh, really . . . But . . ."

"I have to make some money this summer and I can't think of a nicer way to make it."

She smiled. "Oh, you are heaven sent! Just what did you have in mind?"

"Well, I thought I'd get a group of ten possibly and take them to the beach from eleven to twelve in the morning and from four to five in the afternoon."

"Oh, that's wonderful. That will give Della time to catch up with her work in the morning and to help with dinner and put up my afternoon.

"I don't really know how much to charge. I was thinking of two dollars a week per child, of course. Do you think that's too much?"

"Certainly not! It's the cheapest thing I ever heard. And Van will be delighted if you could come in the evening now and then."

"Of course. I'm going to make it a business. Van and you would never get out at night if someone didn't come to stay with the children."

"Come to think of it . . . why not try the people next door? They're new here . . . She tilted her small nose, a familiar gesture of disapproval. "They're pretty awful, to tell you the truth, and I can't imagine how they managed to rent a house in the restricted settlement. Nouveau riche, the Wilsons. They have a little girl and boy and simply scads of money, obviously and three servants. But the point is that the mother would do anything to have her children mingle with the other children here. You'd be a fool if you don't charge her more than two dollars a week."

Meegan tried to hide a smile, knowing Sue's old tendency toward snobbishness, her favorite and most cherished stories of her revolutionary ancestors and her little social world into which no one new ever penetrated. Sue's world was such a little world and such a satisfactory world to her that at times Meegan had thought that Sue blew new thoughts from her mind as fast as they came just as she would have no new people in her life because she was afraid of newness and change.

When the telephone rang, Sue excused herself and told Meegan to wait and went upstairs to answer it, explaining as she went that she always took her calls upstairs. Nothing then would prevent Della or her to take them downstairs once she had made up her mind to take them upstairs.

Meegan waited, feeling heartened and thinking in terms of cold dollars and cents and the fact that she could make money this summer and also have time to swim and play tennis and help at home. She could afford her pride. Meegan thought immediately that Sue had had bad news, for usually she moved quickly and her speech was of gossip with an old friend would characteristically make her hurry back to the living room. She was smiling a queer, twisted smile as though she wished she would laugh at the news but could not.

"Clare is coming home, for the summer. She and her husband have taken the Haynie house next door to me. It was in the paper this morning but I hadn't read the paper until lunch." Then she tried to laugh but it was forced, foolish laughter quite unlike her. "Isn't it funny, her wanting to come back after so many years? I wonder why?"

Meegan thought then that Sue could not know, she had said to only one name and that if she had not seen the paper that morning she would not have known that when Sue meant. There was only one Clare in the world for them had grown up with her. And even if they pretended that Clare was safely out of their lives, they secretly feared that she would come back and be what she had been in the past. Then Meegan knew why Sue looked uneasy and why her laughter had been forced and foolish. Van had been in love with Clare, too. They had all known it then and Sue had had not married Sue until Clare had married Payne. Sharply Meegan recalled that the only time she had ever seen Van really unhappy was the day Clare had married Payne in the island church. She thought this is change for you, too. But not nervous. Then isn't new to any of us. You can't exclude her. Your little world will have to expand to include her again . . .

"Yes, I saw it."

She tried to laugh again but her eyes and her hands were nervous. And Sue discovered nerves and had lost control or emotionalism in others.

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper pop got his fishing pole out of the closit and started to shine the shiny parts, saying to me, "Son this is the reel is jammed. That just proves it, he said.

Proves what for land sakes? me said, my pop said, proves that I shouldn't of listened when you argued me out of taking that fishing trip the last time Herb Lewis wanted me to go. All fine sensitive people like Walrus and fishing reels have got to be played on or they lose their efficiency. But no, you insisted on going up in the trip just because I happened to have a suspicion of a cold. Besides I shouldn't of listened to you, pop said.

Then you'd of listened to the mosquitoes, because there's a very small slip betwixt a cold and newmonia and you throw caution to the 7 winds and deliberately expose yourself to every unbridled extreme of the weather, me said. Really, William, I mean really, you haven't a leg to stand on, because you're quite wrong and I'm entirely right, and any child knows that much. Even Benny knows that much, he said. And I said, Sure pop, I mean ma's right, you're wrong, and dont ask me why to, he used to keep it working right.

Oh no? And where did you glean that piece of information pop said, and I said, I gleaned it from Mrs. Amelia Gabrielle Arie. We found an old sardine in the locker and we both had it on the end of your fishing line and played we was fishing and then we got sick of slow, and the fellows down on the dock would pretended they were fish trying to bite the sardine, so if anything happened to the reel it must of been because it was used and not because it wasn't, I said.

Then I knew you was right ma said.

Proving she was still on my side I picked up a fresh cake, and I hurry up went to my room before my lucky feeling had time to change.

South Africans Vote Wednesday

By SYDNEY GRUSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 6 — (CP Cable) — The shortest and what is considered here the most critical election in South Africa's history culminates tomorrow when the people of the Union vote on the issue of the war policies of Field Marshal Jan Christian Smuts since he took over the government in 1939 with the Union's entire resources wholeheartedly behind the war effort.

The issue is clear. Smuts has declared the war is the only matter to be considered. His position on that point is as emphatic as the position of his chief opponent, Dr. J. B. M. Hertzog, leader of the Nationalist Party, who has said "If" gain power our policy is to cease active participation in the war.

In the last House the government coalition of Smuts' Dominion and Labor parties and three natives representatives held 87 seats against 56 for the combined opposition, consisting of the Nationalists, Oswald Pirow's New Order, Col. N. C. Havenga's Afrikaner Party and a single independent. Of the three European representatives in parliament, one is not involved in the election and since their term of office expired.

Special Council Committee Appointed to Probe Prospects For Securing Wood Lot for Fuel

Council Holds Last Meeting Before Summer Recess With Will Conclude August 30

SPECIAL MEETING

Before adjourning for the summer recess the City Council took cognizance of the fact that a fuel shortage may be the portion of the citizens during the coming winter and made preparations accordingly by appointing a committee of Aldermen Chamberlain, Clapp, Armstrong, Mayor Wallace, City Comptroller and Mr. Harry Smith to investigate the whole situation at their regular meeting on Monday evening. At the conclusion of the business the council adjourned to August 30th unless a special meeting is called by the Mayor. The recommendation unanimously adopted the last fall situation in view of the serious situation in regard to fuel for the coming winter, it is recommended that a committee from this council be appointed to look into the prospects of locating a wood lot and ascertaining the cost of purchasing a supply of wood, and report back as soon as possible." There was no discussion on the question in council although the matter was fully discussed in committee before the regular meeting.

By-law Not Passed

The members of the city council tried to arrive at some decision with respect to guaranteeing the debentures for the construction of the removal of the Purification Plant operated by the Public Utility Commissioners but after a meeting lasting on Monday afternoon with Mr. Connell of the Department of Municipal Affairs in attendance but after going over practically the same ground, that has been covered on previous occasions the council could not secure the majority needed to pass the by-laws. The members of the Utilities Commission were present and answered all questions asked of them as submitted, those opposing the proposition felt that the time is not the time to make a capital expenditure despite the fact that the majority favored the construction.

Presented Petition

The Bell Telephone Company was given permission to lay a conduit extension on the city of Belleville according to the plan submitted. This was in connection with the new system that is being installed and the connection with the new station that will be erected on Bridge St. The Bell Telephone Company formerly being St. Thomas Street. The Mayor was recommended "That the City Engineer be authorized to approve the following application of the Bell Telephone conduit extension through Bridge St. to the City Solicitor—insurance correspondence to be undertaken, extent to be opened at any one time, advancement of any excavating, boulevard and sidewalk restoration to be re-established to City Engineer of the Bell Telephone Company." was unanimously accepted.

Coal

The Chairman of the Market and City Property along with the Comptroller were instructed to contract for the season's coal supply and Mayor Wallace and the same chairman was authorized to have the City Engineer check the scales cleaned out at a cost not to exceed $50.00. Aldermen Clapp and Armstrong were appointed to report on the paving of bikes on Front Street and Dundas Ward at the earliest opportunity. It was further agreed that all paving be completed as said be registered and that the Commissioner of Works be given an offer of $25 was accepted for the Moulton property at the corner of and that a further $25 be assessed the same to be paid by the purchaser for his interest in the street. Action was also taken on a number of other matters.

Conditional Contribution

The McFarland Construction Company was given the contract to supply crushed stone and a spreader at a cost of $4.50 per ton to put on the roads, that will be required by the city. Mayor Rollins and Aldermen Armstrong and Chamberlain were appointed to look after the matter of acquiring a right of power to act in any cases. The matter submitted by Mayor of Shire for the Donavan property, part of the present city quarry, the parties by-law will be amended to prohibit the parking of cars on the property during the Fall Fairs. The Assessor and the City Clerk were instructed to attend the International Association convention, which will be held in Toronto on August 31st and Sept. 1st, and 2nd. Any expenses that may be incurred in the auditorium during the present election campaign will pay $15 nightly to the caretaker. It was recommended the council members stated in passing the resolution. The same removal committee will be allowed $10 each for collecting data from which their report will be submitted to the council after the summer recess. The committee to make provisions for the passenger terminals in the city was also allowed to spend up to $100 for furnishings for the Bell Telephone Company. The Solicitor was authorized to contact the Transportation Company with respect to the disputed amount on the Belleville, recently constructed by that company.

Assessor Appointed

Ald. Thomas Marshall, who has been ill during most of the council meetings of the present year, is out of absence. At the conclusion of the meeting the Clerk moved that a letter of sympathy be sent Alderman Marshall in the recent bereavement in the loss of a loving wife. Mayor Rollins and Aldermen Clapp, Clare a Civic Holiday, the time and the place to be left to the discretion. Worship informed the council that the day would not fall in the middle of the week. The Mayor further occurred among the members when a was read from the Hydro Electric Utilities Commission respecting the Assessor for the Unit in which the city is a member. The Assessor is the only representative on the board, a number of years who was responsible for passing the chief one being the amendment to the Assessment by-law of the barbers, which allows the barber shops to close on all week nights except Saturday at seven o'clock and on Saturday at nine o'clock. The barbers have wished to have incorporated in the amendment the clause to have the shops closed all day Wednesday but the Board has not the authority to order this change. By-laws to authorize the Mayor and the Clerk and City Clerk to sign transfers of property sold by the Special Property Committee were passed at the summer recess.

Aldermen Clarke and Potter were appointed to attend the adjourned meeting of the Assessment Court to sit for the taxes against them. The Clerk was instructed to see that all accounts properly signed by the respective heads of committees and passed by the chairmen.

Before closing for the summer, the council passed a resolution of appreciation for the fine record of Ald. Phillips as councillor during the years of service with the city. The Mayor in moving the resolution said he send to Mr. Charles A. Mott a message of sympathy from the city council for his fine services through the years. Ald. Pollwell thanked Mayor Rollins for the fine leadership, his consideration and helpfulness of the members and his ability to serve through the hot days of July. Mayor Rollins thanked Ald Pollwell for his kind words. The meeting adjourned further business the council as journed.

Russian Anti-Tank Weapons and Tactics Seen as Highly Effective

London, July 6 (CP).—Soviet Russia's antitank weapons, introduced in 1936 tanks in the first thrust of the German invasion, have been improved, said to London observers today that the Russians have acquired highly effective new anti-tank weapons and tactics.

Although the German attack is wide and strong, bystanders here are weary of accepting it today as an all-out effort.

Today's high command communique, however, the Germans declared that the heaviest fighting developed on the ground and the air yesterday day and reported that the renewed struggle is "assuming ever greater violence".

The possibility of this usual German summer attack this year never has been overlooked in London but some commentators still questioned whether the Germans intended to launch it tonight but in the Russian campaign in the east while threatened from the west.

REDISTRIBUTION MOTION ADOPTED BY PARLIAMENT

Justice Minister Accused of Raising Language, Racial, Religious Issues

CARDIN CRITICAL

By C. B. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, July 6 — (CP) — A resolution asking the British parliament for constitutional authority to postpone redistribution of Federal representation until after the war was adopted in the House of Commons last night after a short but stormy debate.

Justice Minister St. Laurent, who moved the resolution, was accused by his own Quebec colleagues of raising language, racial and religious issues without provocation, and heard the same charge from Conservative Graydon, Progressive Conservative Hume Sander.

Jean Francois Pouliot (Lib. Temiscouata) likened the minister to a man "throwing oil on a fire."

There was one division, in which seven Liberals and two Independentals, all from Quebec, stood against all other members. Among them was Hon. P. J. A. Cardin (Lib. Richelieu-Verchere), a former minister of the present government. All official opposition groups supported the government in its proposal.

Taken to Task

Mr. Graydon took Mr. St. Laurent to task for introducing such matters at such a time, and Conservatives, Quebec's contribution to the war effort and failure of English-speaking members to learn the French language.

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, and R. G. Hazell (N. D. MacLeod), speaking for their respective groups, supported the government but urged the advisability, at the proper time, of Canada seeking the power to amend her own constitution.

Mr. St. Laurent said he hoped the time would come when it would be possible for Canada to deal with these matters without going to the Thrones with a petition such as that before the House.

The resolution was a petition, which will be embodied in a similar Senate resolution, asking the King to request the British parliament to amend the British North America Act so that redistribution need not be proceeded with until the first session starting after the war ends.

Last Bill in 1934

The act provides that this readjustment must be made every 10 years, based on the last decennial census. In this case the census taken in 1941. The last re-distribution bill was in 1934.

A redistribution this year on the basis of the 1941 census would cost Saskatchewan four seats and Manitoba three. It would mean in Quebec, whose representation of 65 members was fixed by the B. N. A. Act, would remain unchanged while the total representation dropped, thus increasing Quebec's proportionate power in the House.

The resolution was introduced by Mr. St. Laurent because of the desirability of avoiding in wartime the bitter controversy that would arise from the attempts to do justice to all provinces on the complex question.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King referred to a seldom-used parliamentary device to prevent introduction of amendments which would open the way for discussion of matters not definitely contained in the resolution.

After opposition group leaders had endorsed the resolution, Mr. King moved that "the question be now put," which, while it permitted each member to make a formal speech on the resolution, prohibited of any amendments to it.

Carried 115 to 9

When the, discussion ended late last evening, the division was on the Prime Minister's motion which carried 115 to 9.

As mentioned the resolution Mr. St. Laurent said that under present circumstances only would one province drop in some provinces but Ontario would retain 82 members, 17 more than Quebec, with only 458,000 more population, or 58,000 more member for each 27,000 of population.

Under the adjustment now would give Saskatchewan 17 representatives instead of 21 for a population of 585,992, while Ontario, with 458,840 more persons than Quebec, would have 17 more members than Quebec's 65, said the minis-

CANADIAN CREWS HUNT SUBS IN MID-ATLANTIC

This is one of the giant VLR (very long range) bombers to which Prime Minister Churchill recently gave warm praise for the credit for the increase in U-boat killings this spring. Royal Canadian Air Force and U.S. Army Air Force units, operating under the Canadian Northwest Atlantic Command, now are flying these aircraft from east coast bases, giving new protection to the convoys far out at sea. These big aircraft are being flown by one of the largest R.C.A.F. squadrons in action anywhere, a squadron of veteran sub-hunters that flew Wraiths before the war, later were equipped with Digbys and more recently with Liberators. Now, flying the biggest of them all, they constitute a new menace to the U-boat packs. — (R.C.A.F. Photo.)

tional anthem."

These matters, although of importance, were of an entirely domestic character, and it would be wise to let them detract from the national war effort, he would it be any wiser to enter into a controversy on Commonwealth representation.

"Does it require any vivid imagination to foresee the possibilities of serious conflict in religious controversies over any proposal to decrease Ontario's representation in this House by one, and that the voting strength of Quebec might conceivably be increased by one, and be capable of exercising greater influence on decisions?" he asked.

"It is not always comfortable to be a realist but it is not always wise to be an ostrich.....

Is Realist Wise?

"It has been asserted more than once, not by very many and wrongly I think, that this is the result of a dark conspiracy of that man in the Vatican and that Cardinal in Quebec to get control of the government of this country."

It had also been asserted that Quebec did not supply its quota of men in the First Great War, refraining so that there would be more Canadian voters in that province.

"Well, I deny both the fact and the deduction. That is a dangerous controversy but to indicate the kind of contention it seems desirable to avoid."

In the present war, the minister said, he had been advised — and he believed it could be proven — that 35 per cent of the men in the Canadian Army are of the French race.

As for the Navy and Air Force, the figure might be different because in these services "it has been deemed necessary that only those living must be able to take their full course of instruction in English although a small number will be being made for bi-lingual units."

Canada Unwilling

But Canada was a bilingual country with French and English the official languages, he said.

"I am satisfied that the day will come when, if not all those who sit in this House, at least its leaders and those who sit on the front benches and those who sit immediately opposite, will find it to their advantage to be bilingual."

Mr. Graydon accused Mr. St. Laurent of bringing in "by the backdoor" propaganda which he believed essential to his argument, and of precipitating a division of opinion on issues which did not exist.

His interrupted Mr. St. Laurent on the three occasions when the minister was speaking of language matters and Quebec's contribution to the war effort, and prompted Speaker J. A. Glen to ask the minister to confine himself to the resolution itself.

The House made some progress in the last hour with agriculture items, in War Appropriation measure which will be first item of business today.

Refused to Answer

Earlier, the Prime Minister said that he refused to answer further questions of Wilfrid LaCroix (Lib. Quebec East) regarding the Canadian flag and urged members to remember that great events might take place even "in a few days."

"In a flag controversy to be added to other factors that make for disunity at a time when unity above all is needed?" asked Mr. King.

He said he believed that before the summer was over the House would have good reason why certain resolutions should not be allowed to arise.

Events the like of which none of us had contemplated might take place. The members must realize that if controversy in the world was more serious than ever it had existed before.

Praise for Bracken

On a question of privilege the Prime Minister said that John Bracken, Progressive Conservative leader, "had done some and offensive work" which could not have been expected. He had been a very legislature when he said in Toronto last Friday that in the world existing must be able to take their full course of instruction in English although a small number will be being made for bi-lingual units."

Mr. Graydon accused Mr. St. Laurent of bringing in "by the grace from a leader of a political party who, throughout the whole of a session of parliament, following his appointment as leader of his party, has avoided attempting its leadership on the floor of the House of Commons."

NEW "TYRONE"

Something new has been added to the U. S. Marine Corps, but you'll hardly recognize it with the O, 1, haircut. It is Tyrone Power, movie hero, who was recently commissioned in the U. S. Marine Corps Reserve after completing basic training as an Officer-candidate.

PETITIONS DISMISSED

Ottawa, July 6 — (CP) — Petitions of three officers and one soldier from sentences imposed by a court martial at Quebec for alleged offences in the administration of the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps have been dismissed by the Governor-General-in-Council, it was learned today.

The men concerned were some of a group of army personnel found guilty some time ago. They were the only ones who appealed and, under army regulations, their appeal brought the decision of the court before the confirming authority, which is the Governor-General-in-Council.

U.S. SCORES NAVAL VICTORY IN KULA GULF BATTLE

NAZIS PAY TERRIFIC PRICE FOR 'SMALL GAINS'

Six Jap Warships Probably Sunk, 4 Others Damaged

Cruiser - Destroyer Force of the Enemy Engaged During Darkness of July 5-6

KNOX JUBILANT

By G. YATES McDANIEL
Allied Headquarters, Australia,
(Associated Press Staff Writer)
July 7—(AP) — A United States naval victory in the Solomons probable sinking of six Japanese warships and damaging of four others set of a cruiser-destroyer force at a cost of one cruiser—was announced today, one week after the settlement of the first Allied offensive.

The triumph, recorded by fleet of American ships which flashed to darkness off the Kula Gulf in the Kula Gulf above New Georgia Island, was shrouded in [illegible] from Allied headquarters.

Although brief as an earlier announcement from Washington that the Kula Gulf battle definitely was a victory, today's communique left many details to be filled in, including how much of the enemy ships hit were cruisers and how many destroyed. One destroyer was a destroyer, blasted by 500-pound aerial bombs after it had been beached by damage sufficient to be still in progress.

(Admiral William F. Halsey's South Pacific headquarters, which has immediate direction of the Solomons operations, announced that the Kula Gulf battle had ended and that United States forces continue to hold the island site on land and in the air, as well as on sea. Mopping up of Japanese resistance by ground forces was said to be still in progress on Rendova Island and Southern New Georgia.)

"The Japs have taken another damned good licking," Secretary of State Cordell Hull told cheering shipyard workers at Bremerton, Wash., Tuesday.

Forces Reinforced

The announcement also said that Allied forces on Rendova Island, united at the outset of the new drive in the Central Solomons June 30, now have been reinforced and that frantic efforts of the Japanese air force to check Allied advances by fresh raids on the offensive bases by land raids on Australia, New Guinea and Allied Solomons bases have been broken up.

Debut of the Japanese naval forces left imperiled the most immediate objective of the Solomons operations—the enemy air base of Munda on New Georgia.

Above it, Bairoko Anchorage, main source of supply had been battered by United States warships in a bombardment from the Kula Gulf battle line before the naval battle. The United States destroyer Strong was lost in the action.

Below it, the reinforced garrison on Rendova has been shifted to from five miles away. And on New Georgia, American forces on Viru Harbor are in a position to move overland, thus consolidated positions there.

The fact Kula Gulf is only 15 miles long and about eight miles across it at its widest point made it obvious the battle must be between limited and comparatively light air operations (in Washington, unofficial comment was that "the decisive naval action of the present offensive in the South Pacific probably is still to be fought," with neither side as yet thrown into the battleships and aircraft carriers.)

Seven Jap Planes Downed

In the air battle in the Solomons fighting scene, seven more Japanese planes were reported downed, bringing enemy losses there alone to 186. Thirteen raiders inflicted some damage yesterday on Allied Rendova positions but those were destroyed by ground defences. The other four were bagged by planes over Kula Gulf as they attempted to break up the bombing of the beached destroyer.

Twenty-seven enemy bombers with an escort of 21 Zeros tried a daylight raid on Darwin, Australia, causing slight damage. R.A.F. Spitfires manned by Australians and British pilots downed five bombers and two Zeros. Seven Spitfires were lost but three pilots were saved and three others were seen to bail out.

Planes and Naval Vessel Production At New Highs

Washington, July 7 — (AP)— Production of planes and naval vessels in the United States reached new highs in May, the War Production Board's monthly report showed today, but the over-all output or munitions remained about changed from April.

W.P.B. Chairman Donald M. Nelson's report noted declines in ammunition, miscellaneous munitions and merchant vessels, which he described as a "very serious matter." The decline in merchant vessels was based on the tonnage of ships put into the water, shipyards however, and not on the basis of actual delivery, which is now the highest so far with nearly 1,000,000 deadweight tons.

Of the four major programs, merchant ships led in the first six months of the year — with 44 per cent of the 1943 goal achieved, aircraft 38 per cent, and the output of naval vessels and equipment were estimated at 40 per cent of the 1943 goals and aircraft 35 per cent.

"We have reached a point now where gains in production will be won only through the most thoughtful and determined effort on the part of all concerned," Nelson said.

Three Years Bring Many Changes For "Little Man" Now Overseas

Written For The Canadian Press
By Sgt. Bugler Jim Bethune,
Calgary Highlanders, Canadian Army in England

Somewhere in England, July 7—(CP) — We have been in England a long time — three years almost — for most of the Canadian Army overseas.

We have gone through a process of transformation in a different country and we have lived a new mode of life. Time has brought a considerable change in our attitude, thought, in ideas and in viewpoint. Even in this has left us puzzled.

For we are Canadians and Canada is our homeland. We have had to settle down in a strange country and to live a new way of life. Almost we evolved a world of our own amongst ourselves. Yet everything we have done, nothing we have taught us how to live. But it is the way of the land and he appears to a "new".

We wonder will Canada be kind to us. England has been kind. Is Canada kind? Is she the "little man?"

We don't really ask for much, for our ambitions have been dulled. In fact it is quite simple. A man home all the opportunity to earn a modest living. We have met the "little man" of the United States and he appears concisely. We know that there are many of him here and that Canada is a vast land with few people.

We tell ourselves that it is within reason that the "little man" in Canada should find contentment. Yet will we be understood?

HUNDREDS OF TONS OF BOMBS BATTER GERBINI DROME

Effort to Knock Out Base and 4 Satellite Fields Near Completion

DAMAGE TERRIFIC

By DANIEL DE LUCE
Associated Press War Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, July 7 — (AP) — Heavy bombers from North Africa and others from the Middle East Command hurled hundreds of tons of high explosive and fragmentation bombs on Gerbini airdrome in Sicily yesterday as the air siege of that vital enemy base entered its 36th hour.

It was the last effort to knock Gerbini and its four satellite fields from the map apparently nearing completion as photographs revealing terrific damage to administration buildings, hangars, parked aircraft and landing strips from the relentless bombings of the last two days and a night.

It was at Gerbini that Flying Fortress gunners of the Northwest African Command destroyed 41 enemy fighters on Monday, and at least one more Axis plane was shot down during yesterday's double daylight blow.

A Middle East communique said that approximately 50 four-motored bombers participated in yesterday's attack, dropping more than 180,000 pounds of high explosive and fragmentation bombs on Gerbini, "starting fires, covering runways and dispersal areas and leaving large fires burning. One enemy fighter was reported destroyed and two damaged while every bomber returned safely.

Many bombers from this base struck shortly after dawn and reported hits on an ammunition dump, administration buildings, hangars and five landing strips. Pilots piloted the dynamited African Air Force were reported missing from the Gerbini operations, against two enemy aircraft destroyed.

Five Fires Started

During Monday night R.A.F. Wellingtons hammered at Gerbini, starting five fires. Bizerta and Milo airfields were assaulted by North African and British medium bombers. The same night heavy British bombers of the Middle East Command poured high explosives on Catania's marshalling yards, Sicily's Eastern Sicilian port.

Labor Seeks Assurance Of No Depression After War is Won

Ottawa, July 7 — (CP) — The Trades and Labor Congress of Canada said today in a brief prepared for submission to the Commons Post-war Reconstruction Committee that its combined membership of 250,000 wants the "same assurance" that when this war is over there will not be another depression in the country of plenty."

Any Canadian could justly feel proud of Canada's achievements on the production front, while nearly 700,000 of her citizens were in the armed forces, the brief said. But it added:

"If all these things can be done for the war, is it that hundreds of thousands of our people were in want prior to the war period? And why is it that we even have to contemplate the possibility of fear and want again in Canada?"

There is only one solution to unemployment and that is employment, the brief said. It set up seven needful public works from one end of the country to the other. "There is hardly a city, town or village which does not require such improvement.

"We go without hospitals, schools, starve our universities and libraries, risk fire and health in dilapidated homes, children with poor roads, poor water systems and inadequate sewers and a million and one things that we all have longed without," the brief added.

"All this in a land of plenty with practically an unlimited supply of raw materials and all the other basic factors, skilled and unskilled."

The many years the Congress had been advocating the inauguration of public works periods of depression, it said, adding:—

"We continue to strongly urge upon your committee the vital need for the immediate commencement of a comprehensive plan at the cessation of hostilities to avoid an unemployment period while changing from war to peace-time economy."

The brief was undertaken, Congress should be of "a magnitude unprecedented in Canada."

"Full recognition must be given to the fact that we are living in a modern age; that the machine is doing the work and all of our people have a right to participate in the benefits of the machine."

During the last depression, public works were undertaken without any consideration, work on a task basis and if such crazy thinking was followed through it meant that every man would be put to work at a half-size shovel was used.

"We are entirely agreed that the workers of Canada want no dole and no form of treatment. The people of Canada are through with unemployment. They do not want, and have a right to expect, useful forms of employment at a decent standard of living in balance with our times and productive ability."

2,000 CANADIAN AIRMEN IN NORTH AFRICA CAMPAIGN

Only One R.C.A.F. Fighter Squadron Operated as an Entity

MANY WON AWARDS

By DOUG HOW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 7 — (CP) — Whatever gallant British fights, fought and planes flew in North Africa, there were Canadians there in numbers of Royal Air Force crew.

Into the successful aerial arms Britain conceived to crush the Axis — the Western desert and the British Middle East Air Force — Dominion poured her aviators in liberal quantity. Official figures place their number in the vicinity of 2,000.

Only one R.C.A.F. fighter squadron operated in the R.A.F. but five R.A.F. squadrons were without Canadian representation.

In the air battle formation crewmen fought from El Alamein to Tunis. They scourged the retreating enemy, bombed his bases, joined battle with his fighters and then the end out to sea and harassed his shipping.

Two Emerge as Leaders

From their ranks emerged the inevitable greats, two of them to make sure into history. They are Wing Commanders in the Tunisian fighting.

Those were Sqdn. Ldrs. Jimmy Walker, 26, Toronto, veteran from Edmonton, and George Hill from Picton, N. S., two youngsters who hold the D.F.C. and Bar.

Walker went to Africa with two planes in his credit, shot down 8½ more, then had his own Africa fell. A 26-year-old Listowel, Ont., athlete who went to Britain's peacetime to play football against the campaign as Wing Cmdr. J. R. Thompson of a Boston bombed squadron.

Win Many Awards

In this western desert force, too, were Fit. Lts. Jean Pratt, Edwards, D.F.C., D.F.M., North Battleford, Sask., who ran his score of destroyed and shared.

Canadians in the western desert have shared those in the R.A.F. proper, won 36 D.F.C.'s and 5 Bars and 31 D.F.M.'s.

DEMPSEY GETS DIVORCE

CANADIAN PILOTED BOMBERS POUND FRENCH TARGETS

R. A. F. Concentrated On Sowing Mines In Enemy Waters - Big Fleet Grounded

THREE SHIPS HIT

London, July 7—(CP)— Canadian-manned mosquito bombers struck yesterday at French railway targets—railways— in France last night while the R. A. F. concentrated on sowing mines in enemy waters, the Air Ministry announced today. Bad weather grounded the fleet.

The long-range bomber fleets struck at Lille in the north and in the second successive night, letting go 500 tons. Two R.A.F. bombers break into the news, with the loss of one plane. A Canadian Red Army announced last night that in two days its artillery had smashed 1,271 enemy tanks and shot down 314 planes and that German losses in dead exceeded 10,000.

The Russians counted the German loss in tanks at 586 for the first day's fighting. The mid-day communique yesterday boosted the total to 1,271 and had highly Soviet information bureau added another 423 in a special communique.

The regular midnight communique later hiked 119 German tanks destroyed, in the Orel-Kursk sector.

Reuters Soviet Position

Reuterfront dispatches said that German armored forces battering forward in great weight on a narrow sector from Kursk to Russian to eyes of late two populated places, but that two hours later fierce counter-attacked, halting any further enemy advance and somewhat relieving the Soviet positions.

No separate Russian communique was issued today and there was no immediate announcement as to the results of fighting this marked a permanent new phase.

Advices from the front, however, pictured the Soviet defenders in terrible toll in blood and armor. Four German infantry columns were reported to have attacked near Miasnaia 30 miles from Orel and driven back with 600 men killed. One column won and held a height but was slightly later falling back in a Soviet counter-attack.

Hammer Supply Lines

Russian airplanes hammered again and again at German communications, pounding at railways behind the lines, and the Russians said the Germans, apparently hard-handing their planes, used aircraft transport to supply the lines with infantry and tanks in battle, and were not striking at the Soviet rear.

(The Germans, however, declared they had "effectively bombed" targets behind the Russian lines. One Nazi broadcast said the Soviets had been thrown back 35 miles between Orel and Tula.)

Advices from the front indicated the German high command was sending reserves after wave of armor, of units and infantry against the strongly defended positions of attacking in appreciable headway.

Steadily supported by Air

The attacks all along the front were strongly supported by the German air force, and on the Orel plains said they believed large forces of German planes had been shifted from Western European bases for the drive.

The German midnight communique reported the destruction of 11 tanks, the downing of 22 pilots had been captured. One of the prisoners was said to have told Red Army officers he had been told by Hitler himself to be the start oh the new German offensive.

Fail to Gain Air Superiority

The Russians said that despite the heavy reinforcements to the German air forces the enemy had failed to achieve air superiority and that in one sector alone 43 were downed.

Front line dispatches said the Germans were striking again and again in an effort to find weak points in the Russian Army line. Tank divisions and infantry struck, then recalled to be regrouped for a thrust again on the same front but in a different area.

Principal factor in the success of the Soviet defence seemed to be a new force of Army heavy artillery which rolled back the constant onrush of the Nazis in every sector. As the armored divisions faltered and halted at last, deeper Red Infantry dashed from dugouts and trenches to engage the enemy in hand-to-hand combat.

Plan Major Blow

The German army, obviously shaken for a major blow, picked its battlefield with an eye to protecting its flanks and rear, with the meaning of its armored thrusts. The land around Orel, Sevsk and Kursk is flat, similar to that around Kharkov, within 30 miles in the west where the German thing their heavy equipment and their best troops.

The Germans sent 300 to 400 tanks into battle each day, but only to have them smashed back by the Red Army artillery and terrifying Stormovitzu, battlefront reports said.

Frequently on the Orel-Kursk front, the Germans switch from tactical attacks to attempts at flanking operations, in one clash the Russians said, the Nazis had exerted pressure on the flank of Staraya Gamaya and then there getting away into a Soviet minefield where they lost 600 men killed.

Despite heavy losses the Germans rolled up replacements steadily, the Russians said, and a fresh reserve had been accumulated behind the lines.

1,271 Enemy Tanks Smashed and 314 Planes Shot Down

German Loss in Dead Exceeds 10,000 In Last Two Days Of Bitter Fighting

22 PILOTS CAPTURED

Moscow, July 7—(AP)—The German army has paid a terrific toll in tanks and manpower as the price for the "insignificant gains" achieved in two days of bitter fighting in the 1943 summer offensive on the Orel-Kursk-Belgorod front, the Soviet high command said today.

While acknowledging the loss of two unidentified towns near Belgorod at the southernmost end of the northern front, the Soviet Red Army announced last night that in two days its artillery had smashed 1,271 enemy tanks and shot down 314 planes and that German losses in dead exceeded 10,000.

The Russians counted the German loss in tanks at 586 for the first day's fighting. The mid-day communique yesterday boosted the total to 1,271 and had highly Soviet information bureau added another 423 in a special communique.

$12,000,000 Naval Training Base Now Functioning At Deep Brook N.S.

By A. D. MERKEL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

H.M.C.S. Cornwallis, Deep Brook, N. S., July 7 — (CP) — Canada's largest naval training base, required the largest and most equipped of the kind in the British Commonwealth, has begun to function at its new mouth-to-the-sea home on Annapolis Basin, made famous by the early history of the province of Nova Scotia.

Grouped about the quarter-mile Allen Prince parade square at Deep Brook, which the navy purchased for $250,000 as a site, are some 80 buildings housing the various schools of seamanship gunnery, navigation and communications, the mess halls and quarters, hospitals, stores, recreation and administration buildings.

Late in June, the training establishment had a complement of 1,500, including 2,444 under training of whom 147 were officer candidates and 99 Wrens taking specialized courses. In addition 1,400 civilians were employed in construction within the area. Drafts of 200 arriving each week from the various recruiting schools across Canada were taking the accommodation already provided.

But additional buildings were under construction and with the early drafts nearing the end of their 16-weeks' course, the mammoth plant was rapidly approaching full production. When this is reached Cornwallis will have a complement of 10,000 and with H.M.C.S. Naden, the Pacific coast naval base turned out, it is estimated, a sufficient number of thoroughly trained seamen to maintain the navy at almost the ever-growing needs of Canada's wartime navy.

Happy, Efficient Ship

Apart from the size, its spread of development and its imposing staff officers, there is nothing to mark Cornwallis as a happy and efficient ship.

Recently a group of newspapermen were guests aboard H.M.C.S. Cornwallis for two days. They saw the men on and off parade, at work

SUMMER FUN CLUB IN FULL SWING

The "Summer Fun Club" which provides indoor games activity at the Y.M.C.A. for girls and boys 6 to 16 years of age is now operating with a good attendance. Some 40 girls were on the floor and in the swimming tank yesterday while nearly 30 boys are in on the program this morning.

The indoor camp or Fun Club provides a period of games and physical activities from 9.30 a.m. until 11.30 followed by a shower and a half hour swim at the "Y". Boys attend each Monday, Wednesday and Friday forenoons and the girls Tuesday and Thursday. The club provides a splendid opportunity for those not absent from the city to enjoy themselves in a supervised program during the holiday season.

FEW ARE AFFECTED BY 3RD TRANSFER

The recent third compulsory labor transfer issued by the National Selective Service will have but very little effect on Belleville and district according to Mr. H. H. Reed, manager of the local office. All told, it was estimated that it will affect not more than eight or 10 men, it was stated. Labor required by the new wholesale warehouses and offices will be the chief one affected, it was claimed.

Approximately 100 workers and employees in the Belleville district have been transferred from jobs of low category into positions more essential to the war effort, it was stated by Mr. Reed.

KINGSTON GIRL BITTEN BY DOG

Attacked and bitten on the arm by a stray dog, Barbara Bennett of Kingston, sustained an arm laceration as she was walking across the footbridge here yesterday. Miss Bennett was escorted to nearby Gerry's Dog Store, where Mr. Percy Geen rendered aid. Police were notified and are endeavoring to locate the dog responsible for the attack. Miss Bennett is visiting relatives at 21 Bridge Street.

REPORTS LOSS OF RATION BOOKS

H. L. Willing, 248 Bridge Street, reported the loss of two gasoline ration books to city police on Tuesday. Mr. Willing was unable to inform the authorities exactly when the gasoline books might have been removed from the glove compartment of his motor car as he did not have occasion to use them for the past few days. The serial numbers of the books were recorded to police.

STENCIL SPEEDS STREET PAINTING

Something new in the way of stencils was introduced to the Belleville Public Works Department this week when at the suggestion of Police Chief Walter Probert a wooden stencil form was built to speed the painting of street parking markers. According to the city engineer's department the new stencil will save paint and also labor, the latter item amounting much in the present time of labor shortage.

Wooden horses formerly used to protect the lettering while drying have been dispensed with, their place being taken by trim red flags, while are placed along the street as warning to motorists during the painting of the parking markers. The street painting stencil has been placed in the town of Trenton with considerable success in former years, it was stated by Police Chief Probert.

CALLS AT OFFICE GETS RATION BOOK

A letter from the district income tax inspector does not always mean the recipient has been lax in his income tax payments or that he was being asked to pay his return. This was learned by a Foxboro resident who, it is stated, has received a communication from Mr. S. Clifford of the local Income Tax office asking him to call. With all kinds of feelings the Foxboro resident slit the envelope open and with somewhat greater misgivings viewed the request to call at the office. Imagine the relief when the man's surprise when he called at the dreaded portals on the corner of Front and Bridge Streets that he proffered his gasoline ration book. When he said his ration book tax he had unwittingly dropped his ration book. A check at the Pursuit licence issuer's office revealed the owner's identity and resulted in the subsequent call to receive his property.

Could Place 300 Men Hereabouts

Reflecting the scarcity of labor in the Belleville district at the present time, as many as 300 workers could be placed in comparatively high priority jobs in the immediate area, it was stated this morning by Mr. H. H. Reed, manager of Belleville National Selective office.

"I could place 100 men with a northern Hastings lumbering firm in cut over timber against winter's fuel needs," he stated, "and I am authorized to offer them as high as $4 per cord and their board."

Considerable difficulty is being experienced in obtaining sufficient help this week as many workers seeking under the compulsory labor transfer order cannot be placed on farms through their physical inability to stand the work.

THREE ARE HELD ON CONSPIRACY CHARGE

R. A. IRWIN

E. A. ALLEN

N. M. STEPHENS

The three pictured ABOVE are under arrest, charged with conspiracy, in connection with military call-ups. They are held by R.C.M.P. who say that a statement will be made by the minister of labor, Hon. Humphrey Mitchell. Those under arrest are R. A. Irwin, Toronto broker, registrar, pendulum section of the national selective service; E. A. Allen, Toronto engineer, Toronto alderman and ex-M.P.P.; Wolfe M. Stephens, who announced a few days ago he would seek the Liberal candidature in St. Patrick riding, Toronto, and Norman Stephens, brother of Wolfe. They are charged with conspiring to impede the National Selective Service Mobilization Regulations.

Four Men Remanded On $20,000 Bail Each

Toronto, July 7 — (CP) — R. A. Irwin, division registrar of the mobilization section of National Selective Service, appeared in police court today on a charge of conspiracy in connection with military call-ups and was remanded without plea on bail of $20,000.

Three other men charged with Irwin — Norbert A. Phelan, past Liberal M.P.P. (SC, Toronto Riverdale, North Bay, 1934-38) and Norman Stephens, brothers, — were also remanded without plea on bail of $20,000 each.

The remand, to July 14, was requested by John J. Robinette, special crown prosecutor.

The specific charge was that the four conspired to impede mobilization regulations.

Three other men also appeared on charges of breaches of selective service regulations and Mr. Robinette said their cases were linked with the four charged with conspiracy. They were also remanded to July 14.

They were Epiphany Kocha, Eldad Corey and Shadrach Sandy. Bail for Kocha was fixed at $1,000 and bail for Corey and Shadrach at $500 each.

Irvin, Allan and the Stephens brothers were arrested yesterday by Royal Canadian Mounted Police after a week's investigation. Subsequently it was learned the charges involved deferments from army service.

HUNDREDS OF TONS

reached a crescendo Monday when more than 100 war planes attacked a ship convoy of 37 four-motored bombers, dwindled yesterday to almost nothing, returning pilots reported. The fourth day of the concentrated attack on Sicily's coastal defenses saw the score stand at 110 Axis craft destroyed against an Allied loss of 16.

Veteran observers cautioned against jumping to the conclusion that the Allies have won complete air supremacy over Sicily, but the sudden falling off in enemy fighter interception indicated that the Germans had lost most of their Sicilian-based land planes and were in need of reinforcements.

Destroy 175 Enemy Planes

Since the fall of Pantelleria on June 11 the Northwest African Air Force alone has destroyed 775 enemy aircraft in the air and has lost 81. Add to this the enemy planes wrecked on the ground — estimated by observers at several hundred — and the ratio of plane destruction goes up to 6-1 or 7-1 in favor of the Allies.

(A dispatch from Cairo disclosed that 85 American heavy bombers took part in Monday's assault on Messina in Sicily and dropped a record total for the Middle East Command of nearly 300,000 pounds of bombs on the big ferry terminal. It said that "aerial photography now indicates that damage to locomotive facilities and railway facilities was even more extensive than first reported.")

An Italian communique today listed 60 persons killed and 44 injured yesterday in Catania province, where the Gerbini airfield is situated.

U.S. Senate Blocks Subsidy Program

Washington, July 7—(AP)—In a sudden and dramatic turnabout, the senate yesterday refused by voice to do battle with the administration again today over the government's plan to roll back retail food prices by paying subsidies to processors.

Evidence of starting a mid-summer recess by nightfall faded as lawmakers of both houses went into a huddle over a bill to continue the life of the commodity credit corporation and blocking the subsidy program.

The formidable task of the conferees was this: to reconcile diametrically opposite proposals in the Senate version and the House of Representatives-approved bill which lifted all subsidy-rollback restrictions objected to by the administration.

Climaxing a seldom-seen demonstration of almost-lasting bipartisan opposition to subsidy restrictions similar to those which drew a vigorous veto from President Roosevelt only last Friday.

The bill as it went to conference would continue CCC until Jan. 1, 1944 and increase its lending authority from $2,000,000,000 to $3,000,000,000, but that was virtually a side issue.

Engine-less Craft Flown 3,200 Miles by R.A.F. Part of Cargo For Russia

A revolutionary world's flight record was established recently, when 4th R.A.F. Transport Command plane towed a glider loaded with freight from one Canadian to England. The first air trip to span the Atlantic, or any obhey ocean, the glider and its tow plane flew 3,200 miles in 24 hours.

With a full crew the glider carried a maximum load of war freight, including approximately a ton of vaccine for Russia, crates of aircraft, radio sets and spare parts for tanks.

Crew of the towing plane were R.A.F. pilot, Flight-Lieut. W. S. Longhurst of Montreal; co-pilot and navigator, Flight-Lieut. C. W. H. Thomson, R.A.F. of Taranaki, New Zealand; Pilot Officer R. W. Wormington, R.A.F. flight engineer of Hove, Sussexshire, England; Radio Officer H. Gordon Wightman, R.A.F. Transport Command of Vancouver, B.C.; Flight-Commander H. Furner, R.A.F., engineering officer of the Atlantic Group of the Transport Command traveling in the plane in a supervisory capacity.

Crew of the glider were S/Ldr. R. G. Seys, D.F.C., R.A.F. pilot of Montreal; S/Ldr. F. M. Gobeil, R.C.A.F. co-pilot of Ottawa and Montreal.

The flight was made to obtain information on which the technical research and development branch of the R.A.F. Transport Command can proceed with its investigation of the possibilities of ultimate military or commercial air train service over the Atlantic.

Experiments leading up to the flight began in Canada about five months ago. The glider used for the experiment and the flight was an 84 foot wing span type C.G. 4A, destined by an aircraft firm used built by a piano manufacturer. The towing plane was a twin-engined Douglas D.C. 2.

The tow rope used between the glider and the plane was made of 100 yards of nylon with a 7,000 pound breaking strength, it cost $400.

Flights in Canada were made in spite of the worst weather known in North America for fifty years. Blind and night flying experiments were carried out.

WE CAN HELP AVOID RATIONING

If no one ever buys more than they really need chances are we can avoid rationing in many lines. And that is a great help to the war effort since each new commodity rationed means more people taken out of productive work on look after the job of rationing it. That's not buy anything we can do without.

This Changing World

The plane counts for much. The other day Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands was in Ottawa, attending the baptism of her granddaughter, Princess Margriet Francisca, and then shortly one read that the Queen is back in England. Though the modern world has brought the greatest of cataclysms, war, upon the earth, it has also been linking the world of places far apart more and more close together. It is the plane which has made much of this possible. It made possible that Queen Wilhelmina could escape the German aggressors and go to England to be with the Dutch Government in exile in that country. The plane made possible the residence of the Princess Juliana in Canada, and the frequent visits of the Queen of Holland across the Atlantic.

The plane too took home back into old and new China one of the greatest women of the earth, Madame Chiang, after her momentous tour of the Western World. From the oldest organized nation in the world she came to the New World, covered the continent and almost with the waving of a wand is back again in the land of the Orient.

The plane like other modern inventions such as radio, eliminates time, jumps boundaries as it is doing when some hot weather along the Potomac, you know—and doubtless will be more. Anyone who saw "the rooftop sequence in the picture entitled "The More the Merrier" probably understands.

Anyhow, the Brotherhood has decided to go without coats and stiff collars in the thousands of Washington offices this summer, despite tradition or old-backed rules. That takes courage. But what is more, they have determined to discard neckties.

Casting off coats is a sensible move, and even the abandonment of neckties can be forgiven, provided shirt collars are not thrown open to expose hairy chests—as we are left in Ottawa. Only one thing we ask: Will the Brotherhood please refrain from wearing shorts in the Hollywood or Libyan desert style?

China Confident of Victory

"In the seventh year of our war of resistance against the cruel and brutal aggression of Japan," said General Chiang Kai-Shek, "an offensive that will deal crushing blows to the enemy will be started in various theatres of the war and there will be an unending stream of victories."

So said the great leader of China as he remarked Tuesday that the time limit for utter defeat of the aggressor cannot exceed two years.

It must be with great satisfaction that the leader of China as well as the rest of the democratic world can say this that the end of vile Japanese tyranny is nearing. China, the heroic nation, has endured and endured, the oldest of the countries suffering from Japan's inhumanity and selfish lust, and China's endurance is to reap its golden reward in the liberty she will have earned as she goes on to pursue her enlightened way through the democratic ways of peace. General Chiang and his brilliant wife have been a support to this ancient nation and to the world of the West. Their greatest glory will be the satisfaction and realization that the restoration of peace and the pursuits of true happiness has been possible in China. China will owe them a debt nations always owe to their great men and women. The western world likewise will owe them a debt.

China, old of the organized world powers, has come fully into her own. She is one of the council of the nations of the earth and her voice is for the brotherhood of peoples. How contrasted is this high ideal which she believes practical as compared with the selfish barbarous demonstration Germany, Italy and Japan have given in this twentieth century.

China had been more than two years defending herself against the Japanese before the Second World War broke out. Never had Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek faltered in his faith that China could not be beaten. To democracy his confidence has been invaluable and now time and event have shown that General Chiang was right and that the autocratic powerful Japan is to be the defeated nation.

To the shedders of blood, to Tojo of Japan, Hitler of Germany and Mussolini of Italy, these and the coming days will be bitterness and gall as they realize that doom is theirs.

In the words of the Chinese leader, "our war of resistance and the world war situation on this day have reached the highest peak of our uphill struggle. One step beyond will be smooth sailing for us."

This message was one of a series of confident predictions from Chinese leaders of a complete Allied victory and the elimination of Japan as a military power. General Ho Ying-Chin said the outcome is now assured beyond all doubt. As for their enemy Japan, she is facing an acute manpower shortage, is now far weaker in sea strength, has been surpassed in the air and is running into different material and food problems. Japanese have lost around three million men in the war against China and Britain and the United States. General Ho placed Japan's first line planes at not over 3,000 and affirmed that it would not be difficult for the United Nations to destroy utterly the Japanese air force and cover a direct attack on Japan when the time is ripe.

Now China is just biding her time to launch an offensive against Japan as she is the country most conveniently advanced from which the war can and must be carried against Nippon.

China's hopes will be realized, she will be victorious, she will see Asia freed of menace of Japanese barbarism and she will see the other conspirators against the world peace, Germany and Italy, brought to judgment along with Japan.

May this seventh year of China's resistance to Japan be the one of continuing victory over militarist aggression.

House of France

Toward the end of the First World War, I arrived in the Somme with the British troops, in a village that had been bombarded and pillaged only a few days after its evacuation by the Germans, says C. J. Fernand-Laurent in Harper's. And I saw an old peasant standing at the door of what had been his house. The poor old man, his head bent down, was brooding on his sorrow. But as he saw us coming he straightened himself proudly, looked us in the eye, and said, "Allons! The walls are still good. I can rebuild it."

The house of France—devastated, pillaged, enslaved though it is—the walls are still good. We will rebuild it.

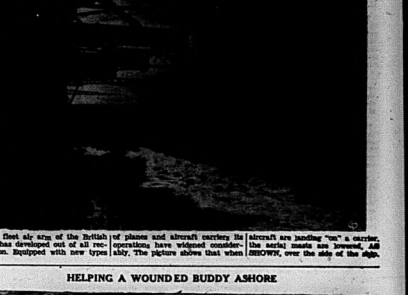
RAZOR-SCARRED VETERAN

In freedom's cause I bleed a bit,
But face the hazards unafraid,
As I to keep appearance fit
Try shaving with an aging blade.

That extra shave that isn't there!
That shave the steel could not provide!
That shave too much for flesh to bear!
I risk it with a patriot's pride.

In peace times I would change the blade
And just for comfort's sake escape
That shave for which it wasn't made,
But bravely now my chin I scrape.



Come bloodshed now! Come agony!
From high resolve I'll not be swayed!
Come scars for all the world to see,
I'll shave however dull the blade.

Cost-of-Living Index Basis Under Study Says Ilsley

Finance Minister Replies to Many Protests Regarding Index

SENATE SITS

By C. R. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, July 7 — (CP) — Finance Minister Ilsley told the House of Commons last night that ways and means are being studied for overcoming the technical difficulties of including a wide range of commonly-used fruits and vegetables in the cost-of-living index.

Replying to protests from many quarters that the cost of living had increased far beyond the 16 per cent percentage reported by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, Mr. Ilsley said it was possible the index did not absolutely accurate but it was as good as that of any country.

But, apart from oranges, potatoes and onions, it was so far technically impossible to include other fruits and vegetables because of the seasonal nature of their appearance and the methods of sale, he said.

Stanley Knowles (C.C.F. Winnipeg North Centre) raised the question, and said a survey in Winnipeg had shown a 30 per cent increase in about 18 weeks of this year, and a total increase of 42 per cent since the war started.

Angus MacInnis (C.C.F. Vancouver East) said every woman in Canada who buys for her family knows that the increase in the cost of living is far more than shown in official figures.

The House spent the afternoon on the resolution in the war appropriation bill for the current fiscal year and devoted the evening to finance items, particularly the $14,-300,000 item for the Prize Board.

John Diefenbaker (Prog. Con. Lake Centre) declared there was less enforcement of price regulations but Mr. Ilsley said there had been 3,333 prosecutions since Dec. 1, 1942, with convictions in 94 per cent of them.

Senate Debates Resolution.

The Senate last night debated the resolution adopted by the House Monday, seeking amendment to the British North America act to postpone redistribution until after the war, and adjourned debate until today.

Mr. Knowles said many items of food now were off the market and people were forced to buy foods more expensive than those to which they were accustomed. Consumers got less value for the same money due to deterioration in the quality of goods, particularly wearing apparel.

Mr. Ilsley suggested the reason people were buying more expensive grades of food was because there was more purchasing power being distributed.

Mr. Knowles said the reason was because the cheaper grades had disappeared from the market. The higher-priced good were all that were available.

"Where is the rest of it?" Mr. Ilsley asked.

"I do not know," Mr. Knowles replied.

Thomas Reid (Lib. New Westminster) claimed the government was taking advice from eastern packers which discriminated against independent meat packers in British Columbia.

Mr. Ilsley said the meat administrator was from Alberta and the manager of one of the British Columbia packing houses on whose board Mr. Reid spoke was a member of the advisory meat committee and was frequently consulted. The difficulties were technical and were being worked out.

Greatest Test Coming

Mr. Diefenbaker said he expected 1943 to place the greatest test on price ceiling and anti-inflation policy with the result that there had increased by some $400,000,000 and possibly $500,000,000 less civilian goods available.

"There is the strictest enforcement sided by the cooperation of the Canadian people as a whole, inflation will progress by leaps and bounds during the present year," he said.

"Does the minister think that the prosecution of 3,333 persons in 18 months represents a serious endeavor to enforce the Board's regulations?" Mr. Diefenbaker asked.

"It never occurred to me that 333 prosecutions in one month was a small number," Mr. Ilsley replied. "You cannot be prosecuting everybody all the time and we are respectfully quite a number."

He said there were 894 prosecutions for infractions of price regulations, 853 for rental infractions, 345 rationing, 225 for other Prices Board order violations, 467 for violations of gasoline regulations, 268 for tires and 62 others, for infractions of the Munitions and Supply Board regulations.

Claims Fines Too Small

Mr. Diefenbaker said also that fines were too small. He suggested the fixing of a minimum penalty.

During the afternoon sitting, Mr. Gardiner told members who criticized the export of dairy cattle to the United States that so long as the cattle population of Canada was not being lowered he would not move to prevent this export.

There had been heavy exports but at the moment there were more cattle in Canada than ever before.

He said in reply to other questions that in spite of increased production resulting from a backward spring cheese exports would have been maintained according to contract, and he looked for a close to normal production season.

There was no intention of increasing the price of cheese to the farmer, Mr. Gardiner said. Nor was the question of butterfat interfered with the price of butter which was going at a price which would not permit competition with outside markets.

Moulton, Ga., July 7 — (AP) — When a gasoline truck driver left a ditch two boys pitched in with hoe and shovel, dammed up about 1,000 gallons. DISCOVERY OF MUSCOVY

The first contact between Great Britain and Russia did not occur until the year 1553.

Until then the British knew virtually nothing about Russia and the Russians knew virtually nothing about the British.

In that year a company of London merchants was formed to establish trade with Russia and other northern countries. It fitted out three ships for the purpose and appointed as Chief Navigator, Knightly commander and Richard Chancelor master-pilot of the flagship.

Sixteen-year-old King Edward VI, who died later that same year, went down to the port of debarkation and delivered an eloquent oration to the members of the expedition and wished them God speed.

The three vessels were dispersed by a severe storm in the North Sea and the Admiral, with Sir Hugh Willoughby on board, and a third vessel, were never heard of again. Richard Chancelor, the pilot of the expedition and captain of the Edward Bonaventure, decided to complete the mission.

The original papers and documents pertaining to this first British expedition to Russia were collected and printed in 1589 by Richard Hakluyt under the title "The Discovery of Muscovy."

After landing on the coast of Russia, Chancelor and his party made friends with the local authorities, and shortly thereafter were invited to visit the Grand Duke of Muscovy at his capital city.

The long trip from the coast to Moscow was made partly on post-horses and partly on sleds.

At that time Ivan the Terrible, the first Duke of Muscovy to establish the title of Czar, was on the throne of all the Russians. This title of Czar, according to those things that were to him the title of "The Terrible." Ivan received the Englishmen politely, treated them to a luxurious royal banquet, gave them friendship letters to their king and granted them the privileges of trade with his subjects that they sought.

The English soon learned that the Dutch and Italians had anticipated them and already were trading with the Muscovites back with the Russians.

Queen Mary, who succeeded her young brother on the English throne, encouraged the London merchants in their enterprise and in the following years regular commerce between the two countries was established.

In 1556, only three years after Richard Chancelor's first visit to Moscow, Ivan the Terrible sent an ambassador to London, and with a few brief interruptions the British and the Russians have had friendly relations ever since.

The simple summer frock of printed crepe with its lower neckline and short sleeves; the flares but of roadwork, the string of handsome synthetic pearls, create a bride costume

By PRUNELLA WOOD

THIS pretty girl is dressed in a fashion which many are choosing to replace the white satin and tulle of other wedding days. The trend now is to get your man while you can (or is that the same as always?) and your for the ceremony an, ensemble easily got together, and one which will be as useful in the trousseau.

The youthful bride ornament has always been pearls; here we have mix-made pearls which are faithful replicas of the real thing, and which are quite as desirable, personality-proof for wear with everything from the bridal gown to the knit pullover. One, two and three-strand pearl bead necklaces are equally favored.

New York Yankees Zoom Back To 3 Game Lead After Losing First Four On West Road Trip

Senators Lose Ground by Defeat in 16 Innings by Detroit Tigers

CARDS MOVE UP

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sport Writer

The New York Yankees went back a week ago and lost four games in a row. They nearly skidded out of first place and they caused some baldy comments to be aired that maybe the McCarthymen weren't miraclemen after all.

But the Yankees were just teasing their rivals. The champs have won three games in the last two days and suddenly zoomed back to a three-game lead.

They whacked out a 5-4 decision over St. Louis Browns last night to give Martin Bonnie, the scorearound southpaw, his first victory of the season in spots of the superheated lining of Chet Laabs.

Laabs drove in all four of St. Louis runs and collected his 10th home run of the year and fifth in four days, But this individual display was wasted because the Yanks bunched a single and three doubles for a four-run rally that sewed up the game in the fifth inning.

The Yankees were helped by the slump of second place Washington Senators, who dropped a 16-inning 4 game to Detroit Tigers' power day for their sixth defeat in eight games of the western trip.

Game Given Away

After tying the score at two-all on Bob Johnson's homer in the fourth, Senators battled 11 scoreless innings and took the lead with a run in the top half of the 16th. Then they gave the game away in the Tigers' half as Al Benton and Priddy let in one run on an error and relief pitcher Rae Scarborough forced in the other with two walks.

The victory lifted the Tigers within half a game of second place.

Lefty Al Smith of the Cleveland Indians shut out Philadelphia Athletics 3-0 on four hits in a mound duel with Joe Berry. Smith's win was decided when the Tribe scored the only runs of the game in the 5th inning.

St. Louis Cardinals boosted their National League lead to 4½ games by blanking Philadelphia Phillies 4-0 on three hits behind Big Harry Gumbert, who earned his fourth straight victory and ninth of the season. The Cards scored three runs before a man was out in the first inning.

Meanwhile Brooklyn Dodgers were knocked 5½ by Cincinnati Reds who acquired their first triumph of the year in Redland Field. Claude Passeau, going the route for his seventh win, was tapped for 13 hits while Cubs made only 10 off three pitchers, but the Reds bunched theirs for three runs in the first, two in the second and four in the fifth inning.

In the day's only other game Boston Braves eked out Cincinnati Reds 1-0 in a pitching battle between Jim Tobin and Ray Harrell. Javery singled home the only run. York (8).

It's home other than Wilbur "Fuzz" Morgan, the Stevenson Shipbilly and former United States Marine who requests Al Dunlop in the main bout of tonight's all-star wrestling show at the Rome Arena. Other special attractions will be the first appearance here of the famed Bilimp, a 642 pound bulk of humanity who meets Jerry Monahan, the little bitter, who tips the beam just under the 200 pound mark. And all for the same admission.

NO PESSIMISM APPARENT AMONG BASEBALL MEN

Attendance in American Association Up Nearly 10 P. C. Over Last Year

NO ALL-STAR GAME

By The Canadian Press

The public wants baseball during wartime, declared President George M. Trautman of the American Association at his mid-season directors' meeting at Chicago yesterday after reports had been received regarding attendance figures. No pessimism was apparent among the associated moguls.

Trautman brought out that the spring weather had been the worst in years and transportation formed a problem, yet the league was running 19 to 11 per cent above last year's attendance figures. The patronage during last holiday week-end had "certainly been the best in the last 10 years," he announced. Milwaukee and Indianapolis, first and second in the league standing, were leading the clubs in attendance gains.

The association directors confirmed an earlier decision to abandon the annual all-star game for this year because of travel conditions but, otherwise, the diamond season agreed to carry on in scheduled fashion.

Because farmers' haytracks and other horse-drawn vehicles were transporting the public to and from baseball parks in Kentucky, Racing Association and had become public conveyances, the Department of Port Erie last night adopted a bylaw requiring owners of such carryalls to secure liability insurance for the protection of passengers and other road-users.

The Boston Red Sox purchased George Metkovich, outfielder from the San Francisco Seals of the Pacific Coast League, on condition that he first report immediately. The National League champions were also said with a player to complete the deal, outfielder Jim Wasdell, previously obtained from Philadelphia Athletics.

Vernon (Lefty) Gomes stepped out of the league company yesterday when he was given his unconditional release by the Washington Senators, with whom he joined last May after he had been released by Boston Red Sox. The good-natured famous southpaw had started only two games for the Senators. For 12 years he had been a pitching mainstay of the New York Yankees.

The Brooklyn Dodgers are doing something new again. For the coming Sunday double-header when the team will be host to the Phillies every lady who brings half-a-pound of tea or coffee to the park will be admitted free. This is said to be the first of fat salvage admission stunts for ball.

Ronald Johnson holed his tee shot, the first ace of the season at the Lambton golf club, a 160 yard seventh hole at the Guelph and District Country Club, using a No. 3 iron. He was playing with Dudley Hiller, pro hockey star, and Harold S. Compton, also of Kitchener.

Physical jerks in the army built up muscular tissue, but not wind efficiency but the training does not develop lungs like the old method, to Lieut. George R. Tebbetts who was seven years in the majors before enlisting in the U. S. Army Air Corps. At the Waco, Tex., flying school, Tebbetts said the physical program was good for football stalwarts and boxers but would not help baseball.

Hal Johnson of Port Erie, Ont., entered the baseball hall of fame for the Niagara Peninsula yesterday. In a municipal senior baseball fixture, Johnson, the assistant fire chief at Port Alcraft, was faced by only 15 batters in a seven-inning stint against the Hortons, the score being 10-0. Referee Hammond H. Bishshaw secured the only safety against Johnson but was caught stealing second.

At Washington yesterday, Rep. Samuel Weiss of Pennsylvania told Congress that games in the U. S. Army reverses its policy the place to see football next autumn would be the nearest high school gridiron. Former Georgia Tech star and pro football referee, Weiss urged the Army to permit soldiers to engage in college football. Army officials replied in the negative, however, with the comment, "This is a war."

After an absence of two years from the Ontario Softball Association, Niagara Falls, Ont., has decided to have a team in the provincial organization to play in the intermediate "A" series. The Cataract nine will have a bye into the playdowns but has shedded many exhibition games with New York State and district clubs.

MOVES HORSES TO MONTREAL

Fort Erie, Ont., July 7—(CP)—Jim Fair, veteran Calneville, Ont., conditioner who created a mild sensation this season when he protested against methods of identifying horses on incorporated Canadian Racing Association tracks, said today he will ship his string of 18 horses to Mount Royal, near Montreal.

The string is headed by the Landican performer Modark. Fair has failed to win a race on Ontario tracks so far this year.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, July 7.—(CP)—The first professional hockey league in history, the old International League, was created during a week-end when Roy Brown visited Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., for the first time in 36 years. He has lived in Brantford, Ont., since that time.

Ross MacKay of the Sault Ste. Marie Star tells Brown was typical bags the most popular individual hockey player in the history of the community, not even excepting the stars of the Soo Greyhounds who won the Allan Cup a few years ago." Brown was a star point player (defence) in 1905 and 1906 and was captain and coach of the Sault team.

The league, which preceded the old National Hockey Association, forerunner of the N. H. L. by four years, comprised the Canadian Sault, Michigan Sault, Pittsburgh and the Michigan centres of Houghton and Calumet.

Few modern fans remember the league but its players included some of the greatest in history, here were for, instance, Cyclone Taylor and Hodda Stuart, whose names always are mentioned in discussions of all-star teams.

Other players whose names have been famous in hockey history were numerous. They included Art Ross, Lalonde Didier Pitre and Jack Laviolette who later were to team with Montreal Canadiens; Con Corbeau, later with Toronto; Riley Hern of Montreal Wanderers; Joe Marks of Quebec Bulldogs; Marty Walsh of Ottawa. There was Oliver Seibert, father of Earl Seibert, star defenseman of the present Chicago Black Hawks.

There were the days of seven-man, 60-minute hockey (two periods of 30 minutes each) when the league players went through without substitution unless seriously injured. But Brown told MacKay that the old game had certain advantages over the present day "Hockey, with the teams each changing five forwards three times should be a faster game now. But the too frequent shifting of the lines and of individual players has the effect of slowing it down from the point of view of the spectator. Then the numerous regulations connected with the line that mark the ice up the a checker board effect. Both days are guilty of the same effect."

Roy Brown thinks stickhandling now is almost a lost art. He recalled that Harry Hyland of Kenora Thistles who won the Stanley Cup in 1907 was the greatest player of all time at his wing.

SENIOR HOCKEY IN MILITARY BASE AT CORNWALL OUT

Basic Centre Becomes First to Abandon Program for Highclass Team

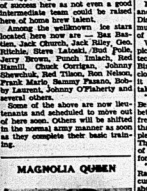
WAR TOO SERIOUS

Cornwall, Ont., July 7 — (CP) — Lt. Col. Rodolphe Laroche, Officer Commanding the Army Basic Training Centre 31, stated today that as far as his camp was concerned, there would be no senior hockey in Cornwall next winter.

One of the leaders in the concentration of pro and high class amateur hockey talent here, the Cornwall camp becomes the first to abandon the program. The gravity of the war situation prompted the local camp commander to make known his policy now.

"We may as well let the people know now that there will be no hockey here next winter," stated Col. Laroche. "There is no use waiting until October or November to make such an announcement.

The move here was an independent one, but it is likely it will spread quickly, as many centres which operated senior hockey in other years are reported to be undecided as to future moves. James McCaffrey and Clare Brunton, who helped operate Ottawa Commandos, Allan Cup winners, were said to be contemplating similar action. They are expected here today to confer with Cornwall men.



Bad Trade

Col. Laroche stated that it was in bad taste to attempt to build a hockey club in a Canadian military establishment now that the war is approaching a more serious phase. He said there was no possibility that his policy would be changed. If there is hockey here next winter it will be the civilian variety and this type of game has little chance of success here as not even a good intermediate team could be raised here of home boy talent.

Among the wellknown ice stars located here now are — Baz Bastien, Jack Church, Jack Riley, Geo. Ritchie, Steve Latoski, Bud Pole, Jerry Brown, Punch Imlach, Red Hamill, Chuck Corrigan, Johnny Shewchuk, Red Horner, Ben Hatskin, Frank Mario Sammy Pasano, Bobby Laurent, Johnny O'Flaherty and several others.

Some of the shows are now lieutenants and scheduled to move out of here soon. Others will be shifted in the normal army manner as soon as they complete their basic training.

AT THE BELLE

"Fantasia"

It is admitted by movie critics and movie fans both that Walt Disney's picture "Fantasia" is as much of a milestone as "The Birth of a Nation."

Why? The answer is that both pictures introduced revolutionary techniques of entertainment. "The Birth"of a Nation" brought out the close-up, the flashback and theme music. It was the first picture to undertake to tell the "whole" story.

"Fantasia," now playing at the Belle, brings out a new relationship between the screen and music. It frees the imagination to the extent that new images, new ideas, new pleasurable sensations are created. The result is that "Fantasia" is of a new order of entertainment being born before your eyes.

"Fantasia," released by RKO Radio, has caused storms of discussion wherever it has been shown.

"Air Raid Wardens"

Laurel and Hardy are back again in a hilarious new comedy in tune with the times in M-G-M's "Air Raid Wardens," showing now at the Belle Theatre. Though the picture is chock full of riotous situations the comedians poke fun at no one individual, but do deliver a stirring patriotic lesson.

Enlisted Their Services

When the two partners try to join the armed forces and are rejected by the draft boards, they return to their home town and become air raid wardens to do their bit. When their blunders create havoc in the ranks they become perilously involved and as a result are mustered out of the warden's service. But they manage to stumble on a ring of saboteurs and round them up to become the town's heroes.

You'll scream with laughter when you see them actually make a victim of the leader of the gang, a man during a first-aid practice drill and how when they run afoul Edgar Kennedy when he refuses to co-operate during a blackout.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Mister Big"

Parading a lineup of extraordinary youthful talent, Universal's novel comedy musical, "Mister Big" comes next to the McCarthy Theatre. Donald O'Connor, one of Hollywood's most remarkable juvenile performers, is starred. Headlined with him are Gloria Jean and Peggy Ryan.

Jive versus the classics, is the theme of "Mister Big" and the idea is said to have been developed for the screen in entertaining style.

Locale of the bright story is a school of the "hot" music, a gang of jive-minded kids mingle boogie-woogie with highbrow.

Other popular players in the cast are Robert Paige, Elyse Knox, Samuel S. Hinds and Bobby Scheerer.

Singing and dancing are featured throughout the picture with unusual specialties contributed by The Ben Choir and Ray Eberle with Modernaires. Eight special numbers composed by Buddy Bregman and Sam James are heard in the film. O'Connor, Gloria Jean and Miss Ryan participate in the presentation of "Mister Big" with the song "This Are The Spirit Is In Me," "This Can Be A Dream," "Hi Character," "We're Not Through Growing" with the song "Seven Laced" and "Thee and Me".

Gloria Jean said to have the most interesting role of her spectacular movie career, also sings "Moonlight and Roses." The famous Ben Carter Choir renders "We'll Meet Again".

"Mister Big", in which O'Connor becomes a full-fledged star is heralded as an ideal movie for the whole family.

3rd feature attraction is "King of the Cowboys" featuring in addition to Roy Rogers and Miss Smiley Burnette, Dennis Moore, Sons of the Pioneers, Dorothea Kent, Robert Blake, Lloyd Corrigan, James Bush and Russell Hicks.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Springtime in the Rockies"

The reason for the influx of name bands into motion pictures of late is obvious — the bands are strong at the box office. Typical of their fabulous popularity, which has risen to equal that of our best-known film stars, is the wide prestige enjoyed by Harry James and His Music Makers, currently featured in 20th Century-Fox's new Technicolor musical, "Springtime in the Rockies," coming next to the Capitol Theatre. The merry film also stars John Payne, Betty Grable, Carmen Miranda and Cesar Romero.

Harry James and his lads have proved their box office value, for in a recent radio popularity poll, they were selected as America's number one "jive" combination in a ballot that involved every important band in the United States.

This new type of screen star-an orchestra leader and his music-is already proving itself on a par with screendom's finest, which, of course, explains the sudden influx of name bands into Hollywood. For example:

"Springtime in the Rockies," Harry James' current musical screen hit, also features Edward Everett Horton and Charlotte Greenwood.

"The Trail Blazers"

In a gun-roaring round up of bandits "The Trail Blazers, Ken Maynard and Hoot Gibson, are back again on the screen in "The Law Rides Again," the added action hit. Monogram's outdoor adventure also features Joan Barclay, LaRue and Betty Miles.

Including the double feature the a color cartoon will be shown as well as Zane Grey's "King of the Mountain."

Play-off Dates For Softball Are Announced

Juniors and Reliance Meet For City Championship While Others Play Series

With the Army & Navy Juniors winning the play-off spot in group "B" of the Belleville Softball League by beating the Belleville Pontiacs 10 to 8 last night, Vic President Joe Samain announced the play-off dates for the season today.

The top position teams in both local groups, Reliance and the Army & Navy Juniors will play-off for the city championship and the Bank of Commerce trophy, with Reliance gaining the right to play in the O.A.B.A. final series. In the meantime the remaining four intermediate clubs, No. 5 I.T.S. "Flyers," Stephens & Adamson "Marines," Bristol Aircraft and Belleville Foundries will engage in a play-off elimination series with the ultimate winner meeting the Reliance.

The play-off schedule brings the Marines versus Bristol and the Flyers meeting the Foundries in the best of three series. The opening schedule reads:

July 8 — Foundries vs. No. 5 I.T.S.

July 9 — Reliance vs. Army & Navy

July 12 — Stephens Adamson - vs. Bristol

July 13 — No. 5 I.T.S. vs. Foundries

July 14 — Army & Navy vs. Reliance

July 15 — Bristol vs. Stephens Adamson

July 16 — Reliance vs. Army & Navy.

Making their extra base hits count Red Townsend's Army & Navy Juniors clubbed a former teammate, Freddie Waite, to all corners of the City Grounds to win the play-off game against Belleville Foundries 14 to 8 last night, Don Boyle was on the hilltop for the Reds and except for Clements' triple, was never in serious difficulties. Waite took for the circuit to help the Juniors, while he added a triple, Boyle helped his own cause with a three base smash, as did McQuade, who led the kids on the back with three hits.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 180

BY SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

No bridge player will ever be an automaton. The human element will always assert itself. But those who know the correct rules are the most capable when it comes to best judgment.

No-trump tricks are aces, kings, queens; high cards. It takes nine tricks to make a game in no-trump. Thus, it seems a game of three no-trump requires nine high cards.

But there are only 16 high cards in a pack. So, one pair or the other is bound to take at least one trick with some card that is lower than a queen. Such a pair will only need eight high cards.

The side that has control of all four suits has an advantage. That side is able to quickly start developing their small cards for tricks. So that side is most likely to need one less high card.

The discovery of four sure tricks by a pair does not always assure control of all four suits. But it does so often enough to use as a basic or a rule.

Thus, when one side finds they have at least four sure tricks, they are sitting pretty. They may have more. But they only need four high cards to try for a game of three no-trumps.

An opening bid of one in a suit shows five suit tricks, of which four are high cards (no-trump tricks), among which are two sure tricks. That gives partner a basis for future no-trump bids.

If partner has five high cards, he knows they have nine no-trump tricks for it he has four high cards with two sure tricks, he knows there is a good chance for a game at no-trump.

Your partner starts with an opening bid of one heart, and you have this hand:

♠ A Q 3
♥ 7 6 4 2
♦ A 9 4 2
♣ J 9 3

You have four high cards, among which are two sure tricks. You should know there is a good chance for your pair to make a game in no-trumps.

You may not like it. But there it is, anyway.

Hour of Grace

CHAPTER 2

"Oh, well, maybe she'll be . . . maybe it'll be fun."

Meegan nodded. Then she asked, "Who are the people next door? I'd like to call on them."

"Oh! You mean . . . Oh, yes. The Lesters, that's all I know, and the little girl told me her mother had several—two dresses to wear this summer. Imagine, seventy-two dresses!"

When Meegan managed to leave, she walked across to the large stone and stucco house, more than a few of the island homes were being rented this year and there would be new faces where once only faces long familiar had been. It was a changing world in which one's mind must be sufficiently elastic to meet the changes with new values sharply scrutinized. For the people of her generation, she thought, the changes would be either a failure or a victory. Perhaps no more would there be a safe middle course. Perhaps one would live intensely or die.

She did not see across about the house or grounds. They had probably gone swimming. Then on the side porch she saw a dark head rise from a wicker chair and an instant later a vivid, pretty girl in a blue skirt and white sweater was looking at her intently.

"Hello," Meegan said. This could not be Mrs. Lester. She was too young. "Is Mrs. Lester there?"

But the girl continued to stare suilenly, her dark eyes brooding unhappily upon her. Meegan did not think she would speak at all. Suddenly the girl's hand smote her and she opened the screened door.

"She'll be back any time now. Won't you come in?"

Obviously unwelcome, Meegan nevertheless stepped up to the porch where there were several wicker chairs and a wicker chaise lounge and a maple table covered with magazines. Toys had been dropped everywhere. One never saw any toys at Sue's and often Meegan had wondered if Sue's children were allowed toys.

She sat in one of the wicker chairs and the girl sat hesitatively on the end of the chaise lounge. She was slim and beautifully tanned and though Meegan knew she had tried hard to look fashionable casual, she had not altogether succeeded. All too plain were her efforts to look as the girls on the island looked without effort or thought. Her black hair, shoulder length, was shiny and beautiful.

When Meegan said: "I'm Meegan McLean," the girl looked up blankly. Meegan had said something which stung her painfully.

She said, "How do you do," coldly. "This is Mrs. Lester, sister, Erica."

"I'm very glad to know you. You see, I'd like to see Mrs. Lester because I'm trying to organize a group of children to take swimming in the morning and afternoon. I've just seen Mrs. Van Steenwyck and I'm calling for her children and I thought Mrs. Lester might also be interested."

"For money?"

It was the coldest young voice Meegan had ever heard. It startled her. She wondered why it also hurt her.

"Yes, for money. We are not all rich here. In fact, very few of us are any more."

"I thought you were."

"Why, what do you know about me?"

At that moment a long-nosed beige car, very new and very shiny, drove in the driveway and stopped and a large blonde woman in a white beach coat and slippers first and then assisted a blonde little girl and boy in abbreviated bathing suits. The children were chattering happily but above their voices the woman's voice, in rough but good-natured tones, was saying, "Now, go around the back way and get Paisley to give you a shower. Tell her to get all the sand off you. Hurry, baby. Don't stand there, you'll get cold."

As she came closer, Meegan saw that her yellow hair, bobbed and in a crown of short curls, was dark at the roots and that her face and body had probably been lovely before they had thickened. Still her face had a candid, open look and she was a person who would laugh easily, act heartily and worry not at all. She would be a comfortable person to be with because there were no secrets in her and because, despite the synthetic hair and highly rouged cheeks, she was naturally maternal and natural good-humored.

When she saw Meegan, her eyes quickened and she smiled. The next moment she flung a hurried, cautious look at Erica.

"Hello," she said. She almost spoke it as she stepped to the porch. "Gosh, look at me, bringing in all this sand, Erica didn't you tell me?"

"I'm Meegan McLean." Meegan said as Erica leaned forward and kept her distance. "No, thanks. I don't use them."

"Thanks," Mrs. Lester said to her sister-in-law and took a cigarette and lighted it with a plump hand and blew out a great jet of smoke. "Wouldn't you like some-thing to drink?"

"Thank you, no, not now." Then smiling, speaking pleasantly, she explained why she had come, saying that it was making Mrs. Lester happier by the minute.

"Why sure, I'd love to have them and they'd enjoy it! They're very bad kids, spoiled, I guess. You can't help spoiling them."

Erica asked, "How much do you charge, Miss McLean?"

"Oh, Erica, what difference does it make?"

"The charge is two dollars a week for six days," Meegan said. "Is that all right" Mrs. Lester cried. "That's nothing. Sure, they can go and you're welcome to the job."

Meegan wished that she could see them now. There were chores at home and since her mother did not drive it was her task to drive to the village for groceries. Then, too, if she did not get back before Mrs. Lester left the car, he would take the car. Still she hesitated, hating to spoil Mrs. Lester's pleasure at her call and hoping that Erica would like it.

Mrs. Lester leaned forward. "You see how coming here saved your summer, I suppose."

"Well, almost. There were a few invitations we went other places." The summer in Europe with her father, that wonderful summer and the summer at Bar Harbor with her mother and Toby.

"This is our first here." Mrs. Lester said. "It's a beautiful place. I told Roy, that's my husband, that I bet if you flew over it it would look like a Christmas garden. But Roy can't enjoy it because he's too busy with production. Keeps a cot right at the factory and sleeps there. He'll be lucky if he can get down for a swim on Sunday. That's the way it goes. When you're broke, you have all the time in the world and no money and when you have money, you don't have time to spend it and enjoy it. Oh, listen to me, ratting on about myself. Will you stay to lunch?"

"Thank you but I can't today. I have to see about lunch for my mother and brother. I'd like to." She meant it. She wasn't like Sue, she thought. She liked newness and change when they were as refreshing as Mrs. Lester.

"Some other time then?"

"Of course. You're very kind."

When Meegan arose, Mrs. Lester arose. Erica sat stiffly still.

Mrs. Lester said, "I'll have the children ready at nine in the morning. If you have any trouble with them don't hold back. It won't hurt them. I can tell somebody else to spank them and if I can't do it myself!"

"I'm sure I won't have any trouble with them."

When Meegan left, Mrs. Lester turned to Erica.

"What made you act like that? You weren't even polite to her!"

Erica lifted her chin. She said quietly, "It's easy for her. Everything is easy for her."

Walking up the gently sloping hill toward her home, Meegan's thoughts dug into the past. The small item in the morning paper announcing the name of Erica caused the mental digging she had had to prevent for a long time. Because that was yesterday and in the startling new perspective it was a war to be won and a living to be made and people like Mrs. Lester to meet and like and wonder about and perhaps admit into one's life. She thought of Sue's face and lifted nose if Sue were hear that she had promised to have lunch with Mrs. Lester. She laughed. What's the matter with us? Is it smugness or indifference or just plain snobbishness? Or are we afraid? I felt that there was a great deal Mrs. Lester could teach me but very little I could teach her.

They had all grown up together in the same block in suburban Baltimore. There, Adele, Sue, Van, Jerry, Toby and she. There were others, too, now married and living on the island in the summer. Meegan was two years younger than they, those few years causing her as child to be tolerated as Toby's kid sister and as a schoolgirl to finish school later than they and now to be with the exception of Adele and Toby, the only unmarried one of the old group.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was looking at pop smoking to himself in the private chair, and she said, I know it's a tender subject, William, but aren't you going to start your Victory garden again?

I know when I'm licked, pop said. Fate is against me. Fate decreed that a Pathfield bird should swoop down on every one of my spring onions the moment it thrust its head above ground. And this vile cruel world, and Fate decreed that a Pathfield bird should maliciously spring upon all my trusting young tomato plants as soon as the new Victory garden till my joints segred and I lay down my hoe, but what chance has a single man against Fate?

Well why I asked was, Hilda Spruance had some spare gas so she drove me downtown today for a little community shopping, and she insisted on my taking lunch at her house first, ma said. It was just a light lunch of stuffed tomatoes on a bed of garden lettuce, and some creamed spinnich, but really, William, I mean really. I never tasted such delicious vegetables and every one of them was picked dripping fresh from the Spruances own Victory garden. So I should think, William, if a man that you think so little of as Horace Spruance can induce a Victory garden to succeed, you can't put it off, said.

By golliss I can, pop said. If Horace can do it I can do it better. I'll get some more seeds, and I'll get a hoe and dig me a Victory Onwards to Victory garden, he said, and I said, Jimminy, pop, I mean gosh, ma, that's funny. When I went in the market to leave your order on my way to school Mrs. Spruance was there and she was ordering spinnich and tomatoes and lettuce, I said.

Really? ma said. Perhaps it was just a coincidence, she said, and pop said, It was another hint from Fate direct to me, that's what it was, and I'm a man who has learned to take a hint from Fate, Saying it kind of relieved.

"Our friends have long known what our enemies are learning today," the message declared, "that the promises of the United States are always kept and our pledges are always redeemed.

"The statements which follow have been made by me at various times and are joined hands with you in this war, it is good to know that the hopes and the promises I expressed on these former occasions are still being borne out today.

Icebreaker Sank During Overhaul Job at Montreal

Government Ship Lady Grey Will Be Raised—Damage Not Excessive—Sinking is Being Investigated

Montreal, July 7 — (CP)—The lists and deals of all men who worked on the government icebreaker Lady Grey before she sank at her dock in the yards of Canadian Vickers here July 1 are being investigated by the uncertain if enemy hands were responsible" for the sinking.

T. R. McLagan, Vickers general manager, said that the sinking "could be sabotage." "It is quite possible that sea-cocks were opened by enemy hands," he said. The sinking occurred while the ice-breaking and refitting job that was to prepare the Lady Grey for additional duty had been virtually completed.

Censorship prevented publication of details of the sinking until last night.

Mr. McLagan said that there also was a possibility that the sinking was due to a water valve having been left open. "But this seems remote," he said.

The 731-ton ship, built 21 years ago, was not completely to the navy specifications and had no watertight compartments which explained how she keeled over.

No lives were lost in the sinking.

Vickers officials said that the ship will be raised and that it is not anticipated damage will be excessive. The officials estimated that the job of refloating and repairing the ship could be raised and repaired.

U.S. JUNGLE FIGHTERS SIX MILES FROM MUNDA BASE

REDS FIGHT BRILLIANTLY TO HOLD NAZI HORDES

Weaken Enemy's Hold by Crushing Naval Victory

Nine and Possibly 11 Jap Cruisers and Destroyers Sunk in Kula Gulf

OTHER UNITS TRAPPED

By MURRAY SPENCER
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Allied Headquarters, Australia, July 8 (AP)—United States Jungle fighters battled today within six miles of the Japanese air base of Munda from two new landing points on New Georgia Island, in the Central Solomons area where the enemy's hold has been weakened by a crushing naval defeat.

The new landings were disclosed today by Gen. Douglas MacArthur in a communique which also said that in the warship engagement July 5-6 above Munda in the Kula Gulf as least nine, possibly 11 Japanese cruisers and destroyers were sunk against loss of the cruiser U.S.S. Helena.

In the jungle fight on the approaches to the Japanese air base of Salamaua, New Guinea, veteran Australian troops captured Chevron Hill between Salamaua and Lae-bo after its Japanese defenders had been killed or demoralized by the loss of bombs dropped in less that 45 minutes by medium and heavy bombers.

The new landings which increased the peril to Munda were made Monday night, when engineers ashore at Rice Anchorage, four miles northeast of Munda, covered the way for naval barrages.

Monday night, other forces stormed ashore at Zanana, six miles east of Munda.

Made Contact in Gulf

Before dawn the following morning American warships made contact in the Kula Gulf above the scene of the latest landing operations with a Japanese cruiser-destroyer force.

Today's communique said that in the first phase of the engagement, four or five hostile warships were struck by smashing broadsides that within five minutes "left nothing afloat after the entire group.

"There a number of enemy light cruisers were then taken under fire and all were either sunk or afire within 10 minutes. One was beached."

Later, "our destroyers intercepted and sank two of three enemy ships attempting to escape to the gulf and damaged the third."

Allied aircraft got in some heavy blows. Above the Kula Gulf of Kolombangara Island, Liberator bombers and dive-bombers, escorted by fighters, struck Japanese cruiser and destroyer forces at Vila with 28 tons of bombs. Later medium bombers, escorted by fighters, delivered a night attack.

Over the New Guinea jungle front in addition to the aerial bombardment of Salamaua and Lae, Allied planes bombed and strafed the Japanese at Mubo, Bobdubi and Bobdubi ridges of Salamaua, and raided the supply barge sector of Labu lagoon above Salamaua near Lae.

Victory Is Achieved Over Japs in Kula Gulf With Loss of One U.S. Cruiser

MOST OF CREW SAVED

By TOM YARBROUGH
South Pacific Headquarters, July 8 — (AP) — The United States Navy's victory over the Japanese in Kula Gulf July 5 was reported reliably today to have been achieved at no cost whatever in American ships and personnel save that of a light cruiser.

An informed source at this basin, which directly supervises the Solomons campaign, said that aside from the cruiser, not one of the American war vessels engaged in the gunfire and torpedo action was so much as damaged in the brief but intense gun-duel action in the narrow waters between New Georgia and Kolombangara Islands.

The cruiser, the U.S.S. Helena, was sent to the bottom during the running battle, but the informants here said a considerable proportion of its crew was rescued and others may have made their way safely to shore.

Against these moderate losses were posed, on the basis of reports made available here, the destruction of eight Japanese warships and the probable destruction of two or three others. (Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters in Australia in one figure at nine ships known sunk and probably 11 damaged.)

The Americans, matched against a similar enemy force of light cruisers and destroyers, were said to have been overwhelmingly superior in units engaged but nevertheless to have maintained the initiative from the start of the fight-to-the-finish Japanese trying to escape northward from the gulf under cover of darkness and heavy weather.

Two Types Met

The first salvo was fired at 2 a.m. Two types met as the night enemy warship remained on the scene.

The source here gave this account of the action, which he said was distilled into these facts:

The first phase saw five Japanese ships intercepted as they were leaving the gulf. Within five minutes, five of them went up in flames.

Shortly afterward, the American force picked up a second group of three ships. Two were destroyed or crippled.

Meanwhile, American destroyers blocked the path of a light cruiser and two destroyers attempting to sneak to safer waters. The United States warships engaged the light cruiser and one destroyer and damaged the second destroyer.

The Royal Daylight Army and Navy fliers found two damaged enemy destroyers and, finishing off one damaged, and attacked them heavily.

Allied reconnaissance scored several direct hits on each destroyer. The two were then further furiously and then exploded. They are a total loss.

New Super-Secret Fighter Plane Now Rolling Off the Assembly Lines

Washington, July 8 — (AP)—New super-secret fighter planes designed to make up-to-the-minute combat conditions have started rolling off the assembly lines in the United States, Senator Truman said today in the stepped-up aerial offensive of the United Nations.

Disclosure that new fighter types are in production was made by Charles E. Wilson, executive vice chairman of the War Production Board, who declined, for security reasons, to reveal any details whatever.

Asked at a press conference late yesterday whether the war by battery are entirely new jobs or modifications of existing ones, Wilson replied with a laconic "Both."

W. B. Shattuck, Donald M. Nelson said it was these changes in the fighter planes in the light of experience, that presented the greatest single obstacle to greater volume production.

Nelson answered confidence the new fighters would prove effective in battle, for we wouldn't be producing them.

When all present production facilities reach their ultimate maximum, Wilson predicted the United States will be able to turn out the excess of 10,000 planes monthly. This peak will not be reached until some time in 1944. (Plane production in May exceeded 7,000, the highest so far recorded.)

While June production figures still are incomplete, Nelson said the output would not be much better than in May.

Nelson and Wilson told reporters June output of planes was about the same as in May "in numbers," but added that when figured on the basis of weight this involved a continuing trend toward heavier planes, including four-engine bombers.

GERBINI RAIDED NINETEEN TIMES IN SINGLE DAY

Enemy Opposition Over Sardinia and Sicily on "Reduced Scale"

PALERMO HIT HARD

(By RELMAN MORIN)
(Associated Press War Analyst)

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, July 8 (AP) — The relentless Allied air hammering against Sicily and Sardinia went through its fifth day today to have been achieved as heavy bombings of airfields and other military targets, it was announced officially today.

Meeting fighter opposition was reported to have been on a "reduced scale," but nevertheless Allied fighters shot down 141 Axis planes for a loss of five of their own.

The Italian island of Pantelleria, a titanic air battle between American and German fighters and more than 100 enemy planes on Monday, was battered 19 more times yesterday by heavy and medium bombers, with the loss of one mediumor a single enemy aircraft.

American fighters escorting the R.A.F. bombers in a raid on Borizzo in western Sicily gained six of the day's victories. They hounded over Borizzo airfield for almost an hour.

While all of western Sicily felt some of the weight of the bombardment—fighters even went down into Sardinia—the military targets in the countryside—the great network of airfields in and around Gerbini was the principal object of Allied operations.

Following the day raids, R.A.F. Wellington bombers carried on the assult into the night with attacks on Palermo, where crews reported a great weight of bombs on the railway yards at Palermo and left fires in their wake.

Returning crews reported the Palermo attack was the fifth the enemy indicated that the defenders were being overwhelmed by the increasing storm of explosives and incendiaries.

Nineteen times within 24 hours the formations of Allied planes were in the sky over Gerbini. Bombs fell in layers. They tore up runways in all of Gerbini's airdromes, smashed revetments and plowed through areas with layers of fragmentation bombs.

The swarms of German and Italian defenders that rose to fight the Allied bombers was nowhere in sight, and except for some antiaircraft fire, the enemy's attackers worked unhindered.

Trails Italian Cruiser

R.A.F. planes had to dive through a layer of clouds to bomb Milo airfield at 10,000 feet, but not before it they did a thorough job, causing fires that flew like geysers and thought was a fuel dump.

Other R.A.F. fighter-bombers attacked a rail centre and warehouses at Augusta on the east coast of Sicily. Other fighter-bombers went out twice on "hunting trips," one to Pantelleria and the second and saw four freight cars burning.

C.N.R. SUGGESTS TENTATIVE' PLAN RECONSTRUCTION

$640,446,000 Program Can be Carried Out by C.N.R. if Necessary

TO PROVIDE WORK

Ottawa, July 8—(CP)—The Canadian National Railways today placed before the Commons Reconstruction Committee a "tentative" post-war program aimed at providing employment on inviting capital expenditure of $640,446,000 and providing employment estimated at 93,000,000 man-days. The work might be undertaken by the C.N.R. "if post-war conditions should necessitate such expenditure."

The program, attached to a brief prepared for presentation before the committee, includes:

1. Capital works expanding the company's field of operations: $59,500,000—20,000,000 man-days.

2. Self-liquidating projects: $306,771,000—30,800,000 man-days.

3. Desirable but economically marginal projects: $270,000,000—40,200,000 man-days.

4. Projects desirable but not productive of economy to railway: $103,537,000—3,500,000 man-days.

Brief Presented

R. C. Vaughan, C.N.R. president introduced the brief, which was prepared and read before the committee by Vice-President S. W. Fairweather, and said the suggested post-war program was drawn up "because we have been requested by the Government to provide an indication of the employment that might be given by the railways, and if it should be necessary for the Government to provide employment money in the post-war period to prevent unemployment."

In his presentation of the brief, Mr. Fairweather summarized the employment opportunities affected by the C.N.R. and said that if the Canadian economy were operating at national income remained at $6,000,000—the figures—normal operating and capital expenditure would be maintained.

Axis Recognizes Allied War Production As Voice of Doom—Nelson

Toronto, July 8—(CP)—The war production of United Nations can speaks to the world "in a big voice," Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the United States War Production Board, said today in an address prepared for delivery to the Canadian Club of Toronto.

"And if the Nazi and Jap warlords are not completely insane, they will recognize that the voice is the voice of doom," he added.

Mr. Nelson told of the output of war materials in the United States and Canada, since the outbreak of war, almost 115,000 planes were produced, and figured that at the end of this year "we will be producing a completed plane every four and two-third minutes around the clock every day of the month."

More than 175,000 larger caliber guns of all kinds for the ground armies; nearly 2,000,000 machine guns and 6,000,000 rifles and submachine guns also had been manufactured. Almost 300,000,000 rounds of artillery ammunition and 4,000,000 ammunition for naval guns have been made and about 25,000,000,000 rounds of small arms ammunition "enough to let us fire over 1,200 bullets at every soldier in the Axis armies."

Very Great Production

"Some of the tanks and tank chassis have rolled off assembly lines and more than 1,000,000 trucks," he said.

"It should like to point out to these Axis that Canada alone has turned out half a million trucks — or about one-fifth of the total — although her population is only about eight per cent of the combined population responsible for this record production," he said.

Of the 70,000 scout cars, armored cars and similar combat vehicles produced around Canada, is supplying close to 20,000.

"As for ships, I can tell you that going merchant vessels since the start of the war now has reached 20,000,000 deadweight tons, and today our rate of production is over 22,000,000 deadweight tons a year.

"Besides these merchant craft and auxiliaries, naval vessels totalling more than 2,000,000 displacement tons have been completed. At present rates of production, these fast, heavily armed ships will be joining every month by sister ships totalling an average of about 300,000 tons...

"I think at this point, we should warn the enemy not to take too much comfort from the so-called set-backs of the home front in the United States in recent days," Mr. Nelson said. "We could like to let the last to attempt to minimize the serious effects of spasmodic strikes and riots on the war production program.

"On the other hand, there is little question that these disturbances of these disturbances. The great bulk of war producers, in the factories and the farmers, in the United States have not been affected by these unfortunate tasks. For the first five months of 1943, for example, only 7-100ths of one percent of production time was disrupted by strikes.

He said the war production achievements "will be known and will tax us to the utmost." Every individual who plays a part either directly or indirectly in war production, will be expected to contribute a burst of energy to carry through to the conclusive defeat of the enemy.

our combined production of ocean-going vessels afloat is almost as great as the combined gross tonnage of the enemy.

"This renewed effort is aimed to defeat the enemy so crushingly that his spirit will be broken and the day of his unconditional surrender hastened. In accomplishing this purpose, we can afford to sit as low a cost as possible in the lives of our fighting men. . . .

ALLIED INVASION OF EUROPE NEAR BERLIN REPORTS

NO CONFIRMATION

London, July 8—(CP)—The Berlin radio reported today that battle units of the Allied Mediterranean fleet, including many powerful American cruisers and aircraft carriers, have left Gibraltar, leading "to the supposition that the Americans Allied commander in chief is preparing for an invasion of Europe."

The broadcast, recorded by The Associated Press, declared that the British, in addition to strong concentrations of warships and transports here in the Mediterranean, and 15 to 20 tank formations poised between Morocco and Syria, "have now begun to include parachute battalions and airborne troops in their plans. Algiers, it was declared, "would be to create at first one or two bridgeheads."

"At first sight," the German radio said, "this plan would appear considerable, but at least half of the forces are originally and locally tied down," in Algeria, Syria, Palestine, Egypt and Cyrenaica.

Only Small Force Available Claim

Other German claims are held down by a complicated supply system which is in no way adequate for them. Eisenhower's American divisions, the broadcast said, "thoroughly overhauled as regards training," the broadcast said.

The available effective forces, therefore, it added, constitute only a small force for the Allied troops stationed in the Mediterranean.

The broadcast from the German agency known as the "international correspondents' service" declared that among the fleet units leaving Gibraltar were the battleship Nelson, ships of the King George class—the battleships Duke of York, George V, Duke of York, Anson and Howe.

Several hundred thousand tons of merchant shipping also was concentrated at Gibraltar, the broadcast said.

The broadcast reports concerning the Allied air and ground manpower were totally without confirmation from any Allied source.

GEN. GIRAUD MAY DISCUSS STATUS OF MARTINIQUE

Possible Pro-Allied Administration May Be Installed in This Troubled Area

NOW IN WASHINGTON

By RICHARD G. MASSOCK
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, July 8—(AP)—Installation of a pro-Allied administration in troubled Martinique was one of the prime subjects for discussion today between Washington officials and Gen. Henri Giraud, French member of the National Committee of National Liberation.

Conversations with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Allied commander-in-chief of 15,000 persons recounted a break with Vichy and an alliance with the Allies, were reported in a dispatch from Port of Spain, Trinidad, today.

Reports generally favoring the Fighting French leader, Gen. Charles de Gaulle, were reported to have taken possession of the island after a lapse of two days. Gendarmerie sent to disperse them, the dispatch said, the demonstrators unmolested as they shouted "Vive de Gaulle" and sang the French anthem "Le Marseillaise."

Gen. Giraud is in Washington as the government's guest, on a military mission. He arrived late yesterday. En route from Algiers, he stopped at San Juan, Puerto Rico and learned from Vice-Admiral John H. Hoover, United States com sander of Carribean defenses, the offer by Admiral Georges Robert, Vichy French High Commissioners at Martinique to negotiate a change of allegiance.

Will Negotiate with Robert

The Algiers committee, which Gen. Giraud heads jointly with Gen. Charles de Gaulle, has interested Henri Etienne Hoppenot, Free French diplomatic representative in Washington, with extraordinary powers to negotiate with Robert.

As he left the White House after visiting President Roosevelt yesterday afternoon, Gen. Giraud was asked if he had stopped at Martinique. He answered vigorously "No, no, no."

Perochu in close touch with the move to bring the island of Guadaloupe to the side of the United Nations said it was probable the Algiers committee, meanwhile, would appoint someone to replace Admiral Georges Robert. They said Hoppenot might himself take Gen. Giraud's place here.

Hoppenot is a 53-year-old career diplomat who has served as consul at Montevideo when he resigned in 1940 to join de Gaulle after the calling of Pierre Laval to power at Vichy and the shipment of French troops to Germany. He returned to Washington as chief civilian adviser of the French military mission.

AMERICANS RAID CANTON

London, July 8—(CP)—Strong American fighter-bombers attacked Canton and Hankow, base at Canton on the South China coast, and Hankow, the Berlin radio quoted advices from Chungking, July 8 said.

The broadcast, recorded by the Associated Press, said one of the raiders was shot down.

Figures Would Astound

The broadcast declared Belgorod was the only area in which the Germans made any advance; and were then limited to regions where good roads and vast stretches of open fields hampered the defence.

In one action Russian infantrymen crouching in their trenches until its tanks had crossed and recrossed the earthworks, let the tanks crush them and open the way for Nazi infantrymen to follow, but the hot dust and stifling exhaust fumes, the Berlin broadcast stayed put until the armored group considered that mission complete and moved on, then the Russians sprang up and hurling grenades into the tanks to immobilize the bulk of the enemy.

Directly behind the battlefront, the broadcast said, were the ambulances bring in the harvest. To the Germans, victory in the grain fields is as important as that on the battlefields. They need them as spare for both.

Russian Small Wedge

Near Belgorod, said a special communique issued this morning, the counter-attack against the enemy has "succeeded in driving a wedge, to an insignificant distance, into our defences," enveloping several villages and taking a few tremendous losses.

In a DNB broadcast a German propaganda agency, the International Information Bureau, asserted the Nazi forces had destroyed 600 Soviet tanks and knocked down 1,000 planes in Belgorod and Orel sectors. The broadcast, recorded by the Associated Press, also said that deeply schelonged Russian positions had been broken.)

Weight of the German losses in men and material were regarded as the greatest single blow ever inflicted upon the German war machine, the Russians warned the counter-attack.

"It would be wrong for us to underestimate the strength of the German troops conducting the big offensive," said the communique. "German forces here are great. Today it is too early to undertake a final conclusion concerning the German losses.

The special announcement reported the Germans had buried approximately 450,000 men — or 30 divisions—14 tank divisions, one motorized and 15 infantry—in the attempt to capture Kursk; one strong drive northward from the Orel region and another northward from Belgorod.

(In a Berlin broadcast heard in London today, the Nazi broadcaster Prem, Lieut. Kurt Jerarich, transocean military commentator, described the Soviet attack in the battle by Kursk," and made the first German admission that the Nazis had launched an offensive. Nazi propaganda ministry had held to the line that it was the Russians who launched the attack on morning of July 5.

The Germans asserted they had made gains in the Orel sector at the northern end of the line as well as in the Belgorod area, inflicted of "400,000 check Soviet troops and destroyed very strong tank and artillery forces."

The broadcast declared the Germans had brought up air reinforcements from Western Europe and Yugoslavia as well as from other sectors of the eastern front.

Great Air Battles

Both sides said great air battles were raging.

(In fact, said the transocean communique, that in one night's attack, "the Germans are throwing more attacks than ever before in the Anglo-Saxons ever did in the fight for Tunisia.")

30,000 Nazis Dead Many Tanks, Planes Destroyed in Battle

Greatest Battles Ever Fought on East Front Take Place In Last Three Days

NAZIS USE NEW PLANS

(By WILLIAM McGAFFIN)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, July 8 (AP) — Fresh Nazi reserves were reported pushing through smoke and dust and gunpalls marked by wrecked machines in the second today in the greatest tank battle of the Kursk Plains offensive which the Red army, fighting more brilliantly than ever before, has limited to small gains in the Belgorod sector.

Russian forces killed 30,000 Germans, destroyed or damaged 1,330 tanks and shot down 648 planes in the first three days of the battle, it was announced officially.

Nazi air force squadrons are attached constantly to the invading armored columns under a new German plan of attack by which Hitler's high command hopes to pinch off the six-mile-deep Soviet salient extending westward from Kursk. The immediate assignment of the Germans obviously is to attempt to push north from Belgorod and Orel sectors. The broadcast, recorded by the Associated Press, also said that deeply schelonged Russian positions had been broken.)

WATSON SISTERS POSTED TO DIFFERENT STATIONS

Belleville's three sisters in the Canadian Women's Army Corps became separated for the first time since their enlistment, three weeks ago when on Monday following graduation from the basic training centre at Kitchener, the Watson sisters, Evelyn, Jewelyn and Ida were posted to different stations.

The three Belleville girls made newspaper headlines following their enlistment "en mass" into the C.W.A.C. at the Kingston recruiting centre. Daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Watson, 52 Octavia Street, the girls gave no reason for all joining the C.W.A.C. other than that they "preferred" the army.

At the completion of basic training on Monday, Isobel was posted to remain at the Kitchener training centre as instructor, while Ida and Evelyn will go to Ottawa to take a typist-clerk course.

Roscoe Robson, Thurlow Reeve, Standard Bearer for E. Hastings Progressive Conservatives

Four Stand for Nomination and Candidate Elected on Second Ballot

MEET IN MADOC

Madoc, July 8 (By Staff Reporter) — The standard bearer for the East Hastings Progressive Conservatives in the forthcoming provincial election it was decided by party delegates at their nomination convention held in the Armouries here on Wednesday afternoon.

The popular Thurlow reeve was the choice of delegates and attendees from a field of four candidates who offered themselves as successor to the late Dr. Harold E. Welsh whose tragic death in the wake of Opening Lake early May last caused deep-felt regret throughout the province.

Besides Mr. Robson, T. C. Graham of Tweed, Wesley Casey of Stirling and Frank Pringle of Melrose, stood for nomination. Three others, Dr. R. D. Arnott, Barnardy; George Hall, West of Madoc and James Bronnie were nominated but did not choose to stand. The successful candidate was declared on receiving a clear vote on the second ballot after Mr. Graham had withdrawn following the first vote.

Nine Years in Council

Long prominent in municipal council and in public life has fitted Mr. Robson well for the position which his party followers hope to put him in by their votes on election day. For the past nine years he has been reeve of Thurlow and the county council, six as reeve and three as deputy reeve. During this period he has been a member of many important council committees, the most outstanding of which are the Roads and Bridges Committee.

Mr. Robson will be the most influential matters Mr. Robson has for a number of years been on school boards and has acted as chesse Inspector for Thurlow and the Hastings County and received his high school education in Belleville. He has been prominent in the last year he taught school in Thurlow and the Warden Lawrence for many years been a member of school committees in his district church.

Mr. Robson, thanking the convention for the confidence and pledging his best if elected, praised the late member and friend, Dr. Welsh as member. "After the marvellous record of the late Dr. Welsh, I cannot hope to repeat sent this riding as well as he."

He urged, however, the wholehearted support of party members. "I cannot win this election alone," he said, "the success of your candidate depends upon what his supporters, on. We'll have to put our shoulder to the wheel to win and I'm sure it can be done and I know we can do it."

Mr. Graham publicly congratulated Mr. Robson on his appointment as candidate. "This is the first time I have offered myself as candidate and I feel no disgrace in being beaten," he said. Prior to casting of ballots all candidates spoke briefly to the delegates in solicitation of their support. A paid splendid tribute to their late member, Dr. Welsh, and thanked their nominators and seconders for placing their names before the delegates as candidates.

Rev. N. Rawson Speaker

One of the finest and most-welcomed after-dinner speakers, in Canada, Capitain, the Rev. Norman Rawson, of Hamilton, was the main speaker for the afternoon. He claimed that the splendid turnout of delegates was an indication of the renewed interest being taken in the party. "The Progresive Conservatives are on the march," he said, "and Premier King cannot alter that situation by reprimanding our party leader, George Drew, for his summer school teacher." Col. Drew, he claimed, was one of the biggest men at the Conservative convention in Winnipeg last winter.

Mr. John Bracken, new Progressive Conservative leader, was one of the finest leaders ever to cross the political horizon, according to Mr. Rawson. New planks had been added to the party. The new party program had been written in the interests of the future and was not with the thought of catching votes.

The Mixon proxy vote for soldiers came in for strong criticism by Mr. Rawson who asserted that the boys overseas had in effect been disenfranchised through a form of vote which did not specify indication of "party candidate, or anything else."

Col. Drew had opposed the proxy vote for soldiers with everything he had when the question came up for discussion at Queen's Park, but with only a handful of voters behind him, could do nothing.

Members of the provincial government were termed by the speaker as "rubber stamps" of the King Government which approved to be "stirring for national war effort controlled by the Liberal party."

Response Situation Restored

The responsible attitude of the national selective service was declared to be in a deep sense the delegated responsibility. Canada was made bestowed entitlements by the Province of Ontario and other sections of the Dominion. The Canadian people had determined to be now tremendous "in spite of the King Government," the speaker claimed.

Reform of the king administration to permit establishment of the British Commonwealth Air Training Scheme was urged. Also first suggested had delayed the development of the air force which might have by now beaten Hitler to his knees. The Rev. Norman Rawson had said that "no foreign power will dictate Canadian policies" but when was the Motherland termed a "foreign power?" asked the speaker.

Election votes urged in all times to take place more seriously and to study the problems of Canada, in fighting the war will be decided time and Canada must be ready for the war's end.

To Speak in Stirling

Jamieson, who introduced Mr. Rawson to the convention delegates while it was later announced that Mr. Rawson, the Hamilton speaker would also be heard at the Progressive Conservative nomination for West Hastings to be held in Stirling on July 15th.

R. D. Arnott, member for West Hastings in the Ontario Legislature that it was a challenge to the Conservatives to uphold the belief by the traditional belief by the late Dr. Harold Welsh. Mr. Arnott paid pretty deserved tribute to former member and to Mrs. Welsh, who, he stated, had been a great assistance responsible for her husband's success in the Legislature.

The Mixon government was "flying by a hair" in the face of domination by staging the forthcoming election, according to the speaker. He urged that the Conservatives show no wrong in this election because they had nothing to Cancellation of Quebec power contracts by the former Hepburn government was cited as a glaring criticism as did its action in removing the Ontario Power Co. from power development. The mistake was now clearly shown in the present high power rates in Ontario. One of the many industries going to Quebec province, the speaker claimed, went will have to answer for these mistakes, he declared.

Must Develop Resources

"We in the province of Ontario must develop power resources to the limit," stated Mr. Arnott, "and not allow them to be wasted." The cut in automobile marker price with the following increase in the gasoline tax was asserted not to be "good business."

"The confidence of the people must be restored in the leaders of government," concluded the speaker. "Drew has promised sound administration. The Conservatives are showing leadership ability in the way they conduct it is the electors' duty to support Col. Drew."

Mr. George Stokes M.P., for South Hastings, paid tribute to Mrs. Welsh the evident sacrifice of busy farmers giving up work to come in and attend the convention. He asserted the Mixon administration was supported by governments under Premier King at Ottawa and that proof of their failure had been shown.

Ottawa, July 8—(CP)—Coal Controller J. McG. Gibb today announced signed and will be succeeded by E. J. Brunning, assistant director of the ammunition and gun production branch of the Munitions and Supply department. Munitions Minister Howe announced yesterday.

THE WAR TODAY

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

Associated Press War Analyst

India's food shortage, which I reported to you early this year has become a grave menace to the situation for this great sub-continent of 400,000,000 population, now is at the height of the critical stage.

Word from New Delhi, the capital, is that the government has called a conference, representing all parts of the country, to devise means of bringing emergency relief. The conference follows widespread appeals for food, and alarming reports of hoarding of grain stores.

It's estimated that 135,000,000 Indians—more than a quarter of the population—are suffering from malnutrition. Prices of food have zoomed up three to eight times above pre-war figures.

Such a crisis is particularly grave at this time for a country like India, where the majority of the people are always hungry. It realize that's a strong statement, but it's the unvarnished truth. Personal investigation qui the ground. United Nations never have what it is to have a full stomach.

When I left India in February, observers were apprehensive that the already bad food shortage would grow. They feared that designing people might contrive to merge this crisis with the grave political situation which had grown out of the Indian leaders' rejection of the British government's proposal for Dominion status during the war.

Should this happen there was no telling what the result might be. Bloody clashes between the races and factions between the British authorities and the Indians would be followed by widespread rioting, bloodshed and destruction of property, and thousands of people were in jails.

However, at that time I was authoritatively informed that the government of India had determined to clamped down on disturbances and there was no doubt that it would.

The food shortage likewise was said to have been provided for, and grain ordered from Canada, and Australia. There was unofficial hint, also, that supplies from the United States also might be called on to send food.

Naturally anything which affects India is a matter of particular concern to the United Nations for that great country not only is the arsenal of the Orient but is one of the most important of the Allied bases. It is from India that the Allies will have their invading Burma to oust the strongly-entrenched Japs and drive them back to the Pacific, which supplies can be sent to Chiang Kai-shek's China. India will be the key to victory over the barbarians of the rising sun.

William J. Davis Heads E. Hastings Pro. Conservatives

W. J. Davis, of Maple Leaf, reeve of Hungerford, Rawdon and Monteagle townships, will guide the destinies of the East Hastings Progressive Conservative Association for the ensuing year. It was decided at the annual meeting held in the Town Hall, Madoc on Wednesday afternoon. Other delegates from all over the riding attended to appoint their officials and elect five executive members to represent them in the forthcoming Provincial election campaign.

Mr. Davis replaces Wesley Grey of Thurlow Township, who has acted as president of the association for the past year.

George E. White, M.P., for Hastings-Peterborough spoke to the convention immediately following the election of association officers and strongly criticized the Ontario Government for bringing an election on at the present time.

"The minds of the people of the province are on their boys overseas at the eve of the invasion of the approaches," he said. "They are not thinking of politicians looking for office through a snap verdict."

Mr. White also criticized the Mixon government on the proposed proxy vote which would disenfranchise from the provinces who are now overseas. "Our boys overseas, who are fighting for our freedom are at least entitled to a secret ballot," he claimed.

Other officers appointed to the East Hastings Progressive Conservative Association for the next year are: Honorary president, Dr. Harold Welsh; president, Frank Pringle, Madoc; vice-president, Elmer Post as 2nd vice-president, Mrs. Harold Welsh; secretary, Miss Eva Wannamaker; assistant secretary, Miss Ethel Bird, Madoc. Wesley Grey was named treasurer. Associate president appointed was Mrs. Kerrigan Madoc. Associate secretary being Mrs. Frank Hicks.

Bancroft and District

23 Confirmed By Bishop Lyons At Bancroft

Bancroft, July 8 (Special)—The Rt. Rev. John Lyons, M.A., D.D., Bishop of Ontario and resident of Kingston, Ont., conducted the solemn rite of Confirmation for a class of twenty-three candidates at the eleven o'clock service in St. John's Anglican Church, Bancroft, Sunday morning. The Rev. W. L. Simmons, rector of the Bancroft parish, presented the candidates to the Bishop for the laying on of hands. Preceding the Confirmation service there was a short dedication service in which a special stained window representative of "Suffer little children to come unto me," was dedicated by the Bishop in memory of a loved one departed from the church and the community in the person of the late Mrs. W. George and presented to the church by her daughter Miss Gertrude George.

A Simple Talk

During the service the Bishop gave a very inspiring yet simple talk addressing the newly confirmed candidates explaining the part they were expected to play in the new step they had taken in the church. The choir although depleted somewhat through having some of its members in the confirmation class fully carried out its task of leading the singing during the service. The church, which was packed to the doors was very beautifully decorated with white persian lilacs, wild orchids, and other variety of flowers. Sunday evening the Bishop accompanied Rev. W. L. Simmons to Holy Trinity Church at Maynooth, where confirmation services were held for a class of eight candidates. The Bishop complimented the Rev. W. L. Simmons for the splendid work he had carried out in this parish in such a short time both in confirmees and attendance.

Annual Conference Held

The annual Brethren Conference was held in Bancroft Sunday during the morning and evening services. Mr. McConkey was in charge of the Bancroft congregation with Mr. J. Tallman of Lakefield and Mrs. W. Reich of Stirling assisting in the services. Despite the downpour of rain throughout the whole day a very large attendance was present. Those from a distance who dined at the church hall following the morning service were served with hot tea and coffee by the local brethren.

Charges Pending

A slight accident took place Saturday evening when a car driven by Stewart Clarke of 42 Dundas Street west Weston sideswiped a car driven by Reginald Wiggins of town, resulting in damage to a fender and bumper of the latter's car. Charges are pending against Mr. Weston driver.

Accident Brings Charges

An accident took place Saturday on Highway 62 about six miles east of Madoc when a car driven by James Yanitha went out of control and swerved to the side of the highway mounting a wooden guard rail and riding straddling this pole for over a distance of thirty feet and finally toppling over on its side luckily on the road side. Yanitha and Roy Vallier both of Princes Lake were somewhat injured. Yanitha the most as he was brought into Bancroft and admitted to the Red Cross hospital where he received several stitches in his lower lip. Yanitha is charged with being drunk in charge of a car and also with careless driving. Vallier is charged with having been in a place other than a residence.

Result Severely Contest

An accident took place on Main street in Coe Hill on Saturday when Glen Gunter was driving down the street accompanied by his 14 year old foster friend Gunter. Mrs. Margaret McCaskie of Clydedale backed her car across the road directly in the path of the Gunter car. Gunter could not possibly avoid the collision, which threw the father to the roof of the car and he received a severe cut in the head. He was treated in Coe Hill hospital by Dr. S. B. Lemay of Bancroft and later brought to Bancroft for further treatment as the flow of blood could not be stopped at the time. Mr. Gunter returned the following day to his home in Coe Hill.

Naval Training Base

Facts of the great $12,000,000 naval training base now functioning at Deep Brook, Nova Scotia, were made public on Wednesday and these give Canadians something of which to be very proud. It is a proof of the place which Canada has taken as a naval power. The base is reputed the best and largest base of its kind in the British Commonwealth of Nations.

Uniquely enough the base is established in a section of Canada rich in memories of a great explorer, Samuel de Champlain.

Canada is a two-ocean nation. Here on the east coast is the H.M.S. Cornwallis and on the Pacific is the H.M.S. Naden and between them there will be a sufficient number of seamen, gunners and stokers required for Canada's navy, which has rendered so effective aid to the British and Canadian cause during the present struggle.

Third Summer Attack

Hitler is later than usual in starting his offensive against Russia and Germans are finding Russian resistance stout. Terrific blows have been dealt the armament of the Germans as three days have seen the loss of 1,681 tanks and 649 planes. The violence of the Hun attack and the bitterness of the struggle are shown by the Russian reports of the death of thirteen thousand Germans in the space of three days.

This is Hitler's third summer attempt against Russia. He is powerful but much less so than in the two previous campaigns. In his last he suffered the greatest defeat ever delivered German arms at Stalingrad. He has not been able to achieve air superiority despite heavy reinforcements and his armored attacks have been hurled back with terrific losses to the Germans.

Glider Train Crosses Ocean

The first glider train has crossed the Atlantic on a thirty-wing, two-hundred-mile journey in 28 hours. Months of tests took place in Eastern Canada before the new "train" set out for Britain. It drew only one glider and the freight load was a ton and a half.

Is this the inauguration of a freight service which will change trade and industry? Can the train to the moon might be portion in the freight transportation world?

Everything has to have a beginning. The glider may well be the starting point for one of the great revolutions in transportation as the airplane has proven. If this is the beginning of something that will revolutionize the world, then last weekend will be a date by which to mark one stage in the history of transportation.

It is a fact that the public mind is actually alert to the possibilities of this development. The world expects glider trains in the future. How near in general use they may be no one can say for time has a facility of passing quickly. But the people have been actually swept by the growth of aviation into belief that the glider train is a post-war development of immense possibilities.

Canada by reason of its location on the great air route to Northwestern Europe was the ground where the tests were made so that the journey might be made under conditions with which the crew of the transport and glider might be familiar as far as possible. And Canadian airmen were destined to play a principal part in the test in the glider and the tow plane with a New Zealand co-pilot of the tow plane and an English flight engineer.

The development of the airplane and the air transport is generally known and gliders are not new as they have come into prominence in this war.

Recent discussions in Canada about glider trains have been in connection with the post-war program. In that period there is foreseen the possibility of a gigantic stride in aviation towards freight carriage by trains of gliders.

The news of the glider train crossing to Britain is whetting to the imagination as by none but the very few was it realized that an Atlantic crossing was so near. Now it is history.

Aviation has wrought changes but greater changes are no doubt in store in the coming years. It has made a great difference in the war it has widened the range of conflict and opened up an entirely new vantage of attack against an enemy by blows from the sky.

Time will tell how important the glider and glider train will become to a world on the qui-vive, with the developments and wonders of aviation.

Hot Weather Tips

(Our Dumb Animals)

As in former years, The Massachusetts S. P. C. A. takes occasion to impress on all animal owners the extreme importance of special care for their animals during hot weather. Dr. Erwin F. Schroeder, chief of staff at the Society's Angell Memorial Animal Hospital, points out that the effect of midsummer heat upon many animals is just as great as upon human beings.

Because of the shortage of gasoline and tires, horses are coming more and more into use. Special consideration should be given them. Horses should not be forced to carry too heavy loads; they should be given generous amounts of cool water and allowed to rest at frequent intervals.

Dogs, too, come in for more or less thoughtless cruelty. What more pitiful sight can be seen during the summer than a dog imprisoned in a parked car, on which pours a relentless sun. The windows are usually closed, or, at most, perhaps a half inch of one window is down. Inside the panting dog glues its nose to the crack seeking a breath of cool air. The temperature may often exceed 100 degrees. Take your pet with you or, at least, open windows two inches on opposite sides of the car.

Another practice to be condemned is that of forcing dogs to play vigorously for long periods. Remember, he will keep it up, against his better judgment, just to please you. Also a dog should be restrained from chasing automobiles.

Give your dog or cat plenty of fresh water, renewing it frequently and keeping his dish in a shaded spot. If you tie your dog outdoors, be certain he can reach the shade.

Future Industry in Small Centres

(Chatham News)

A great American industrialist says that the future of industry lies in small communities rather than in larger centres. His experience revealed the weakness of concentrating in one place a number of large operations which give a fictitious prosperity in boom times and are not able to avoid distress when business falls off.

Cheap power and adequate transportation facilities now exist very widely. The smaller communities have the greater advantage of cheaper living costs, lower rents and a more pleasant place to live, with walking distance of their work. There is also a better chance to take part in community activities to have a garden and to reach the open country quickly.

War and Hospital

Of the 4,500,000 soldiers in the Revolutionary and Napoleonic armies from 1792 to 1815 about 2,500,000 died in hospitals and 150,000 were killed in action, says Waldemar Kaempffert in The American Mercury. In the Crimean War 8,250 Frenchmen were killed and 59,815 died of sickness. In the Civil War the Union forces lost 67,058 on the battlefield, 43,012 who died of wounds and 224,586 who succumbed to disease. Until World War I infection were always deadlier than bullets. Today disease is under control and surgeons regard the appearance of infection in soldiers on whom they have operated as little short of a disgrace.

C.N.R. SUGGESTS

penditures of the C.N.R. would total $397,000,000, providing direct yearly employment estimated at 47,000,000 man-days.

On the total of 47,000,000 man-days, Mr. Fairweather estimated that 23,000,000 of them would be on the payroll of the C.N.R., with the additional 14,000,000 employed in supplying the railway with goods and services in the ordinary channels of commerce. He added that "beyond this there is a great deal of more indirect employment arising from secondary distribution of purchasing power."

Breakdown Given

He gave the following breakdown: 1. Assuming a national income of $8,000,000,000, the C.N.R. normal direct employment is estimated at 47,000,000 man-days for operations and normal capital expenditure of $397,000,000.

2. For an addition of $1,000,000,000 to the national income, the direct employment would be increased by 4,100,000 man-days.

3. For a decrease of $1,000,000,000 in the national income, the decrease in direct employment might be expected to be 4,400,000 man-days.

4. Extraordinary capital expenditures in times of unemployment on a scale of $100,000,000 per year would furnish direct employment of 15,000,000 man-days.

Referring to the suggested program for post-war works, Mr. Fairweather said:—

"Any program of this nature on a scale sufficiently large to afford substantial relief to unemployment of employment must be accompanied by many reservations, and should be considered at this time as only indicative of what might be accomplished when the undertakings works for the relief of unemployment were to be adopted.

New Groups

He noted that the tentative program was divided into four groups:

1. Those which expand the company's field of operations, 2. Those which are so productive of economy as to be self-liquidating; 3. Those which are generally desirable but are lacking in self-liquidity; 4. Those while having desirable features are not productive of economy sufficient to pay interest on the capital.

It was only with regard to the second group that Mr. Fairweather found a clear case for the railway bearing the full cost of the work, considering that assistance would be in order for the other classifications.

Possessing a widespread adjustment of employment which may arise arising from re-establishment of the Armed Forces into civilian life and the change-over of industry from wartime to peacetime production, he said the normal totality of employment afforded by these groups would increase and decrease with the national income but at a slower rate.

Employees in Forces to be Considered

He said that all of the more than 12,000 C.N.R. employees now in the armed forces would be taken back into the service and that the employment provided would be "of the same category or better than the employment they were engaged in when they left to join the forces."

The C. N. R. also envisaged further employment in the post-war period by the necessity of "making up" deferred maintenance, due to wartime conditions.

The company had accumulated a reserve against deferred maintenance amounting at present to $60,000,000 and "as soon as labor and materials are available, the maintenance program will need to be enlarged to bring the property to the normal service condition."

Assuming that the deferred maintenance would not exceed $30,000,000, it would be recovered in from five to seven years, providing immediate post-war employment in the order of 4,300,00 man-days.

London, July 8 — (CP) — A controversy over the Trades Disputes Act (1927) which bans affiliation of civil service unions in the Trades Union Congress, may develop into a battle of considerable importance between the labor party and the government within the next few weeks.

The situation was brought to a head by the recent announcement from the T.U.C. general council that the post office workers union (civil service) had applied for affiliation, and had been accepted.

The seriousness with which this move is regarded can be judged from the labor party executive committee's advice to delegates at the party's Blackpool conference to discuss it because of its possible unfavorable interpretation abroad.

Roughly, the situation is this: The T.U.C. accepted the post office workers union affiliation without discussing the matter with the parliamentary labor committee. This should have been consulted because they are the ones who still have to fight through the amendment that would make the affiliation legal. Unless the act is amended to allow it, members T. U. C. affiliations, but the T. U. C. and its new affiliates are liable to high court injunctions.

By failing to express an opinion on the matter, the government puts it entirely to parliament, and it is possible that Mr. Churchill may have to take a hand before settlement is made.

There is considerable difference between the choice of Field Marshal Viscount Wavell as Viceroy of India and the last wartime Viceroyalty appointment (1936) to seduce Congress from its anti-war attitude, that of Lord Linlithgow, a Field Marshal and Scots Captain.

It was in 1916 that Lord Chelmsford, then serving in India as a Captain in the 6th Battalion of the Duke of Cambridge's Regiment, became Viceroy. The secret that this Captain was being groomed for India's biggest job was certainly not suspected by a veteran soldier like Lord Chelmsford's unit, who, during a period of inactivity, thought of what they would do after the war, told Lord Chelmsford of his unconventional wish "A man in your position ought to be able to get a job."

Lord Halifax, former Governor of Britain's Empire and the United Provinces, one of Britain's foremost authorities, on Colonial Affairs, and certainly an old school, old line type of colonial administrator, told the House of Lords that he felt the "personally double" whether the substitution of public for private capital in industrial or commercial development is likely to go to any considerable lengths in the British Colonies.

"If we hold seriously to our idea of self-government for the colonies we must be conscious of pressure toward a situation in which they will, to a less dependent on the supply of capital from us," he said.

"That idea will be the result of any single measure, both capitalist and administration have regulations, and if these obligations are adequately discharged by both of them there is no reason why there be unduly troubled if capital still makes its profits."

SCOTLAND YARD

Scotland Yard is the popular name in Britain of the detective department of the London Metropolitan Police Force.

It corresponds in a general way to the American Federal Bureau of Investigation," which is usually shortened to "F.B.I."

The name Scotland Yard used to be and sometimes still is applied to the entire London police force.

It is explained by the fact that for many years the London police force had its headquarters in Scotland Yard, a street of low buildings surrounded by a courtyard in London.

The name of this group of buildings is derived from an old palace which stood there in the time of Henry II (1154-89) and which was the residence of the Scottish kings whenever they visited London.

Newton, in his "London in the Olden Time" says: "This property given by King Edgar to Kenneth III, King of Scotland, for his residence when he has annua; visit to London to do homage for his kingdom to the crown of England."

Margaret, the Queen of James IV was the last Scottish royal family to reside there. The old palace was took up her residents there after the death of her husband at the battle of Flodden Field.

The headquarters of the Metropolitan Police Force was moved to New Scotland Yard on the Thames Embankment in 1890, and "New Scotland Yard" is the present designation of the London police headquarters.

Although a web of romance has been woven around the Scotland Yard detective department, shortened to "C.I.D." the London metropolitan police force go about their work in a prosaic manner.

The present number of chief detectives in the criminal investigation department is only eight and they are not highly paid relatively.

These eight chief detectives are available to go to any part of Britain at a moment's notice to investigate crimes.

They have a deserved reputation for efficiency in solving crimes of all sorts, but they work in a comparatively small area with a homogeneous population and their work is not nearly as difficult as that of the G-men, who work in a vast area with a mixed population and who are continually thwarted by limits upon their jurisdiction.

When a mysterious murder was committed about a year ago in Washington within a few blocks of the headquarters of the F.B.I., the detectives and agents of that organization had no authority in the area. Once such a limitation upon the detectives of Scotland Yard would be unthinkable in Britain.

Privy Council Allows Appeal Of Paper Company

By SCOTT YOUNG
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 8 — (CP Cable) — The Privy Council's judicial committee today handed down a judgment allowing the appeal of the Abitibi Power and Paper Company, Limited, from the judgment of the Ontario Appellate Court and Mr. Justice W. E. Middleton who directed that the Abitibi Power and Paper company should be sold at public auction.

In addition to directing the sale of the company, Mr. Justice Middleton also held that the Abitibi Power and Paper Company Reorganization Act, passed by the Ontario Legislature in 1941, was ultra vires of the province.

The orders of Mr. Justice Middleton and the Ontario Appeal Court were set aside by the Privy Council. The judicial committee and the motion for sale was dismissed. In addition the plaintiff, the National Trust Company, was ordered to pay the costs incurred by the Abitibi Company not only during this Privy Council appeal but also during the previous litigation in Ontario courts.

Wm. Bean Receives Good News About Brother in Java

"That's the best news I ever received," admitted William Bean, 73 Pine St., when he opened a cablegram from England yesterday to learn his brother, Walter Bean, was alive and safe as a prisoner of war at Java. Walter Bean had been reported missing for the past 18 months and had been held by the Japanese without information being given out during that time.

Walter Bean enlisted in the British Imperial Army at the outbreak of the war and was later transferred to the Far East. Word that he was a prisoner of war was received by Mr. Bean here from his sister in Leeds, England, yesterday. The Japanese had failed to reveal the identity of all prisoners of war captured in and around Java for over a year. "As a matter of fact there are hundreds of prisoners in Java whose next of kin have never been notified, nor have the Japanese made any attempt to reveal the identity of their prisoners," Mr. Bean assured the Ontario Intelligencer today as he admitted the receipt of the news of his brother was the best news he ever received in his life.

Among the guests were members of the Cadet Corps and the staff of Walker's store. The making of a bride's book provided entertainment for all and Miss Barbara, following rhymed clues, found lovely gifts in each hidden in various places. The gifts were all carefully chosen and plainly showed the affection of the givers for the bride-to-be. The usual speech was demanded and Barbara, who had thanked her friends as she opened the gifts, thanked them all again when she had finished. Delightful refreshments served by Mrs. Allseon and Mrs. Jackson and assisted by Audrey Dankel, Jeanne Price and Margaret Ashton. Following the evening's entertainment to a happy ending.

SUPERFLUOUS hair! There you have a real beauty grief, the' not one that need be endured all day long. Three easy ways are means of exterminating it. The cause of it has never been definitely determined. Women who live in warm climates are more inclined to carry the incipient moustache than those who live in cold ones, but it does not seem as if glandular disturbance are the source, as some specialists believe.

Fumers may appear at the age of 18 or they may break out in late middle life. If the growth is a stiff, coarse, prickly nuisance, Anne Adams Pattern 4284 includes points to match.

Pattern 4284 is available only in children's sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8. Size 6, overalls and bonnet, requires 3 yards 35-inch fabric; petticoat, 1 yard 35-inch fabric and 1½ yards ric-rac; sun dress, 1¾ yards 35-inch, 1¾ yards ruffing.

Fashion Flashes

VERY COOL for casual wear is a glove with tan leather palm and natural crocheted string back. Less for lucky whips the cuff edge.

SO PRETTY and becoming is a new summer hat, a big black and cartwheel worn way back on the head. It is crownless and is trimmed with a border of red poppies under and over the brim edge.

EVERYTHING goes for prints, with emphasis on big designs. White silk crepe is the background for a print of magnified cherry clusters with an occasional big apple and leaves spaced here and there on the skirt, which is made with groups of pleats at the side and the bodice. Deep collarless V neckline.

RETURN VISIT is being paid by the county teddy bear coats of pile fabric for summer wear. A nice addition to the wardrobe is a square neckline outlined with a hand-knitted band embroidered with gay flowers. Same details at the pocket edges. Elbow-length sleeves.

STILL TAKE WISDOM to select clothes that will be cool yet right for a summer in town this year. Grand for the commuter and for town children is a redingote of black shantung with long sleeve moderately wide at the wrist, worn over a simple one-piece frock of coin-dotted shantung, red on white. The coat has a big dotted fabric flower to match.

YES, GIRLS, there'll be plenty of new bathing suits in the shops this summer, even if your midsection is unfortunate and won't be available. A pretty suit is of cotton, brown spotted print on yellow preshrunk fabric. The midsection is fitted and is quilted.

Serum Suggested if Other Methods Fail to Cure Hiccups

Hiccup attacks come on at various times and are very distressing. One of the most troublesome conditions that may develop in some disorders is hiccups which become persistent and cannot be relieved by the usual simple means. This condition may become so bad, particularly in elderly or weakened persons, unless quickly and properly treated, that it may result fatally.

Just why the hiccup occurs is not definitely known. However, Dr. Edward C. Rosenow of Rochester, Minn., has made some studies of this disorder which are of great interest. He has studied not only the condition that is called hiccups but the type of hiccup that sometimes follows operations. He has noted that the hiccup which tends to set in certain seasons of the year, particularly those seasons when colds are prevalent. He believes that the hiccup in such cases may be the result of an infection with certain germs. He has prepared a serum from horses that have been infected with these streptococcus germs, and has used this serum in treating patients with epidemic hiccup. As well as those who had hiccups following operations.

Ninety patients were treated. Fifty-four had epidemic hiccups and the other thirty-six had the condition following operations. Two times as many men had the disorder as women. The patients varied in age from seven to eighty-two years and the condition had been present for as long as from one to twenty-one days in the acute cases and for as much as two years in persons who had it in a more prolonged state.

Doctor Rosenow was able to obtain definite relief in almost all the patients treated, and in this group a reduction in the number of spasms per minute from thirty to ten. In twenty cases, after one injection of the serum had been obtained, while in another twenty-four cases after two injections, and in twelve cases after three injections. In seven of the patients the serum was of no benefit.

The serum treatment was tried on these patients only after other measures had been used and failed, such as having the patient breathe carbon dioxide, having the stomach washed out, or injecting sedative or nerve-quieting drugs.

The patients, according to Dr. Rosenow, often had badly infected teeth or other infections in the tonsils or sinuses. He believes that it is possible that the streptococcus germs responsible for the attack may be located in these areas. In general too, the worse the infection in the tonsils, sinuses or elsewhere the longer the injections of serum had to be kept up in order to combat the attacks of hiccups.

In view of the fact that, hiccups can turn out to be such a dangerous condition, particularly in elderly persons and following operations, efforts to relieve it should be made. When all other methods fail, perhaps the use of the serum may result in a cure in many cases.

Order of Precedence at Wedding is Matter of Choice to Bride

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

I have been invited to be matron of honor at my brother's wedding and I am uncertain as to my place in the procession and recessional. We are having in this wedding party: two ushers, two bridesmaids, maid of honor. The bride's father is to give his daughter in marriage.

E. C.

Only the bride-to-be can tell you where you are to walk in both the procession and recessional. For it is she who must decide whether she wishes her two "honor" attendants to be dressed alike, or to her father or to have their costumes contrast and to have the maid of honor and the matron of honor walk alone.

If the latter is her decision, then the one nearer to the bride either in relationship or friendship is the one who is to be the actual witness, walking directly before the bride and her father. In the recessional, also the bride of honor and matron of honor either walk together or alone, the actual witness walking directly after the bride and bridegroom.

The two ushers walk together, first in the procession, and first in the recessional. The two bridesmaids walk together, one after the others in the procession, and before them in the recessional.

Choosing "Informals"

I am a girl of sixteen, and I am planning to have some "informals," printed. What form of the name should I use—for example, "Miss Mary J. Smith"? Should I omit my middle name, or should I use the initial, as I do on this note-paper on which I am writing to you? 2. Would it be proper to have my name plus my address on the flap of the envelope?

Reader.

1. Even a sixteen-year-old girl should use "Miss" before her name on "informals." Apparently, judging by your question concerning your middle name, and by the fact that you include it, but only the initial standing for it, you have no enthusiasm for it. However, if you decide that you wish to use it, use it spelling in full. It isn't appropriate to use an initial on a formal name; that is, a name with a title before it.

If you don't like your middle name and think your name would be more attractive without it, why not drop it? (I think your name is much more sophonious without the initial. Talk this over with your family and see what they think.

2. Yes, you may use your name plus your address on the flap of the envelope, or you may use just the address, as on the envelope of your notepaper. Also, for greater formality, you may "informals," you may have your street-address printed on the first page with your name only in the lower right corner, in letters smaller than those used for your name.

The Marry-Go-Round

OF WHAT ARE YOU PROUD?

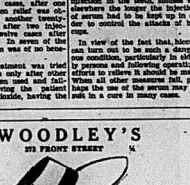
Are you proud of your man in uniform? You've right you are! Are you proud of your girl, and the way she's doing—nursing, Red Cross, office, factory work? Most certainly, you are.

And they are proud, too. Proud of their uniforms. Proud of what they stand for. Proud of all the finest qualities that the war has brought to the fore. Proud of pride.

Tell me on what a man prides himself, and I'll tell his fortune, without using any palmistry.

Pride is the acid-test, which brings out the gold, the dross and most of the BRASS in human nature. Pride does things to you! It strengthens one man's backbone—and inspires another man to put on a good FRONT. It puts one man to take an inferior or menial job rather than be dependent and impels another to borrow and spend his last dollar, rather than be seen in an employment agency. At least, he thinks it is "pride."

It makes a "swell guy" of one man—and a cheap sport of another man. It is all a matter of having pride, and the wrong kind of pride. You can see how easy it is to judge a man by a normal test of his sense of pride; because everybody has a different interpretation of the word. To some, it is honor; to some it is pretension or snobbery; to some it is vanity, to some, valor or bravado.



Sometimes, pride makes one man refuse to marry the girl he loves, because she is rich and he is poor and sometimes, it impels another man to marry a girl he has ceased to love, and keep his promise.

And pride does strange things to women, too. Pride gives one girl the strength to smile valiantly, all evening, when she's a miserable liar at a party—and gives another girl the will-power to stay at home all her life rather than be a dud at a party.

Pride helps one woman to grit her teeth and "make the best of a bargain," rather than acknowledge her marriage a failure—and spurs another woman to get a divorce, hustle for a job and advertise her disillusionment to the world, rather than live a long life of much happiness.

Libby's Review In Diamond Jubilee Year

In 1868, three men sat in their shadowy, gas-lighted office and laid plans for a company which, this year, is celebrating its 75th anniversary. (21 years manufacturing in Canada.)

These men undoubtedly possessed industry, imagination and foresight. But it is doubtful if any of the three could have foreseen the day when their little packs of Libby, McNeill and Libby would pack a greater variety of food under one label than any other company in the world.

The three men were Arthur A. Libby, Archibald McNeill and Chas. P. Libby. They started with but one produce—an excellent cooked corned beef. As the business grew, new products were added, until today 500 company packs canned meats and meat products, fruits, vegetables, baby foods, an assortment of juices, a variety of pickles, sauces and relishes, as well as salmon and evaporated milk. There are more than 100 items altogether and they are packed in scores of canneries in Canada, the United States and Hawaii.

In the 75 years since the company was founded, Libby's has packed several wars and has contributed toward the winning of them. The company's many years of experience in processing food, its capacity to produce those foods in volume, is now dedicated unreservedly to the winning of the present war. Nutritious food in great quantity is needed by the millions of fighting men in the various United Nations services. It is vital too, that the home front workers be well fed so that they may be kept alert and vigorous at their essential war tasks.

But the large measure of public favour which Libby's enjoys is not built upon its wartime services. Libby's business has grown and developed through the past three-quarters of a century in direct ratio as it has been of increasing service to the people of this great world.

In 1868 the preservation of foods in cans or bottles was in its early infancy. Limitations of scientific knowledge and processing facilities greatly restricted the five big basic foods then known to exist, but by virtue of constant laboratory research and ingenuity, Libby's was enabled constantly to improve its methods and develop advanced processes that put an increasing variety of foods within the scope of its operations.

Libby's has contributed more and more through the passing years to the emancipation of the housewife from drudgery in the kitchen. As you rafter year went by and food after food was added to the Libby's line, women all over the continent and throughout the world have found it possible to serve increasingly appetizing meals with constantly less effort. The ladies are spending less time in the kitchen, yet serving exquisite food —and Libby's is one of the major reasons for this escape from long hours of sweltering over a hot stove.

In wartime particularly the nation's nutrition takes on new importance. There are some sight groups of essential foods if the recommendations of the government for a good nutrition. Five of these eight groups include food that Libby's pack. Every effort is being made to see that these foods are available on the home front in sufficient quantities to meet essential needs. But, in this war, operations are on a gigantic scale, and that even Libby's acres of factories are taxed to the utmost to meet the demand. The special needs of the armed services occasion a drain upon Libby's resources and facilities so as temporarily to reduce the supplies normally available on the grocers' shelves. As a wartime measure, Libby's production for civilian markets is proportioned among dealers as fairly as possible, that every community may have its due share.

John Avery of Doncaster, England, a retired boiler, left the relics of a 1,800-ft. mine to be the "maintenance of a tidy appearance of Cholmorey" at a church where he sang in the choir as a boy.

Record Tourist Season Expected In P.E. County

Picton, July 7—A record tourist season is being enjoyed by Prince Edward County, a survey indicates. The local tourist bureau states that difficulty has been found in finding accommodation for the rush of holidayers. Most of the resorts are booked up for July and part of August.

With gasoline and tires being conserved, more tourists are arriving by train and boat and in spite of travel restrictions there is a goodly representation from the United States.

Though beaches are not at their best due to high water, the excellent fishing is proving adequate compensation. A fisherman, Ohio visitor, Mrs. Edward Sherard, yesterday landed a pickerel weighing 22 inches and eight pounds, in Consecon lake.

Back From Overseas

Picton, July 7—After more than three years in Britain, Pte. William Biddle arrived home this week. Biddle, who enlisted in the 21st Three Rivers, Que., to act as an instructor, left Biddle with the permanent staff. Prince Edward Regiment and went overseas with the unit when it left Canada in the summer 1939. He was recently transferred to the Royal Canadian Corps of the ranks of that unit which were depleted by casualties suffered in the Dieppe raid.

It is stated that the Canadians are fully prepared and ready for action, and that, when called upon they will give a good account of themselves when the time arrives.

Honor Students

Frances Elinor Calnan, daughter of Mrs. Calnan and Mrs. J. S. Calnan, Picton, was winner of the first Old Boys' Entrance medal emblematic of the highest standing among all pupils of Prince Edward County trying the entrance examinations. She also won the Martha McCrea scholarship awarded the highest ranking pupil from Picton Public School. Winners of the other Old Boys' medals were Helen Myatt of Picton and Alan MacDonald of Bloomfield.

There were 302 pupils writing the tests and 47 there but 25 failed to pass the tests. A large number were granted their entrance standing on the year's work.

Scouts and Navy League

The Navy League benefited to the extent of $300 as a result of the efforts of the school children of Prince Edward County. Articles were donated by Miss Jennie Sandwell, Mrs. G. E. Wright and Mrs. William Connors and the children sold them at tickets. The draw was made at the annual July dance of the local branch of the Navy League, when 600 were present. The winners were Miss Ann Collier, Picton; Pte. William Carney and Mrs. John Rattan, Elemora Road.

Mrs. Blanche Clarke was in charge of the draw and largely responsible for the success.

Letters From Prisoners of War

Mrs. Charles Wannamaker, R.R. 1 Bloomfield, has received two letters of thanks from prisoners of war who received socks she had knitted.

Pte. J. C. Bond stated "thank you so much for your very kind gift of socks which I received last week. They fit me wonderfully. I am a Scotchman and have been a prisoner for three years and I've just about had enough of it. My regiment is the Black Watch, a very famous Highland regiment. Am married with 2 children, a boy 16 years and 2 girls 13 and 10 years. We are all very fit and well here and we have also a number of Canadian officers here. Cheerio for now. I shall be pleased to hear from you again."

Lieut. R. G. Johnson writes: "You will be rather surprised I know to receive this card and will wonder how on earth I procured your address. Well, dear lady, I found it one evening adhering to my door of all places. From this you will gather that the sox knitted by you have found a good resting place and assure you that the present owner is very much obliged. So sorry this is so short. Best luck to you and yours."

Both men are in the same prison camp and the messages were written on special cards, each stamp carrying the "Hitler's head".

Young Deer Glimpsed

A young deer enjoying the succulent leaves of raspberry bushes was seen on the farm of Mr. Bid Mount, Wellington. Miss Grace Monro first saw the animal and reported it to a game warden. Investigation proved it to be a deer weighing about 100 pounds. Frightened by the approach, it sped westward and was seen by several people. The Mount farm is situated within the confines of the village.

Sheep Losses

Sheep losses continue in South Marysburgh township, and as a result the council there has decreed that all dogs must be confined from sunrise to sunset. They have also extended the time for payment of the wolf bounty until the end of the year. So far, no odd has claimed the $25 reward offered for the shooting of a wolf or wolves reported seen there.

Losses in sheep and lambs have been heavy. Hamilton Welbanks recently lost several.

6th Tyendinaga

6th. Tyendinaga — The lawn social, held on the lawn at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. Wannamaker on Friday night, was well attended. A good program, consisting of vocal solos and duets, piano and accordian solos and the orchestra was enjoyed by all. At the close lunch of sandwiches, cake and coffee was served.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Langabeer, of Belleville, were guests at Mr. C. Goodman's a couple of days last week.

Mr. Lorne McKenzie was in Desoronto Wednesday afternoon for the funeral of the late Mrs. Ostrander.

Jimmie Goodman spent a short leave from the Merchant Navy at his home here last week.

School is closed for the holidays. Mrs. H. Crandall, Jr., spent a few days with her daughter, Mrs. R. Baldrick.

Mrs. Lorne McKenzie and family attended the Shoemaker Reunion at Napanee Park, Dominion Day.

Jack Skelly had the misfortune to have a small piece of bone broken off his elbow.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Shannon on the arrival of a baby girl.

38 Cadet Corps of M.D. No. 3 Enjoy Life Under Canvas

Wellington, Ont., July 8—With their fathers and brothers off to war, the schoolboys of Canada have in many instances become the "men of the home," and they are taking their added responsibility seriously. This is evident in the keen way over 1,000 members of the Royal Canadian Army Cadets of Military District No. 3, are throwing themselves into training at their camp overlooking Lake Ontario, near here.

These youngsters, representing scores of communities throughout the district, are learning such military subjects as fieldcraft, section formation, field engineering, precision drill schemes, map reading, weapons, drill, camp craft and signalling under the watchful direction of the Camp Commandant, Colonel D. Carmichael, D.S.O., M.C., V.D., of Ottawa Cadet. T. H. Holmes, District Cadet Officer, is chief instructor, while Capt. W. H. Agnew, who with Capt. Holmes is from M.D. 2 Headquarters at Kingston, is acting as adjutant, Capt. H. Bonner, District Signals Officer, also of Kingston, is Signals Training Officer.

Wearing the smartly designed new uniforms of the R.C.A.C., the boys are looking tanned and fit after nearly a week under canvas. They are receiving exceptionally good food which is served under the supervision of Lt. W. Bowerman, of the Canadian Army (Basic) Training Centre, Peterborough, who is messing officer.

The spiritual welfare of these youths is not neglected and while at the camp they are under the religious supervision of Capt. O. Grant, Protestant chaplain, of Wellington, and Capt. Bergeron, Roman Catholic padre, of Ottawa. Their physical well being is being looked after by Capt. G. C. Kelly and Capt. F. G. Ruston of the 13th General Hospital, R.C.A.M.C., of Picton.

For surpassing previous camps in quality of training, in smartness of dation, and standard of training, the Cadets have quickly adapted themselves to army camp routine. The military education of these boys is bringing out their initiative and making them self-reliant. However, they have not forgotten the valuable lessons of teamplay coordination.

From Reveille to "Lights Out" The youths "rise and shine" with Reveille at 6.30 a.m.; breakfast from 7 to 7.30 a.m. and after dressing of company lines and physical training they move off to company training areas at nine o'clock. Dinner is from noon until 1.30 p.m., and, following another period of training, supper is served at 5.30 p.m. In the evening are sports and entertainment with "Lights Out" at 10 p.m.

The camp is divided into eight companies, which are broken down into platoons. The companies are made up from students representing the following places: No. 1 Company, Campbellford, Ontario; No. 2 Company, Brockville, Port Hope, Lindsay, Ottawa, Gananoque, Smiths Falls, Renfrew, Carleton Place, Temiskaming, Pembroke, Perth, Williamstown, Kemptville, Russell and Cornwall.

Rivalry for Trophies

CANADA CORN STARCH
A product of the CANADA STARCH COMPANY, Limited

THE EXPLANATION why WHITE SWAN TISSUE may be "out of stock" at your dealer's.
You go to your dealer for your regular supply of WHITE SWAN and find him temporarily out of stock. Naturally you are disappointed, but please don't blame him, as he is only too anxious to keep on supplying you with Canada's most popular toilet tissue.
It is simply a question of supply and demand. He cannot keep enough WHITE SWAN in stock because we cannot supply him fast enough. We cannot supply him fast enough because our mill, in turn, cannot meet the increased demand from Government, war industries and the public.
We would like to be able to make more WHITE SWAN than we are turning out now, but war needs come before our requirements for new equipment. So, until the present crisis is over, we ask you to bear with us. We will do our utmost to see that any dealer out of stock at the moment will soon receive his supply.

'Citizenship' Subject of Talk By I. L. Moore

A member of the Kiwanis Club, I. L. Moore, principal of the Ontario Business College, was the principal speaker at the weekly luncheon of the club on Tuesday at the Quinte Hotel, his subject being "Citizenship" and coming so close to Dominion Day was most interesting and instructive. Bruce Latimer presided with Harold Bateman as sergeant at arms and Bill Womacott, as song leader, Leo B. Riggs presiding at the piano. A number of guests were welcomed including Eric Denyes, secretary of the Belleville Fair, who asked the co-operation of the Club in putting the fair over. He stated that the society was out of debt and that a splendid program had been arranged for the three days and also that Hon. P. M. Dewan had advised the holding of fall fairs in order that production of the farm, land to be could be exhibited.

An abbreviated report of more than ordinary interest was made to the meeting by the president, when he stated that Mrs. Mabel Dufort Fry, recently declared and the wife of a former member of the club, Sgt. Bert Fry of the Provost Corps of the R.C.A.F. had presented the club in her will to the extent of $1,-000 and an equal amount to be given the Rotary Club. The late Mrs. Fry was always a champion of the Kiwanis Club and she took a very keen interest in the welfare work, that was accomplished. She members heartily applauded the announcement and suitable recognition will be submitted to the family by the executive committee.

The speaker was introduced by Fred Deacon and Kiwanis appreciation was expressed by "Bob" Pringle. The speaker stated that citizenship was the state of holding rights and privileges but that should be only when we assume responsibilities and that there should be co-ordinal relation between the two and the country. Mr. Moore expressed the opinion that it was a question whether we appreciate our rights as citizens and others have fought, bled and died for. He referred to the militant suffragettes, who fought for the vote for women and yet when the vote was given, they did not take an interest and he he thought that all should be citizens to register their franchise on any vote. "We have obtained our rights through a long road" said the speaker, "and we should be ready to sacrifice anything the maintenance of those rights. Under the law we can have certain freedom but no right to do as we please. He said as citizens we should be kind and tolerant and he believed there had been too much intolerance in dealing with people of different religions and creeds. He also stated that we would have to practice economy as we have been a terrible wastage of the forests, agriculture and even of man-

Trenton and District

Trenton, July 8—An urgent appeal was issued from Red Cross work rooms here today for more help during the summer months as the result of a circular received from Toronto Headquarters specifying the need for a quarter million dollar quota. This circular read in part: "With all signs pointing to the opening of a second front there is an urgent need for more supplies and throughout the summer months. One quota calls for 300,000 articles and the approximate value of $227,134.50 therefore there is much to be done by both knitters and sewers." This quota consists of 62,250 pairs socks, 36,750 pullovers with sleeves, 27,350 pullovers sleeveless, 43,111 turtle-neck sweaters, 10,500 scarves, 42,750 pairs gloves, 12,000 pairs mitts and 28,500 caps and helmets. These articles are for capture parcels, surviors base, New Newfoundland and England. Hospital supplies needed inclues 5,000 bandages, 500 face masks, 6500 small operating sheets, 19,000 towels, 2500 large tape sponges, 350 men's bed jackets, 3,000 chintz bedside pocket bags, 10,000 handkerchiefs and 2,500 nightingales.

Capture parcels are the wonderful package which will be your first a prisoner of war receives. And if these are all finished, and assembled it greatly increases the speed with which they are dispatched when needed.

In addition there is need for 500 khaki comfort bags, 2,500 navy comfort bags, 3,000 air force bags, 700 pairs pyjamas, 5,000 bath towels, 5,000 hand towels and 5,200 wash cloths.

From this information it may be seen that women are urgently needed to assist in every way possible towards the fulfilling of this huge quota which must be made ready by the different branches. While Trenton's quota has not yet been allotted it is expected that this will be received almost immediately.

Three money donations were received on Tuesday $1.13 from Miss Harrison's class of Dufferin Street School, $2,900 from Miss Sweetnam's class which four dogs accompanied Arnold, Rita and Joan Terry and Mack Lowery reaming $1.04 the result of a show which had been held in aid of Red Cross by the children.

Patrons Swarm Ring, Entrance To Dressing Rooms to Take Swat At Dunlop, Beaten by Morgan Bad Man Tackles Referee for Holding Him Near End of Bout

BLIMP IS BEATEN

Bedlam, mayhem and what bordered on hamstringed hoke broke at the Rume arena last night, when fifty percent of the 3,500 patrons swarmed the ring and entrance to the dressing room at the conclusion of the main bout that saw Wilbur the "Tear" Morgan, the Tennessee house-painter and former United States Marine, gladden the hearts of the wildest wrestling crowd ever to swell the seams of the local palace de sport when he triumphed over the villainous Al Dunlop, of Toronto.

After Referee Phil Lawson had held Dunlop in a front headlock, while Morgan punched him into final submission, that was the tip-off for the wild-eyed mayhem that as Dunlop attacked the Tennessee adonis after the bout. Hundreds of fans swarmed the ring and it was only after police came to the aid of Dunlop, that he was able to reach his dressing room in one piece. One woman sustained injury, when knocked down by the milling throng, and police escorted two rather pugnacious male patrons from the arena in what proved to be the most unique night of wrestling in the Quinte town.

S.R.O. Sign Out

With the "standing room only" sign hung out long before the main bout got under way, there was plenty of bad blood between Morgan and Dunlop as the result of their previous meeting. Actually there was little wrestling, as the main boasters resorted to straight fistic endeavors that left nothing to the imagination. The pugnacious Dunlop attacked both Morgan and Referee Lawson in everything except the ring posts, which were fortunately well secured. Dunlop took the first fall in 13 minutes following a series of back-breaker holds, that left the Tennessee "house-painter" with little more easy prey for a press. Morgan added to his Japanese-killing prowess by some unmentionable holding the second fall following a series of flying mares and press. Then came the fun as Referee Lawson pried Dunlop off Morgan and held him firmly as the ex-Marine plastered the Toronto villain with a right cross to the chin and then was, with a yell, literally lifted from the mat bowled with glee and swarmed the ring in add time. Bedlam reigned for a few difficulties.

World's Worst Wrestler

Promoter Frank Tunney advertised Martin Levy, alias The Blimp, as the world's worst wrestler—and he didn't misrepresent the gym-bullied stuff. Nor did the wrestling barons go far astray when they billed him as the biggest man in the racket. Despite his 643 pounds of avoirdupois "Little Jerry" Monahan, advertised as "The Little Flyweight," weighing a mere 200 pounds had little difficulty in disposing of the bewildered behemoth.

When it came to actual wrestling the Blimp showed little or no knowledge of the pastime as he merely tried to outlast Monahan's every hold. Former Masked Wolf out of existence, but "Irish Jerry" Monahan is the Blimp's master.

Perhaps Referee Cliff Fox came out the worst in Dunlop-Morgan-ette", as both Monahan and The Blimp objected to Fox's appointment official to all but pancake him. Once Monahan had the Blimp on the mat and proceeded to cater out an act that resembled mountain-climbing over his bulging belly, the Blimp let fall out of the ring and was unable to get back in time. Referee Fox counted him out and raised Monahan's hand in victory. Monahan, in the gate receipts wagon," cried "Irish Jerry" as he tossed a handful of silver to fans.

Tunney Introduced

Promoter Tunney was introduced to the season's largest crowd and it would be in order for Mr. Tunney to announce that "Jack" Pete is no other reason than scores of patrons were unable to get into the arena to see this mountainous hulk in action. The hook, and ladder didn't beat him, The Blimp lost his bout.

In the preliminary Leo Duna and Doc Pelke wrestled to a 30-minute draw in a comic acknowledgement that they had everything happen, that could happen, and that the fans, the readers will be back again next Wednesday night, for more surprises than a three ring circus.

When a player says: "I take a jump no-trump response," he fears his partner does not know what it takes to make such a bid.

Experts have changeable, basic advice about the needs for a jump no-trump response. Concomitantly, many players are confused about them. Let me put it straight.

An opening bid of one in a suit shows, among other things, four high cards with two sure tricks among them. A high card is an ace or a king or a queen. Each high card is a no-trump trick.

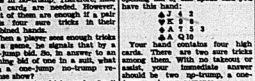
It takes nine tricks to make a game in no-trump. Therefore, nine high cards are needed. However, eight of them are enough if a pair holds four sure tricks in their combined hands.

When a player sees enough tricks for a game, it signals that by a one-jump bid. So, in answer to an opening bid of one in a suit, what does a one-jump no-trump response show?

It shows five high cards. Or it shows four high cards with two sure tricks. Because the opener and the responder combine what they both hold.

In an earlier lesson, I told you the first rule for a one-jump no-trump response to an opening bid of one in a suit. It was: Five high cards of any kind.

You are now ready to combine that with a two sure trick holding. They make up lesson number 39 in Horse Sense Bridge.



It reads: In answer to an opening bid of one in a suit, a one-jump no-trump response shows any five high cards; or four high cards if two sure tricks are among them.

Your partner starts with an opening bid or one spade and you have the hand:

♠ J 4 2
♥ K 6 2
♦ A 7 5 3
♣ Q 10

Your hand contains four high cards. There are two sure tricks among them. With no takeout to assist, your immediate answer should be two no-trump, a one-jump no-trump response.

When you have enough, skip it.

NEWMARKET WINS CHAMPIONSHIP AT ZONE MEET

Basic Training Centre Captures Seven of the Twelve Contests

MEET AT HAMILTON

(By The Canadian Press)

Military athletes held the stage yesterday with athletic carnivals at Toronto and Hamilton, the meets being the military District No. 2 central zone's championships at the Canadian National Exhibition track and the southern zone's annual get-together at the Army Trades School in Hamilton at which the stalwarts from Simcoe, Ont., scored 34 points to walk off with the honors against the 48 points of the army school.

At the Toronto meet, the representatives of No. 33 Basic Training Centre, Newmarket, captured seven of the 12 events held in the card double winner of the day was George Halligan of the Toronto District, who turned in the only record run in 2:17.4 and came back to take the two-mile run in 10:16, outlasting Lieut. Forbes Mountain of Brampton. . . . Members of Newmarket sped the century dash in 10 seconds flat, coming from Jack Litz of Newmarket, W. Alton of Newmarket and Bob Field in the mile, turning the two laps in 5:18. Newmarket also scored victories in the relay, discus and javelin, to pile up 36 points against 27 for No. 2 District Depot.

Trained by Capt. Eddie Dove, former Canadian middle-distance speedster, the team from Simcoe Basic Training Centre was filled with most of the sprints, with Corp. Bill Stedman from Toronto taking the century and 440. Pte. M. T. Wallace of Simcoe took the one and three-mile runs and Pte. Ken Reynolds the same team was first in the discus and shot put. Pte. C. J. Oliver, Pte. S. A. Corbiere and Pte. Murray Shea were Brantford winners.

The Garden City race track, near Niagara Falls, played host to the biggest program of operations yesterday with the Indian card of nine events bringing on the starter of horses' hoofs both inside and outside the racing circuit. Most of a crowd of 3,000 persons traveling to and from the Falls saw the horse-drawn job of the starter, the procession towards the grounds starting some two-three hours before starting time. The last of the nine events was the run to the entrance just ahead of the third race.

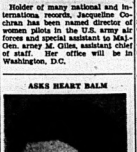
Until weather put a crimp into the Grand Circuit racing at North Randall track, the card being called off because of rain, Allos Hanover, the $1,455 National Stake for two-year-old pacers, became the first heat in 2:10 3-4. The unfinished program had its exciting moments when Rupe Parker, behind Captain Kindee in the Matinal, was tossed through the infield rail as the horse spilled. Clint Hodgins, another driver, hopped off his sulky to go to the assistance of the shaken Parker. The judges placed the two horses fifth and sixth in the six-horse event.

Chet Laabs, chunky outfielder of the St. Louis Browns, is clouting the ball like a champ. He has a series of seven homers in eight games and leads the league in his mark of 19 four-baggers last season when he finished second to Ted Williams of the Boston Red Sox. Laabs, 5 feet 8 inches tall and weighing 175 pounds, may even lead the American League in 1943 because Williams is now with the armed forces.

Lee MacPhail, Jr., who resigned as general manager of the Toronto baseball club last year to join the U.S. navy, has been appointed to the operating staff of the Brooklyn Dodgers, of which his father is a former president. MacPhail, who failed to meet the navy's medical standard, will be assistant to Branch Rickey, Jr.

The Provincial Lawn Bowling Tournament committee at Toronto has been forced to increase to 16 additional greens to accommodate the growing list of entries, despite the fact the tournament is a month away. Provision is now being made for 96 rinks, with applications having been received from points outside the province including Montreal and Buffalo.

The latest in competitions in Canada is aerial dive-bombing and who knows but it will become a sport feature in years to come? Al Kingston, three-man teams from Camp Borden, Aylmer, Downsville and Kingston competed at 2,000 feet. The Borden trio dropped 36 "eggs" closest to the bullseye but the individual honors went to LAC. Dick Roach of Toronto who scored three direct hits.



Sir William Rothenstein, who for 15 years was principal of the Royal College of Art, has presented to the R.A.F. 122 of his drawings of members of the services.

A Sunday school teacher in the Northeast Gospel tabernacle, Kansas City, Mo., Lucy Adams, 21, is seeking $15,000 damages for the grief she allegedly suffered when her pastor, the Rev. George Griffith, told her that their planned wedding would not take place. Rev. Mr. Griffith could not be located for comment.

Deserting Soldiers Flee to Sweden

London, July 8—(CP)—Norwegian sources in London reported that Gen. Nikolaus Von Falkenhorst, German commander-in-chief norway, had posted notices in military camps taking cognizance of a "shameful and disgraceful" increase in desertions among the Nazi occupation forces.

Three sources said their information was obtained from an underground newspaper smuggled from Norway.

The deserting soldiers were reported to have fled to neutral Sweden.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Springtime in the Rockies"

"Springtime in the Rockies," 20th Century-Fox's new Technicolor musical picture, now showing at the Capitol Theatre, contains a veritable fountain of hit tunes by the ace composing team of Mack Gordon and Harry Warren.

Pew films ever boasted more distinguished singers, or such lovely ones. On hand are golden voices of Betty Grable and Carmen Miranda. John Payne, too, adds his splendid warbling to the film together with Helen Forrest (Harry James' soloist).

The new hit tunes in the picture include: "Run, Little Raindrop, Run," "I Had the Craziest Dream," "A Poem Set to Music," "Pan American Jubilee." Featured in the strong supporting cast are Charlotte Greenwood and Edward Everett Horton.

In addition, Harry James and his band, together with his vocalists, do "Chirt, Chirt, Bird," "Trumpet Rhapsody," and "You Made Me Love You."

The film stars John Payne, Betty Grable, Carmen Miranda and Cesar Romero.

"The Trail Blazers"

In a gun-roaring round up of bandits The Trail Blazers, Ken Maynard and Hoot Gibson, are back again on the screen in "The Law Rides Again," the added action hit. Monogram's outdoor adventure program also features Jack LaRue and Betty Miles.

Including the big double feature a color cartoon will be shown as well as Zane Grey's "King of the Mounties."

AT THE BELLE

"Air Raid Wardens"

Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy play air raid wardens in a new film at themselves, and at the same time teach a lesson in patriotism in "Air Raid Wardens," their latest screaming adventure, now at the Belle Theatre. As wardens they go through trials and tribulations galore, muddle up their first-aid "patients" and engage in a whipped-cream battle with Edgar Kennedy. But they redeem themselves when they blund. . . into a gang of saboteurs and capture them without quibble.

Beautiful Jacqueline White and Horace McNally provide love interest and some dramatic moments. Edward Everett Horton, veteran actor-comedy, directed. Principals include Howard Freeman, Nella Walker, Donald Meek, Edgar Kennedy and Henry O'Neill.

"Secret Enemies"

The clever but deadly schemes of a Nazi spy ring and their attempt to murder a counter-espionage agent form the exciting plot of Warner Bros. newest film, "Secret Enemies," which is the added feature attraction.

Leading a cast of popular players are Craig Stevens, Ruth Ford and Ray Emerson with John Ridgley, Charles Lang and Robert Warwick in the supporting cast.

"Mighty Niagara," a very interesting travelitalk in technicolor by James Fitzpatrick completes the program.

AT THE McCARTHY

"MISTER BIG"

Music as the modern teen-agers demand it, is presented in unrationed quantities in Universal's "Mister Big" now at the McCarthy Theatre.

No less than eleven dance numbers, including several original ones, are presented by such talented young singers and dancers as Donald O'Connor, Gloria Jean, Peggy Ryan, the Delta Rhythm Boys, Jane Frazee and Betty Miles.

The original numbers also were written by such accomplished Buddy Pepper, now in the army, and Ross Jason. They are: "The Secret is in Me," and "Thee and Me," sung by Gloria Jean; "Hi Character," and Peggy Ryan: "Hi Character," "We're Not Obvious," and "Kitten With the Fiddle," sung by Donald O'Connor and Peggy Ryan; and "This Must Be a Dream," sung by Ray Eberle.

Gloria Jean also sings the old-time favorite, "Moonlight and Roses."

So that all 'teen-agers will be satisfied, Director Charles Lamont insisted that the musical range in "Mister Big" should include the classical, sentimental and jive.

AT THE CAPITOL

It's mile-high fun when this trail-busting four-some romping under the mountain moon in 20th Century Fox's "Springtime in the Rockies," now at the Capitol Theatre. On the same program "The Law Rides Again," with Ken Maynard and Hoot Gibson.

2nd feature on the weekend program stars Roy Rogers in King of the Cowboys, produced on a large budget scale, promises the ultimate in western entertainment. Roy is backed up by a sterling cast including not only Smiley Burnette and the famous Sons of the Pioneers band, but Peggy Moran, Dorothea Kent, Gerald Mohr, Lloyd Corrigan, James Bush and Russell Hicks as well.

The background of the story is a colorful travelling circus, which is used as a foil for a gang of saboteurs.

Little Benny's Note Book

It got late quicker than usual and I quick ran home on account of not wanting to be any late for supper that was necessary, and who was I expecting in the front door with his key big me, and I said, Oh boy this is my lucky day, you're not home early.

On the contrary I'm home at last, thank goodness, now I'm late, so this is hardly my lucky day, pop said. It's Thursday and your mother is cooking the dinner, and if there's any way she doesn't like people to be for a meal she gets mad, it's late, he said.

And we went in and ma started to say something mad, and pop quick said, Well, then we are not late. By golies if you women knew what we men have to put up with I bet you'd wonder how we ever get home to eat on time. Of course you have your itty little collection of pots and pans to contend with, and your neat little rows of spices and seasonings and all that sort of thing, but we contend delays and obstructions and conflicting telegrams calls in a business office, that's another story and I'm glad for your sake you don't have to put up with it, he said.

Well really, I mean really, after I've lavished my spare mental hours of care and attention on the thousand and one domestic details of a nice dinner, ma said, And she was starting to say more but I quick said, Sure, ma, O wimickers you've got your nice private kitchen full of swell smells where you know just exactly what you're doing and knowing but what if you were out trying to get up a game of cops and robbers and dark and you had to keep that promised to come out dont forget to come home by eight, and then up and blame it's pretty near dark then and the game just got started, good night me, you haven't got any luck.

Oh, you're just 2 birds of a single feather, said a lot of energy talk both cook back here and start eating about absolutely nothing, now you let me know everything is spoiled but good redemption, she said.

Which we did feeling lucky.

Hour of Grace

CHAPTER 4

When she thought of her childhood, she always saw it punctuated by Clare, the prettiest one, the one you dared not antagonize because Clare always gave the best and most frequent parties and because Clare's home where she lived with an ambitious old aunt was the favorite playground of all the boys and girls in the neighborhood. Clare was the magnet with her pavety and recklessness and charm and her air of possessiveness which drew them to her. The quarrel with her meant that you were excluded from her yard and the wonderful swings and sliding board and small swimming pool. They did quarrel with her but they always "made up" because not to "make up" meant that you would have no one to play with and if you did not go to Clare's you were left strictly alone.

Often Meegan, searching her memory, wondered what it was about Clare, aside from the wonders of her big yard and her beauty and recklessness and charm, that made them her faithful, fearful followers. Children are little impressed by beauty and charm in their contemporaries and even resent it. But Clare had had a hidden force which made the things and the people she wanted come to her, round Clare there was always drama and excitement. If they lagged, she would create them.

Meegan remembered Clare in the worst shock of her childhood was learning that Clare had stolen a bracelet in school. Clare's dignified garulous old aunt had gone to the school, a private school in the neighborhood and had somehow settled Clare's dismissal. She had said to Meegan's mother, "But Clare didn't realize she was stealing. She saw the bracelet in the locker and wanted it and took it. I can't make her understand that she was stealing and it's difficult to discipline her when she doesn't know she did anything wrong."

Clare did not study and when examination time came, she opened her book and copied the answers, keeping at all times the look of purity and innocence on her face. They had known it but they had not reported it and when they had known their honest marks would be considerably lower than her dishonest ones.

Slowly, gradually the swings and the sliding board were used no more and the parties ceased to be those where the tall was pinned on the donkey and a hired magician did tricks on his hands. They became the parties of adolescents where there was fruit punch in the stead of cream and kissing games and dancing to the phonograph. The girls in their first long gowns, the boys in their first long trousers. Meegan had not been invited to all of these parties. Clare's aunt, who was impatient for her niece to put her adolescence behind her, had remarked to Meegan's mother, "Don't you think Meegan is a little young for the group yet?" But Meegan heard of Clare's little intrigues and the fact that boys came to see and the fact that the boys wanted to kiss only Clare.

It was probably because Toby had been sent to military school that he had been the only one who had not fallen in love with Clare. But Clare, bursting from the confines of a too widened her bonds of adolescence before the fact. She went to the Naval Academy hops and the Hopkins and St. John's dances, returning at what hours McLean considered shocking hours for a girl so young. More than once Meegan had been awakened from sleep by the sound of a car stopping down the street and she had got up and looked out the windows to see Clare, her gown and slippers gleaming, alight from the car and run up the steps, a young man attentively beside her. Often she had heard the sound of their hushed excited voices and their laughter.

Perhaps as the grew older she would recognize that envy of Clare rather than Clare herself had dominated her childhood were it not for the fact that Jerry and Clare had gone to Maine one summer and Jerry, ever serious, scholarly, had been taking Adele around. Adele made him dress for tennis the day she first introduced him to sports. As the summer went on it looked as though Jerry felt Adele's wholesomeness a cure for his fever for Clare. And Adele's lover, her first, had done what it always does. It had given her a bloom, almost a loveliness she would never have again.

It had been a wonderful summer with Clare, away, Van took everywhere and Adele was with Jerry and Toby came home and Paul Fell to the island for the first time. It had been a wonderful summer because Clare was not there. But Clare came back and Van saw less of Sue and Adele and Jerry were not seen together and Toby and Paul were at school again. If Clare's stealing a bracelet had been the most shocking experience of her childhood, then her elopement with Jerry had been the most shocking experience of her girlhood.

They had simply driven away from a party one night and had gone to a minister and were married. It was an ugly little town with no decent hotel in it. It must have been. Meegan had often thought, an ugly marriage ceremony and an ugly wedding night. Certainly it was incongruous with the beauty of Clare, and Jerry's idealistic love. But in the morning when they returned Paul and Adele arisen alone and had driven Jerry's car back to the island. When Jerry had arrived by train almost mad with love and fear, Clare had told him that she had no intention of living with him and that she had known what she was doing and that she simply would not be married to him and that she did not love him. And Jerry had run out of the house, crossing the McLean lawn to his own home, and he had taken his father's car to drive back to Baltimore, swung too far out to avoid hitting a pedestrian and had his car in the end of his promising life under the overturned machine. It was Meegan's first experience with death. Her first and final feeling was one of irreparable loss that there would be no more Jerry to cross his lawn to here, no more Jerry for his distraught parents and shocked young friends. Death then was irreparable loss.

The day that Jerry was buried Clare had taken her niece to New York to live. The end of Jerry, they had thought then, and the end of Clare. Clare would never come back . . .

But Clare had come back two years later to marry Payne Christopher. For Clare would be married somewhere else, her aunt had written to Mrs. McLean. Would they not come to see her married, her oldest and dearest friends? The letter was a masterpiece. And so they had gone to her wedding, all save Adele and Jerry's parents and Toby who was in Europe and they had seen the most beautiful bride who had ever walked down that carpeted aisle. Yes, Clare had come back and they had gone to see her drawn once more by her hidden force and the drama and excitement that she created.

"I Couldn't Eat Because Everything Turned Sour"

Had So Much Gas, Bloating and Acidity; Got Dizzy Feelings, Bad Headaches; Very Nervous, Couldn't Sleep. Relates How Symptone Gave Prompt Relief.

MR. T. SEMONOVITCH

"In the past year I suffered with bad stomach disorders, gas, indigestion and constipation," said Mr. T. Semonovitch, 213 Caroline St., North, well known Hamilton carrier in a recent statement.

"My condition became so terrifying I turned sour in my stomach. I would have cold clammy feelings, belches by the hot, sour liquids. Sometimes I felt nervous, weak and dizzy and had bad headaches. I was so nervous I couldn't sleep. Even if I stooped over, my tongue and stomach coated and I had a bad taste in my mouth. This condition got so terrifying that I was afraid to eat. I went to the hospital and they gave me medicine but it only relieved me a little. I felt tired and nervous.

"Although I took a lot of different things, they weren't helping me any. Then I got a bottle of Symptone and decided to try it for that. I was really surprised how soon afterward I began to feel better. It stopped the food from fermenting and sourcing in my stomach and I felt I could eat anything and not suffer. I began relishing and not afraid of my nourishing. My nervousness went entirely and I sleep fine lately. I haven't had any dizziness, headaches or stomach trouble and my whole system is getting more healthy. I am also getting sound sleep at night and feel so much better that my work does not tire me as it used to."

Symptone is made from the pure extracts of 12 of Nature's Finest Herbs and Roots. It acts on stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels. It aids in the elimination of excess acid and poisonous waste matter from the system and promotes better digestion of food for increased strength and energy.

Symptone is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

Small Businesses Well Treated By Prices Board

Finance Minister Replies to Charges Made in House

NO PROGRESS MADE

By C. B. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, July 8 — (CP) — Prices Board officials have "leaned over backward" to ensure that small businesses get fairly treated in wartime regulations, Finance Minister Ilsley told the House of Commons last night.

Replying to charges by John Diefenbaker (Prog) Con. Lake Centre) that because of the Board's tendency to favor large manufacturing organizations small independent firms were being forced out of existence, Mr. Ilsley said policies of the Board had kept the small businessman in better position than they would otherwise enjoy, and had been ensured a fair allocation, based on past business, of the available consumer goods.

He read from a mass of statistics, from statements of business association executives and from a statement published last year by the Board, to support his assertion.

Such claims as those of Mr. Diefenbaker were "a favorite procedure" of those "who criticized the Board," the minister said, but they could not be substantiated. The Board was helping small business by equitable allocation of available consumer goods, by relief measures, the opening up of competitive businesses and by anti-inflation measures.

No Progress Made

Mr. Ilsley's argument was made during a day devoted entirely to consideration of the supplementary item for the prices board in the finance department's main appropriation.

No progress was made and today the House will consider the estimates of the agriculture department when the House meets at 11 o'clock for the first forenoon sitting of the session.

Operations of the prices board were under attack from Conservatives the afternoon and evening, and there was a cross-fire of questions and answers on numerous items of price control and commodity regulations.

The discussion brought from Mr. Ilsley a definite explanation that control of farm prices would not be transferred to the agricultural department but that all price administration would remain with the board.

He also gave a long and detailed statement on the technique of arriving at the cost-of-living index, in support of his assertion that the index was as accurate as possible.

Mr. Diefenbaker charged that of small dealers to get "a fair share of the consumer goods that remain to be distributed" had resulted in many going out of business and it appeared likely that by the time the war ended all small businesses would have disappeared.

On the subject of the picture he said, "we will see an ever-increasing concentration in the hands of the big business concerns throughout the country."

Not Profiteering

He cited, as an indication of this trend, an article in the Financial Post bemoaning Indians of Northern Canada could not get canned salmon unless they purchased from the Hudson's Bay Company.

Referring to the latter, Mr. Ilsley said he was not informed at the moment but he would look into it and issued to help the Indians and not the company, and he was sure the organization that had none of its officials was not profiteering.

Discussing the position of the small retailer, Mr. Ilsley said that in a time of high distribution costs and goods shortages, suppliers, if left to themselves, would show a natural tendency to prefer dealing with the big buyer. Therefore, at time of its inception the board had adopted a policy of ensuring small retailers of a fair share of scarce commodities, based on previous year's sales.

Outlining the system of arriving at a cost-of-living index, Mr. Ilsley said he realized people found it difficult to believe that the increase since the war was only 17 per cent. when some food prices such as meats had risen as high as 78 per cent. and the general food increase was 21.8 per cent.

But food represented only one-third of living costs and sugar had remained steady while milk had declined in price. The index was also based on such items as rent, linen, clothes, heat, life insurance and other factors.

In cases where only the most expensive of a line of commodities remained available, the index used those prices. All items of living were not used in the index. Items to was selected and "weighted" in order to reach an average which satisfied him, Mr. Ilsley said, as a reasonable index.

Impracticable Suggestion

He dealt with suggestions that direct taxes should be computed in the index and said this would be entirely impracticable because it would mean that there would have to be an index for every citizen as none of them paid the same amount of taxes.

A. J. Brace (Prog Con. Saskatoon City) suggested that a trained legal man should be in charge of enforcement of Price Board regulations. He said he knew of one instance when F. A. MacGregor Chief Enforcement Officer, proceeded against the advice of local counsel in Saskatchewan, with the result that 17 charges were dismissed. Questioned on staff salaries on the Prices Board Mr. Ilsley said on March 31, 1943, there were 289 receiving no salaries; 43 on salaries between $2,000 and $4,000; 88 receiving $4,001 to $5,000; 176 receiving $5,001 to $6,000; 682 receiving $2,001 to $3,000 and 3,723 receiving $3,000 and under—a total of 5,001.

At the afternoon sitting, Mr. Ilsley heard several members urge that control of farm prices should be exercised by the agriculture department instead of by the Prices Board, and replied that such a change would be "a grave mistake." Policy controlling must remain centralized in the Prices Board.

It would be as logical to ask that fish prices be controlled by the fisheries department and that the mines and resources department control prices of products of the mines and forests.

To those who charged that Canada's best sugar production could and should have been heavily increased, Mr. Ilsley said it would make no difference to rationing because the amount imported would be reduced by the amount of the increased production.

"Those (Japanese) remaining are fleeing," the communique said.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, July 8 (CP)—Only the base metal stocks held back on the Toronto stock exchange today. The industrials posted an index gain of .55 at noon and the golds and western oils had smaller gains. Volume was fair with 24,000 shares for the first three hours.

The Canadian Press reviewed the industrial section. Helped by the rising $2,000 to $4,000; 682 received $2,001 to $3,000 and 3,723 receiving $3,000 and under—a total of 5,001.

RENEW RAIDS ON GERMANY AFTER 4-NIGHT LULL

BATTLE AROUND KURSK MOUNTS IN INTENSITY

Industrial Centre Of Cologne Given Another Pasting

Allied Fighters In Great Force Make Daylight Sweep to Continue Offensive

8 BOMBERS LOST

London, July 9—(CP) — The R. A. F., returning to the assault on Germany after a four-night lull in the Allied aerial offensive, made a heavy attack on the Rhineland industrial centre of Cologne last night, the Air Ministry announced today.

Eight bombers were lost in the raid, the announcement said.

Mines also were laid in enemy waters during the night and British fighters on intruder patrols simultaneously attacked enemy airfields and railway targets in France and northwest Germany. Three German minesweepers were reported damaged in sweeps along the French coast.

The heavy British bombers had scarcely returned from their night foray over Germany when formations of Allied fighters swept out across the channel in the direction of northern France to continue the offensive by daylight.

Britain, meanwhile, passed a raid-free night.

The attack on Cologne was the 119th on that bomb battered city, target of the first great 1,000-bomber raid a year ago. The big Rhineland industrial centre had been attacked twice before within the past two weeks—once on June 28 and again last Saturday night. Both assaults were highly concentrated.

Silent Since Saturday

The R.A.F.'s big bombers had not been out since last Saturday night's raid, when in co-operation with U.S.A.F. aircraft they also struck at Hamburg and targets in the Ruhr. Operations since then have been limited to comparatively minor forays against communications and air fields in occupied territory by fighter planes.

A Berlin broadcast recorded by the Associated Press, following the usual line taken by Nazi propagandists, described last night's assault on Cologne as a "terror raid" directed against residential areas. The broadcast said Duisburg and other targets in the Rhineland were hit on in addition to Cologne, however.

Favored by Good Weather

The R.A.F. night raiders were favored by good weather, the skies clearing last evening after a day of thunderstorms.

Despite the unfavorable conditions yesterday, R.A.F. Typhoons and Mustangs carried out offensive patrols over Northern France and the low countries. The planes were reported to have destroyed one German aircraft and damaged several locomotives, and a railway viaduct plane was listed as lost in these sallies.

Yesterday R.C.A.F. squadrons also provided over northern France an offensive patrol, destroying a number of enemy aircraft and damaging locomotives.

R.C.A.F. headquarters reported that all planes returned safely from their missions.

German Account

The German High Command in its Friday communique gave this version of the R.-A. F. night raid:

"British bombers again ventured out a terror attack on Color g e and its environs last night. Th e y were casualties among the population as well as devastation in residential quarters. Cologne's industries again attacked and hit." It claimed that six of the raiders were shot down.

DREW ANNOUNCES PARTY PLATFORM IN RADIO SPEECH

22-Point Program Outlined by Progressive Conservative Leader

PROMISES REDRESS

Toronto, July 8—(CP)—Lt.-Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Progressive Conservative leader, said last night in outlining his party's 22-point platform for the next provincial election, that the mining industry will come in for special consideration, his party undertaking to place it under the direction of a minister with practical knowledge of mining.

He promised lightening of the industry's tax burden and a more equitable distribution of the tax between taxing bodies—a larger share going to provincial and municipal treasuries. Provision for new mining areas will be encouraged and the principle of pensions possible will be adopted to expand this basic industry.

Assistance to the mining industry, increased use of forest resources, a full development program under an Ontario Housing Commission, land reclamation and increased agricultural activity all were included in the program's scope, and all were indicated to be a phase of a post-war readjustment plan.

Col. Drew declared a rehabilitation and social security committee "to assure social security for all Ontario people" would provide for the rehabilitation and employment of members of the armed forces and munition workers after the war.

Cruiser Helena Turns Guns on Jap Ship When Something 'Hit Her', 600 Saved

Allied Headquarters in Australia, Friday, July 9 (AP) — The 8,700 ton United States cruiser Helena had just turned her guns on a Japanese destroyer and watched it go up in a blinding flash in the Kula Gulf of the Central Solomons when something hit her.

But more than 600 aboard the Helena were saved from the mid-conflagration, war correspondents reported today from the South Pacific.

(The Helena was the only American warship lost in the naval battle fought in the pre-dawn darkness July 6 and daylight hours yesterday against the certain loss of nine Japanese warships and destroyers. The number of Helena survivors never has been stated. A number of her type normally carries between 700 and 800 men.)

The story of the cruiser's destruction as related by Alan Jackson, American picture pool photographer who was aboard her, was told to Australian by Osmar White, Australian correspondent. White also reported the rescue of survivors rescued at 600.

Jackson's story follows:

"We were told early in the evening we were going to intercept the Tokyo Express (nickname first applied to Japanese ships supplying Munda). I was on watch after and said it would be back.

"We flashed the lights again. The whole sea was a mass of bobbing heads. Another destroyer passed within 50 yards and we called 'are you friendly?' A Japanese one replied 'take it easy, we will be back.'

"A half hour later, a destroyer came up and we climbed the rope to the deck. She immediately put on speed and started firing. At 1,000 yards we ran into a Jap cruiser and gave her hell. I saw flames and explosions on her deck. One hero was the whalesboatman who volunteered to stay back and pick up more survivors. We left Jap

SHUTTLE SERVICE RAINS EXPLOSIVES ON ITALY'S DROMES

Sixth Consecutive Day Sicilian and Sardinian Targets Objectives Of Raids

21 PLANES DOWNED

(By RELMAN MORIN)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, July 9 (AP)—Hundreds of Allied planes shuttled back and forth across the Mediterranean yesterday in the sixth consecutive day to rain explosives upon the Sicilian airdromes, ports and railways constitute Italy's first line of defense, it was announced today.

Heavy and medium bombers, fighter-bombers and fighters from the Northwest African bases, Malta and the Middle East joined in the blistering attack.

Trip-hammer blows were loosed upon Sardinia's airfields and the light-er craft also went on free-lance missions across the length and breadth of Sicily, shooting up trains, motor convoys and troops. One Axis troop convoy was caught on a road.

The aircraft nests above Gerbini were blasted again by day and by night, whipsawed from the southwest and the southeast. Catania, Comiso, Milo and Cap Passero, the latter at the southeast tip of Sicily and the first from the R.A.F. base at Valletta, were hit anew.

21 Planes Downed

Northwest Africa, Valletta and Middle East headquarters told now of the shooting down of 21 Axis fighters and the destruction of other enemy planes on the ground, against the loss of 11 Allied aircraft.

Cairo bulletins announced that U.S. Air Force Liberators dumped 250,000 pounds of high explosives on Catania in a seven-hour attack yesterday, this following up a flame-searing attack of all the night before at that city by R.A.F. heavy bombers the preceding night.

United States communique pictured the destruction:

"Hits were observed in the Canadian Wellington Bomber Squadrons Now Active in North Africa

Ottawa, July 9 (CP) — Air Marshal L. S. Breadner, chief of air staff, announced today that "a number of Canadian Wellington bomber squadrons" have arrived in North Africa and have had "many exciting experiences" already.

Canadian airmen have been serving for many months in North Africa, but, except for one fighter squadron, they have been attached to R.A.F. squadrons. The squadrons to which the Air Marshal referred are R.C.A.F. squadrons, commanded by Canadians.

Air Marshal Breadner made his announcement in addressing a wings parade at nearby Uplands air station, home of No. 1 Service Flying Training School.

Number Not Given

The exact number of squadrons which have joined R.A.F. and United States units in North Africa was not given.

It was indicated in other quarters, however, that all parts of Canada are represented in the airforces, which includes large French Canadian fliers from Quebec.

The Air Marshal's statement that the Canadian squadrons have had many exciting experiences" in the short time they have been in North Africa was taken as an indication that the squadrons have been taking part in the recent heavy attacks in the Mediterranean area.

Air Marshal Breadner presented the Caen Memorial Trophy, awarded Canadian provinces, three States of United States and New Zealand.

"There is a bit of news concerning the R.C.A.F. that has not yet been given to the public," he said. "I think it is fitting that you should be the first to hear."

Then he made his announcement.

78TH CONGRESS CONCLUDED AFTER LENGTHY SESSION

Historic for Unity on War Effort but Not on Domestic Problems

ENDORSES SUBSIDIES

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Washington, July 9 — (CP) — United States 78th Congress was free today after a session notable historic for its unity of mustering the country's resources for war but hectic in its inability to see eye-to-eye with the administration on domestic problems.

Close of the session for the first long recess since the United States entered the war was marked by the termination of the administration's arms-the-President fight in years, and it ended with a resounding Presidential victory.

Clashing over the President-backed subsidy plan, similar to the one that in Canada has helped keep down the cost of living, congress last night, with only a few minutes of their session remaining, gave in and allowed the subsidy measure to become law.

This retreat from their previous stand — one of outlawing subsidies — may mean a great deal to Canada and the Canadian price control program. Had the administration failed in its fight to control food prices by means of the subsidy plan, the price system of the United States might have been in jeopardy, along with subsequent repercussions on the Dominion economy.

Recesses Sept. 14

Not until Sept. 14, unless an emergency develops, will Congress reassemble. It will then consider, among other gigantic tasks, among them how to raise new revenues aswell as President Roosevelt's request to ask about postwar planning and foreign policy.

Here are some of the results of its work this far:

1. A pay-as-you-go tax collection bill.

2. A punishment-dealing anti-strikes measure.

3. Record smashing appropriations of more than $114,000,000,000.

4. Overriding President Roosevelt's $25,000-after-tax-limitation on earned incomes.

5. Abolition of the national youth administration and the national resources planning board.

6 Curtailment of the office of war information's domestic activities.

7. Continuation of the lend lease act.

8. Extension of the administration's power to enter into reciprocal trade treaties with other countries.

(Canada has a trade treaty with the United States under the act operative).

9. A boost in the national debt to $210,000,000,000.

10. Ultimate liquidation of the civilian conservation corps.

11. A statute subjecting war brokers to renegotiation of "excessive" profits.

EMBODY CONCEPT OF ALLIES IN ORGANIZATION

Mr. King Sees Need of International Authority in World Affairs

REPRESENTATION

Ottawa, July 9 — (CP) — Prime Minister Mackenzie King said today the time is approaching "when, even before victory is won, the concept of the United Nations will have to be embodied in some form of international organization."

Speaking in a review of international affairs during discussion of external affairs department estimates, Mr. King said that, on one hand, authority in international affairs must not be concentrated either in Canada or in Washington, London or Moscow.

"On the other, authority cannot be divided equally among all the 30 or more sovereign states that compose the United Nations if there is to be effective authority will disappear."

A number of new international institutions were likely to be set up as a result of the war.

"In the view of the government, effective representation on these bodies should neither be restricted to the few nor unreasonably extended to all states," he continued.

"Representation should be determined by the principle of functional responsibility for the particular object in question."

More Than 58 Sovereign States

There were more than 60 sovereign states in the world. If they all were nominally equal in their international decisions, no effective organization was likely to be set up.

"Some compromise must be found between the theoretical equality of states and the practical necessity of limiting representation on international bodies in a workable manner.

"That compromise can be discovered, especially in economic matters, in the light of the functional principle of representation.

"Such principle, in turn, is likely to find many new expressions in the gradual task of liberalizer, restoration and reconstruction.

U.S. INVADERS ONLY THREE MILES FROM MUNDA BASE

Hard Hit Japanese Air Force Loses 200 Planes Over Solomons Within a Week

APPLY PINCERS

By C. YATES McDANIEL
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Allied Headquarters, Australia, July 9—(AP) — Only three miles from Munda, United States invaders are probing Japanese defences of that New Georgia island air base and both the Solomons and New Guinea Allied planes have dealt new blows with heavy loss to the Japanese air headquarters reported today.

On the other hand, the hard hit Japanese air force, having lost nearly 200 planes over the Solomons within a week, has diminished the weight of its punches.

The pincers which American forces have been applying against Munda July 9 by landing both north and east of it pressed nearest at 5 miles on the east, where advanced patrols clashed Thursday with Japanese and defended them. It was a feeling-out encounter with big push obviously in abeyance while the main forces which storm-ed Japanese stores Munda at Rice Anchorage and east of it at Zanana consolidate positions. The advanced Japanese at Munda are believed to be in considerable

Toronto Controller Chosen Candidate

Toronto, July 9 — (CP) — For the first time in history, a Labor convention last night ousted a sitting member of the legislature in favor of a new candidate when Fred Hamilton, a member of the Toronto board of Control, was named Liberal candidate in Toronto St. Patrick constituency for the Aug. 4 election.

Mr. Hamilton was chosen over Lt.-Col. F. Fraser Hunter who held the seat since 1934.

Col. Hunter, in a brief speech, protested against the credentials held by delegates and said that "many accredited delegates were waiting outside the legislature on political mittance." He added that the meeting was "not a proper place to operate," and many Liberal voters of the riding "would never give sanction to this meeting."

Nazis Use 90,000 Troops Against One Narrow Area

Germans Attempt to Exploit Wedge in Russian Defences Near Belgorod

161 PLANES DOWNED

By WILLIAM McGAFFIN
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, July 9—(AP)—The battle of the Kursk salient mounted in intensity today as the Germans hurled in fresh troops and new tanks to exploit a wedge in Russian defences near Belgorod and batter the unyielding northern shoulder of the Soviet line.

Red Star, Red Army organ, reported the German High Command has changed the direction of their attack several times in the Orel-Kursk sector seeking a weak point in deep Russian defensive positions.

In that northern section of the fiercely-waged, 400-mile battle line, the Russians said their troops had destroyed the entire division of counter-attacks yesterday while holding firm against a mighty stab by some 90,000 Nazi troops against one narrow area.

No Tanks Get Through

The Nazis resumed to the attack at 8 a. m. yesterday on the Orel-Kursk sector. On the narrow front where the 90,000 German forces were engaged, the battle had reached its peak by 3 p. m. The Russian correspondent said one unit, however, withstood 11 consecutive attacks.

The correspondent said that, proof of the failure of already-big German threw 250 tanks against the Russians' fix not a single one got through, he said.

Dispatches from the front declared the German attack had failed in all its attempts to win superiority over the battlefield. One batch of Russian pilots was said to have shot down 113 German planes during 81 dogfights throughout the day.

As the masses of plane-supported Nazi armor and infantry continued to hurl themselves against Gen. Vatutin's Red Army line in fifth day, the Russians although admitting a new enemy tank penetration in one sector, declared "stiff fighting continues" in this southern sector.

204 Tanks Destroyed

A Moscow communique reported an additional 204 German tanks destroyed or damaged in the yesterday's fighting and 161 planes were shot down. Russian losses in day enemy losses to 1,343 tanks and 810 planes. Nazi casualties were reported at 54,000 and 25,000, German Communique

The Friday German High Command communique, broadcast by the Berlin radio and recorded by the Associated Press, declared that the Russians had lost 1,343 tanks in Orel area goes on with undiminished ferocity."

It said the Russians lost "another 400 tanks" and sustained high casualties in the counter-attacks. It also reported that the Russians

U.S. Subs in Pacific Knocking Off Jap Ships at Rate of One a Day

Washington, July 9 (AP)—United States submarines slicing through Japanese shipping at unprecedented numbers, are knocking off Japanese vessels at the rate of one a day.

This toll of what Japan needs most—bottoms to keep her fighting outposts of stolen Empire—has provoked the navy department to issue three special bulletins in little more than a month, the latest yesterday, a Sunday news item. Ordinarily, the doings of submarines are related in the weekly periods of silence maintained for security reasons.

Eight June 1, American submarine packs, which Navy Secretary Frank Knox declared last year "are operating steadily, have blasted to the bottom 25 Japanese supply vessels, many of them big transports, and tankers, and three destroyers, probably a destroyer, were listed as transport and a tanker. Nine more ships, probably sunk, and probably sunk, and 94 damaged.

Sometimes vessels seen from a periscope only as being damaged, sink later, Admiral Nimitz announcers long have adhered rigidly to the policy of claiming just as they see them. The submarine most likely to be back for another try is the enemy is the one that gets out of Western waiting waiting for too much observation as soon as an attack has been completed.

Hence, the toll of ships sunk announced in navy communiques is conservative.

Latest success of the submarine raiders was reported yesterday in an announcement claiming 10 more Japanese transport and supply vessels torpedoed. Four medium sized cargo vessels were damaged.

This brought to 383 the total reported destroyed submarines in the Pacific since the United States entered the war. Of this number 209 are listed as probably sunk, and 94 damaged.

AIR COMMANDO ASSAULTS PART OF SINGLE STRATEGY

Prime Minister King Says War in 1943 is Vital Part of War of Liberation

N. AFRICA PRELUDE

Ottawa, July 9 (CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King said today in the House of Commons that the aerial and commando assaults against Italy and Sicily, Sardinia and Crete, "are parts of a single strategy which the immediate future may be expected rapidly to unfold."

"The war in 1943 must be thought of as a vital part of the war of liberation of the oppressed countries of Europe, of which the liberation of the French Empire in Africa was the first step and the Russian campaign prelude," Mr. King said.

The Japanese had made "determined efforts" to build and fortify bases for subsequently launched over other aircraft at the Aleutian Islands of Attu and Kiska.

During May, Japanese forces had been driven out of Attu which now was under undisputed control.

"Kiska remains a potential center of attack, from whence, also, upon other parts of this continent," he said.

New Nazi Drive in Russia

Mr. King described the new German offensive along about 200 miles of the Russian front, starting today with the intensified bombings of strategic targets over Europe, as "a place of new beginning in the war in Europe."

Organization of free China and the development of its industries education and social services had been one of the "most resourceful answers to aggression in the history of the world."

Mr. King said "Mounting successes" have marked the offensive waves of the United Nations during recent months.

Question and review of recent world developments as external affairs department estimates came before the House of Commons.

Told Check-Off System Opposed to Ruling Of Munitions Dep't

Windsor, Ont., July 8 (CP) — Opposition to the check-off system of the United Automobile Workers of America (C.I.O.) found a statement saying that "unwarranted interference" of Munitions Department was threatening harmonious labor relations at the plant of the Ford Motor Company of Can. at Belleville.

The statement said that the union and company negotiated an agreement providing for voluntary check-off of union dues but "we were informed that this was opposed to a ruling of the Department of Munitions and Supply and director of Aircraft Production, Ralph Bell."

Mr. Bell told the Canadian Congress of Labor officials are making investigations of the check-off system in an effort to reach a settlement.

Only employees of the plant who signify in a written statement that they are members of the union and agree to the check-off are affected by it, the statement said.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

CHILDREN DEFACE CEMENT REPAIRS MADE ON WALKS

That new cement being laid by the Department of Public Works at Bridge and Queen Street, has been defaced was reported by City Engineer Charles Mott Thursday. "The Department of Public Works is endeavoring to repair city sidewalks and keep them in a good state of repair. However, as rapidly as we set new cement mischievous children deface the wet cement before it can set and become firm," said the engineer. "The matter is now in the hands of the city police and prosecutions will follow in the event any person is apprehended defacing newly poured cement on city streets in the future.

FIREMEN BUSY WITH REPAIRS

"Every day that we stay in the fire hall we are saving the city money," was the observation heard from fire department circles this morning as a summary of last week had elapsed since the last alarm was rung in. Fire fighting activity for the past seven days has therefore been rather a minor quantity, but firemen are busying themselves this morning in fire hall repairs and alterations now under way.

PEA VINERIES START TO WORK

Pea vineries in the Hastings and Prince Edward district started operations this week, according to the weekly crop report issued by the information received by the Ontario Department of Agriculture. The pea crop in general will be light, it was stated.

Despite a week or so's lateness in planting, tomato plants are now making good growth, with prospects being favorable for a fair crop.

Hay-making operations will make way with farmers experiencing considerable difficulty in obtaining sufficient help for harvesting. Splendid stands of fall wheat and rye will be ready for cutting by July 15th or shortly afterwards.

TWO REPORTED AS A.W.O.L.

For the first time in the history of local police circles two feminine members of the Canadian Army (Women's) were reported A.W.O.L. to Belleville and have spent the night in the local bastile. The girls were apprehended during the night and given lodging by the civic authorities pending military escort to return them to the C.W.A.C. unit.

"PEEPING TOM" ACTIVE IN CITY

Belleville's first "peeping tom" in many years was reported to city police authorities last night. The report came from an apartment resident at 194 Dundas Street.

According to complaints a night prowler climbs over the apartment house roof and peers into the bedroom window while the apartment occupants are preparing to retire late at night. Police promised action.

BORROWED CAR TO MAKE A CALL

When is a stolen motor car not stolen?

That's the question D. J. Callahan of Belleville had to answer Thursday afternoon when he found his car missing from the parking position on Front St. After the vehicle was reported stolen a friend had merely borrowed it to make a call.

Mr. Callahan parked his 1937 model Chevrolet coach near the Belle Theatre on Front St. about 4.30 p.m. Thursday. When he returned to get the vehicle around 6 o'clock, however, the coach was no where to be seen. Naturally Mr. Callahan reported his car stolen to the police.

Later while searching for the vehicle the owner saw a friend park it near the place it was taken. Just borrowing your car to make a little call," the friend related with a smile.

WINDOWS IN CITY SCHOOLS BROKEN

Reports that windows are being broken by mischievous children in city schools were received by city police yesterday. L. A. Cook, supervising superintendent of local public schools, stated this morning that within the last week upwards of 25 window panes have been broken at Queen Mary School and Albert. Children throwing stones are believed responsible and police will make a systematic patrol of school areas in the early evening.

Canada Ships 26 Carloads of Clothes To Heroic People of Soviet Union

Belleville Residents Have Contributed 600 Pounds of Clothing to This Cause

Twenty-six carloads of used and new clothing, totalling approximately 780,000 pounds have been shipped to Russia from Halifax by the Ontario Division of the Canadian Aid to Russia Fund, it has been announced by Mr. Jack Creed, Chairman, in Toronto. Of this 284,164 items of clothing for men, women and children were in excellent condition, much of it brand new.

The result of the clothing campaign was hailed as the conquering of "starving with a needy ally." It being announced the campaign had reached into 300 Ontario centres and had involved 600 organizations.

"We have been deeply impressed," stated Mr. Creed, "by the magnificent spirit with which people of Ontario entered into this great effort. Their work has been carried on without ostentation and with a sense that they have helped without glory."

Also Mr. Creed continued, "this has been a practical demonstration of the Canadian people's desire to contribute to the United Nations war effort and to maintain our battle fraternity with the heroic Russian people."

"The campaign has convinced me more than ever that the people of Ontario have implicit confidence in their partnership role and responsibility in the war and that the people united to rid the world of Hitlerism will succeed."

Residents of Belleville have done their part in the campaign, clothing to the needy Russian cause, according to Mrs. Neate of the St. Julien Chapter, I.O.D.E., which organization has sponsored the Belleville Aid to Russia Fund in this city. Approximately 600 pounds of clothing and bedding valuable condition has been packed in Belleville and forwarded to local Ontario headquarters.

Contributions of clothing are still being accepted by Mrs. Neate for the cause and all offers will be promptly attended to. Telephone 1475-M.

6 Motorists Fined For Infraction Parking Bylaws

Motorists who continue to violate the one hour parking bylaws in the downtown area of the city will find in this city find such infractions rather costly. Today in city police court they had to answer to Chief Lloyd six such motorists contributed two dollars each for their laxity in violating parking regulations in Belleville.

"The parking bylaws are enacting by council and must be obeyed," warned Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C.

Mrs. Audrey Asselstine, Pinnacle Street, was convicted of using grossly insulting language to Jack Clapper, a neighbor. The accused was fined $5 and costs or 30 days. It is hard to believe such charges would be laid against there was some foundation," commented His Worship as he assessed a one dollar fine to be paid.

A charge of the theft of a ragatic, Donald Hughes, Pinnacle Street, Station Street, was dismissed by the court. Proof that Hughes owns this stove, but we can prove it," revealed E. R. Pidwell, barrister for the accused, as he produced a duplicate purchasing contract as substantiate his statement. Quintena Rebekahs Hold Tag Day Saturday For Mobile Canteen

The Quintena Rebekah Lodge of Belleville will make an appeal to the Belleville public on Saturday for assistance in raising funds to help provide a mobile canteen for use overseas in the bombed areas of Great Britain.

Decision to provide the canteen was made at a recent convention of Rebekah lodges held in Toronto with all lodges across the province pledging their efforts to help raise the money required.

The date allotted for the Rebekah tag day in Belleville was originally scheduled for two weeks ago but the organization kindly gave up their day for the Greek War Relief Fund and will appeal to the people tomorrow. A generous response on the part of Belleville and district residents is urged that the contribution for the canteen may mean that this district may be really worth while.

44th Field Regt. (R) Enjoys Living Under Actual Field Conditions

Batteries From Belleville, Napanee, Kingston and Gananoque, Praised

TRAINING CLIMAX

By Capt. Geo. D. Carew
Public Relations Officer
Reserve Army Artillery Camp, Petawawa, July 8 — Each year, eager enthusiastic gunners of Canada's Reserve Army Artillery, their faces pleasantly tanned by Dominion sun, are cavorting around these famous sandy plains in the final thrills of the realization of a training dream that has existed in fancy for months and in some cases years.

For here, in the shadow of the artillery range, with the boom of sixty-pounders and the crackle of the "twenty-five" rolling an artillery symphony, the realism of civilian soldiers are living in actual war conditions.

Gone is the nightmare of weary route marches. In its place is a dash of gunnery theory plentifully garnished with practical work. Here in the miniature tented city, the best of our actual targets. This is the thing they have longed for, looked forward to and are at last experiencing. For it is no make-believe, no "imagined" gunnery. It is, as one Bensville gunner stated, the real McCoy. And they are sincere. Their enthusiasm is no sham. They love it, are not afraid to say so.

C. C. In Enthusiastic

Lieut. Col. J. F. Mooney, officer commanding the 44th (R) Field Regiment, RCA, comprising batteries from Belleville, Napanee, Kingston and Gananoque, is enthusiastic over the training he personally as an officer and gunners. "It is a soldier's dream come true," he said. "We could not have had better facilities. Added: The Instructors are of the finest type. They are keen and are doing a fine job of work. The equipment given my regiment is excellent, while administration and other phases of training could not be better. The regiment is enjoying itself and will benefit greatly. It now has a training point of view."

Major C. E. Jamieson, veteran artillery officer of Napanee commanding the 34th Field Battery, Major J. G. Campbell, commanding the 32-33 Battery, Kingston and Captain M. A. Elwood of the 34th Field Battery, Belleville echo their commanding officers sentiments. They are well satisfied with the camp and agree that it is one of the best summer training periods in a decade.

Reserve Gunnery Stay Pleasant

Reserve Army Artillery Camp officers are having no stone unturned to not only make the "reserve" gunnery stay a pleasant one but are providing the last word in modern artillery tactics training and equipment. Many young officers are looking through dial sights, range finders, and compass, while mested youngsters ride the "jeeps" the tractors and limbers behind the shields of the field pieces. They are there learning the "thrill" of the art of going into "action with real guns, in "troop" battery and other formations.

"Boy, this it the life" grins Sergt. Maurice Bowerman, Napanee from his sun helmet. Gunner Chas. Thompson, an enthusiastic 17-year-old youngster can scarcely wait. "Just wait till I'm old enough. It's the guns for me and Heinie will know it."

Feed Good, Lots of It

Good substantial food and lots of it, three square meals a day, they sleep like dead horses, plenty of recreation and the many facilities of this modern training camp

PROSPECTOR DEAD

Alexander "Sandy" McIntyre, prospector of the Mcintyre Gold Mines, is dead in Toronto, October 16 after a short illness, during which, "Sandy's" name is legendary in Northern Ontario mining. He had been active several years before prices which later became wealthy. He never had great wealth, himself are some of the contributing factors to the well being of the "reserve".

But the training is the thing. It is what they have wanted for years; what they are getting and how. The Royal Canadian Reserve Artillery is showing that if the need arises, it will be a worthy successor to its "Active" Big Brother.

Obituary

LATE JOHN SEXTON QUINLIN

The funeral of John Sexton Quinlin, late residence, 39 Highland Ave., took place this Friday from the R.C.A. church to St. O'Brien Funeral Home, 30 Moira Street West, to St. Michael's Church where Requiem Mass was celebrated by the Rev. Father A. L. O'Donnell, who said also the committal prayers at the graveside in St. James' Cemetery.

The bearers were Messrs. Donald Quinlin, Joseph Pidgeon, Leonard Weeks and John Burgess.

Coal Situation

In view of the short supply of coal, the co-operation of the general public in using high or low volatile coal is urged that the prepared domestic sizes is being supplied by the office of the Coal Controller for Ontario.

Coal dealers and fuel committees of the municipalities throughout the province have received a communication from the Ontario office advising that anthracite coal (pea size, stove, egg, furnace, nut and larger), briquettes, Pocahontas, and high volatile coal in the prepared sizes suitable for domestic use are in short supply.

None of this type of coal in short supply may be delivered to schools, churches, hospitals, factories, mines and other types of business buildings, it was advised. They must use low or high volatile coal in other than the prepared domestic sizes.

This, however, does not apply to buildings which are heated by stoves or fireplaces. In such cases it is necessary to deviate from the instructions contained in the above paragraph, permission must be obtained from the office of the Coal Controller in Ottawa, it was stated.

$1,000 COUPONS STOLEN

Hamilton, July 8—(CP)—Thieves entered the office of the British American Oil Company, Burlington Street East, last night and stole $5,000 gasoline coupons, police said today.

A few weeks ago, a robbery occurred in Belleville, in which $6,000 coupons were stolen. Last night, theft represents 333,000 gallons of gasoline.

AIR COMMANDO

iary of state for external affairs said in the course of this battle forces were so evenly matched that in early afternoon there was even a slight alteration of forces for a short time. A considerable air strength might have tilted the balance towards victory or defeat.

As late as mid-October, 1942, he said, forces in this country to say there was no sign that the tide of battle had definitely turned.

Fighting Men

The main offensive plans began in the southwest Pacific with Australian landings on the Solomons in August, 1942, was continued in the offensive launched by the British 8th Army westward from El Alamein late in October; and reached its greatest impetus from the Allied landings in Morocco and Algeria late last November.

Successes of N. Africa.

The successful North African campaign "marked the triumphal close of an all-important chapter in the war."

Campaigns which had been "holding action" on a vast scale had been fought against the aggressor with increasing force elsewhere. In Russia what had looked like a long, stiff defensive stand" was turned into an offensive of such proportion that the entire German 6th Army was annihilated at Stalingrad.

In the Pacific Japan's hold remained widespread. There had been some local gains by China, but the Chinese effort was limited by supplies available and even more by the length and difficulties of supply routes.

In the Southwest Pacific the power of Japan had been held at bay and been inflicted on her shipping greater losses than she could hope to replace it.

The United States had recently driven the Japanese out of some of their strongholds in the Aleutian Islands.

"By a determined initiative, they have denied to Japan other bases and harbors which might be used to attack Australia or to threaten the sea routes from the United States of Australia and the Indian Ocean.

"Forces of Australia and New Zealand have joined in fighting the Japanese in New Guinea and other islands to the north of Australia."

vicinity of the telephone and telegraph buildings, while other bombs fell in the railroad marshalling yards. The railway tracks were completely covered by debris. The central railroad station was hit and set afire, as were also the freight depot and a large barn-house. A ...enormous fire was started among oil storage tanks and the whole industrial area was soundly covered by bombs. Eight ammunition trains were destroyed in this area, and five others were damaged, four probably fatally, it was announced.

Italian Commentators

(The Italian high command said in a communique broadcast that 81 persons were killed and 300 injured in attacks on unfortified radio which ruined buildings and started fires in the heart of the city. It declared 26 raiders were shot down over Sicily.)

Belatedly, Cairo authorities also announced today: RAF Air Force Liberators also had broken roaring attacks started fires and damaged grounded aircraft on a sizable aerodrome on air fields about Gerbini, which have been the target of frequent raids from Northwest Africa.

Malta-based Spitfires and the R.A.F. assisted in escorting American bombers over Sicily, shooting three fighters of a German formation which was attempting to head at Comiso and then turned their guns upon the fifth already marked by the wrecks of downed or damaged planes.

Enemy opposition was scattered. Some crews reported meeting fairly heavy anti-aircraft fire and they saw no Axis fighters.

This further says the Allies have won almost complete mastery of the air over Sicily. The invasion and the scope of the attacks are too great, it is said, to stamp to meet them in strength at any point.

MYSTERY DEEPENS AS TO CAUSE OF DEATH OF OAKES

Inquiries Reported on Body of Engineer, Who Was Found Dead in Bed

EXPERTS AID POLICE

Nassau, Bahamas, July 9 — (AP) — Meagre details which seeped thru censorship today served only to deepen for the outside world the mystery surrounding the death of one of the British Empire's wealthiest baronets, Sir Harry Oakes.

The only fact known generally was that there were injuries on the body of the 66-year-old American-born mining engineer who staked Lake Shore gold mine in Northern Ontario. He was found dead in bed yesterday by a friend who called for an appointment.

SIR HARRY OAKES

Foul play was indicated, however, by the summoning from Miami of two American police experts to aid the Nassau constabulary in the investigation.

A coroner's inquest was called behind closed doors.

Bahamian lips remained, meanwhile, the lure of a colorful citizen who had become the island's principal land owner and businessman. He came here in 1938, attracted by the colony's low tax rates.

He lived for a number of years in Canada and became a British citizen in 1918.

Special Large Items on Bargain Square

He spent large sums to various local developments, including a private hotel, opening a Bahamian airline, operating a Nassau land boom, improving the country club and golf course and demonstrating the feasibility of vegetable and dairy farming on an island once considered barren.

His latest enterprise was a 1,000-acre farm, on which he had completed a trip to the United States by the person of shooting the perfect yesterday afternoon to Nassau newspapers.

Among his friends was the Duke of Windsor, who cancelled appointments yesterday to take a hand in the investigation.

Sir Harry's wife will be sent to Bar Harbour, Me., Lady Oakes, the former Eunice Myrtle McIntyre of Sydney, Australia, was at the Bar Harbour summer estate with three of their five children yesterday when she received news of her husband's death.

(She expressed sentiment in terse dispatches of the Bahamian investigation, saying she understood her husband had played tennis only yesterday and that she presumed his death to be due a heart disease.)

Sir Harry's baronetcy, created in 1939, goes now to his eldest son, Sydney, 16.

Discoverer of Gold Discovery

Born at Sangerville, Me., Dec. 23, 1874, he built up his great fortune as a result of a quirk of fate. For 16 years he had sought gold in many parts of the world without success. His funds ran low and he was put off a train near Kirkland Lake, in Northern Ontario, Canada, because he could not pay his fare.

He met a Chinese store-keeper who convinced him that gold could be found right there. Staked by his mother, Sir Harry tried again, and came upon the vein which now is the Lake Shore mine, second largest in the world.

Picton and District

Bert Pearsall Liberal Nominee In Prince Edward

Picton, July 9. (Special) — The Liberal standard was unfurled in Picton, when delegates from Prince Edward and Lennox Counties met in the Parish Hall on Wednesday evening, to nominate a candidate for the forthcoming provincial election.

Mr. Bert Pearsall, drover, of Prince Steward, was nominated by Dr. Wilson of Napanee. The nomination was seconded by Thos. Jones of Picton and met with the approval of the delegates.

In thanking the delegates Mr. Pearsall stated that he would be proud to be associated with a leader like Harry Nixon, who works for the common people. In the post-war program Mr. Pearsall said he would like to be the first to see that Prince Edward-Lennox get its share of any appropriation.

Dr. Robin, chairman of the meeting, described the candidate as a man of sound business integrity, "we want more business men and farmers in our parliaments" said Dr. Robin. He condemned the proposed plan of Col. Drew to tell Canadian farmers what they should grow.

Mr. H. St. Remy, Liberal Candidate of Kingston, for many years in Western Ontario, thought that farming, Canada's leading industry, should have money to go ahead. "Mr. Nixon", he said, "would see that farmers had money for necessary equipment. He referred to the present act C. F. government that he said ruined the financial standing of Alberta, whose bonds now sell at 48.

Condemns Criticism

W. L. Thompson, K. C. of Toronto, has associated with the Milk Control Board, was the final speaker. He condemned Col. Drew's policy of doing nothing, but criticising a great deal, and cited his record during the last war and the Hong Kong episode. He declared that no leader must emerge from this war affluent it there is to be any money for post-war work. He condemned the compulsory railgrading of hogs, and thought farmers should sell their hogs as they saw fit, only the packers profited by rail-grading. He proposed that co-operative packing, financed by government subsidies would follow if rail-grading of hogs was not discontinued. A veteran of the last war, Mr. Thomp. son remarked commended voting by proxy, where if a boy overseas, does not have the issues at stake, he can leave it to his father or proxy to vote for him.

Summer of Gold Discovery

Born at Sangerville, Me., Dec. 23, 1874, he built up his great fortune as a result of a quirk of fate. For 16 years he had sought gold in many parts of the world without success. His funds run low and he was put off a train near Kirkland Lake, in Northern Ontario, Canada, because he could not pay his fare.

He met a Chinese store-keeper who convinced him that gold could be found right there. Staked by his mother, Sir Harry tried again, and came upon the vein which now is the Lake Shore mine, second largest in the world.

Picton and District

Bert Pearsall Liberal Nominee In Prince Edward

Picton, July 9. (Special) — The Liberal standard was unfurled in Picton, when delegates from Prince Edward and Lennox Counties met in the Parish Hall on Wednesday evening, to nominate a candidate for the forthcoming provincial election.

Mr. Bert Pearsall, drover, of Prince Edward, was nominated by Dr. Wilmot of Napanee. The nomination was seconded by Thos. Jones of Picton and met with the approval of the delegates.

In thanking the delegates Mr. Pearsall stated that he would be proud to be associated with a leader like Harry Nixon, who works for the common people. In the post-war program Mr. Pearsall said he would like to be the one to see that Prince Edward does not get its share of any appropriation.

D. R. Roblin, chairman of the meeting, described the candidate as a man of sound business integrity, "we want more business men and farmers in our parliaments", said Dr. Roblin. He condemned the proposed plan of Col. Drew to tell Canadian farmers what they should grow.

Jas. de St. Remy, Liberal Candidate of Kingston, for many years in Western Ontario, thought that farming, Canada's leading industry, deserved money to go ahead. "Mr. Nixon", he said, "would see that farmers had money for necessary equipment. He referred to the Bracken government that he said ruined the financial standing of Alberta, whose bonds now sold at 54.

Condemns Criticism

W. L. Thompson, K. C. of Toronto, long associated with the Milk Control Board was the final speaker. He condemned Col. Drew's part of doing nothing, but criticising a great deal, and cited his fulsome praise of Ben gun and the Hong Kong episode. He declared that farmers must receive from this war affluent it there is to be any money for post-war work. He condemned the compulsory rail-grading of hogs and thought farmers should sell their hogs as they saw fit, only the packers profited by rail-grading. He proposed that co-operative packing, financed by government subsidies, would follow if rail-grading of hogs was not discontinued. A veteran of the last war, Mr. Thomp. son recommended voting by proxy, where if a boy overseas, does not know the issues at stake, he can leave it to his father or proxy to vote for him.

'Voice of Doom' to the Axis

The staggering might of the United Nations war production spells the doom of the aggressor nations and the Nazis and the Jap warlords if they are not completely insane will see it. So said Donald Nelson, head of the United States War Production Board in a speech at Toronto.

What is the record as Mr. Nelson gave it for the United States and Canada alone?

115,000 airplanes manufactured by the N. American nations since the war began.

Airplanes to be produced by the end of the year at the rate of one warplane every four and two-third minutes of the day around the clock.

More than 175,000 large calibre guns of all kinds for ground armies.

About 1,500,000 machine guns.

6,000,000 rifles and sub-machine guns besides ammunition for naval guns.

25,000,000,000 rounds of ammunition (small arms) enough to fire over 1,500 bullets at every soldier in the Axis armies.

60,000 tanks and tank chassis.

1,600,000 trucks.

70,000 scout cars, armored cars and like combat vehicles.

20,000,000 deadweight tons of shipping produced with production at the rate of 22,000,000 tons a year.

2,000,000 deadweight tons of naval craft outside of Mosquito craft and auxiliaries produced with 200,000 tons added each month.

These are the thunderbolts of figures and wrath in implements of war the aroused democratic world is hurling at by bandit, burglar nations of the Axis.

These figures which do not lie. They tell the truth, a truth so vital and so staggering that many people cannot comprehend them for their very size. But the enemy that is the evil and has been caught at evil deeds and is headed for disaster and dire punishment because of crimes against the safety and security of the world's civilization, realizes. Germany realizes it in the Ruhr and elsewhere.

In his speech at Toronto Mr. Nelson added that the schedules of this year and next "will tax us to the outcome." That makes clear to everyone the doom for which the enemy nations are headed.

These United Nations are saying that Hitler pretended to scorn as effete and weakened by the ways of democracy. Allied industrial power has flung the lie into the teeth of Hitler, Mussolini and Tojo.

What are Allied weapons and manpower doing now? German war industrial cities are crumbling. The Ruhr is being stripped of everything that can be moved, according to Mr. Dingle Foot, speaking in the British Commons on Thursday because "they themselves know that the Battle of the Ruhr is lost."

Contrast with the figures given by Mr. Nelson the situation in Germany, desperate efforts are made by Germans to build up the steel output of France, Luxembourg and Belgium since German production is forced to move to more remote districts. Spain, the Axis has to get as far as 30,000 tons of rubber, 5,000 tons of tin, 15,000 tons of edible oils. Since the occupation of North Africa the Axis have lost 700,000 tons of shipping, by sinking and 300,000 tons has been severely damaged.

This is the way the doom of Germany is approaching through the gathering might of weapons and men of the United Powers of democracy.

Sir Harry Oakes

A figure long linked with the mining of Canada died yesterday at Nassau, Sir Harry Oakes, Native of the United States he had trekked across the world as a young prospector in search of gold, to the Yukon in 1898, Alaska, the Philippines, Australia, New Zealand and the United States and then he found it in Ontario. Coming in 1911 into Northern Ontario he discovered in the year 1912 in Teck Township what is now the great Lake Shore gold mine and also staked the Tough Oakes mine in the same Kirkland Lake area.

He was reputed to be the only prospector in Canadian mining who staked a property, financed it and brought it through to production and to the stage of paying dividends.

It is an odd coincidence that Alexander (Sandy) McIntyre who had staked the rich McIntyre gold mine in the Timmins area just twwo years before Oakes struck gold in Teck Township, died in Toronto the day before Sir Harry. McIntyre also discovered Teck-Hughes mine. But it had not been his destiny to become wealthy as Sir Harry did. Oakes went to the Bahamas in quest of health on account of a bronchial ailment.

He was elected a member of the House of Assembly in Bahamas in 1938 and next year was made by His Majesty the King a member of the Legislative Council.

Sir Harry who had lived in Niagara Falls, Ontario, for eighteen years until 1934 built and gave to that city the Oakes Garden Theatre which stands as a monument to his munificence as well as the site valued at $500,000 for the outdoor theatre and park facing the Falls.

Sir Harry was one of the men who was able through his prospecting to advance to the world's notice the riches of Canada in metals and minerals.

Small Craft in the War

(London Times)

As many of 10,000 small craft drawn from all parts of the country have been acquired by the Ministry of War Transport for various war purposes through requisitioning or otherwise.

Some 2,000 of the London swim barges have proved most adaptable craft for all sorts of uses. They are to be found doing duty on the East African coast, among other parts of the world. The delivery of many of the small craft to new stations overseas has been achieved by their crews of seamanship, their ferries, and even a floating crane, all designed for service in coastal waters at home, have made voyages of 12,000 miles round the Cape to the Middle East.

In order to avoid prowling enemy bombers these tiny vessels have had to cross 2,000 miles of the open Atlantic before proceeding down the west coast of Africa. They have suffered no casualties.

Khaki in 1848

(Letter in New York Herald Tribune)

With regard to Mr. Roger Eby's letter I beg to entitled "Others Copy. Our Uniforms" in which he states that the British in the South African war used khaki uniforms copying the example of the Americans, who he claims were the first to use khaki in the Spanish-American War of 1898, it may interest him to know that British forces on active service in India wore khaki uniforms as far back as 1848.

Khaki is derived from a Hindu word (khak) meaning dust. Some of the British troops had uniforms of khaki during the Indian Mutiny (1857-58), and thereafter drill of holland (generally called "khaki," whatever its color)" became the almost universal dress of British and native troops in Asia and Africa.

WISHFUL THINKING

Old Crankmire banged the table till the dishes jumped about
And he said: "It's wishful thinking, and we ought to cut it out!
It's a bitter war we're fighting and there's danger grave ahead.
Those Japs will be a hard battle, till the last of them is dead!
Every minute now is precious! for the war is far from won.
We must waste no time in boasting till the job on hand is done.

"Yes, I know the wheels are turning and production's on the rise,
But I also know in battle many a Yankee youngster dies.
And I know his dad and mother and his friends don't think it right
When they're told about it later and must read: 'The loss was slight!'
So I say don't sit there boasting of how soon the war will end.
It's not merely time you're wasting; it is Yankee lives you spend.

"Let us everyone remember all those battle posts are dear,
In the thick of vicious dangers night and day those youngsters are.
And although the skies are clearing, still the clouds obscure the sun
And this war will not be over till the final battle's won.
So let's all get down to business, let us give our boys the stuff
Till the Nazis and the Japsies with their hands up cry, 'Enough!'" lost 117 aircraft yesterday.)

Despite the fact that the Kursk offensive to pinch off the Kursk bulge by drives from the north and the south, the situation of the defending Russian forces was regarded here as distinctly encouraging.

The communique gave high praise to the Red Army men and commanders, declaring they "were displaying supreme steadfastness and staunchness."

Some of the day's fiercest fighting developed during the hills of one narrow section of the Orel-Kursk front. There German tank and three infantry divisions beat against the Soviet positions in three consecutive attacks, the Russians announced. Each of the attacks was stood them all and killed some 2,000 of the attacking force of approximately 9,000 men.

The communique acknowledged indirectly for the first time that the Germans had made some gains along the northern section of the line. "By counter-attacks our troops dislodged the enemy from various places which he took on the first day of the offensive," the war bulletin said.

Added Heavy Losses

The German gain in the Belgorod sector, the fourth reported by the Russians in many days, was attained only after day-long fighting in which Soviet troops inflicted heavy losses and hurled back enemy assault columns on several occasions.

By the end of the day a group of German tanks succeeded in driving a wedge into our defences," the communique said.

(German propaganda accounts from Berlin told of "some local new weapons" in use in these great battles. One was a "powerful artillery weapon whose fire was directed by radio," and another was a rocket. A "Super Tiger" tank, superior to the 56-ton Mark VI, also was said to be in action. Russian accounts made no mention of any such weapons.)

Great Air Battles

Great air battles raged along and behind the front. The Russian communique said Soviet bombers "scored heavy losses to the enemy" in attacks Wednesday night on "troops trains, tanks and trucks.

Red Army forces have destroyed many enemy tanks, the communique announced, by the technique of allowing them to pass through the front, then closing up the gap with infantry who artillery and anti-tank guns blast the tanks.

"Under the blows," the communique said, "the German troops are suffering enormous losses in man power and equipment. Hundreds of disabled and burned out enemy tanks are left on the battlefield as well as many smashed trucks and German planes."

DREW ANNOUNCES

Called Important Election

Speaking over an Ontario-wide radio network, Mr. Drew referred to the Aug. 4 election as the most important election in Ontario since Canada became a nation.

"The government you choose is almost certain to be responsible for enacting the transcendent legislation which will arise during the period of readjustment immediately after the war," said Mr. Drew. "The ballot you will not be determining so much the fate of the government, or of any political party, but rather you will be in part, and responsible, joining the fate of those whose personal sacrifices have made for us the right to live as free people. Neither personal friendships nor old political associations will be counted against that all-important fact."

The public utilities, such as the Hydro Electric Power Commission "will be permitted to continue to contribute," that hydro rates will be reduced "as fast and as far as conditions and the service charges in rural areas will be done away with.

"Power," Col. Drew said, "will be extended to the farms in the satisfaction of the fact that food production was of the most essential to our success than the military effort."

Sweeping Revision Promised

"A sweeping revision of our whole system of real estate taxation" was promised, designed to "bring about a more equitable and progressive taxation" from home owners to "industrial enterprises." The first step will be the assumption by the province of the cost of the high school fizzes now charged against the rates.

Modernization of Ontario's educational system "so that every child will have an opportunity to be educated to the full extent of his capacities" was another feature in the program. So, too, were measures "to safeguard the health of our people" including "the establishment by boards representing labor, veterans' organizations and the community of health centres."

Col. Drew said the basis for the sweeping war that he asked that "under a strong government the full productive and industrial capacity of this province can assure employment and give wages for all who will work and security for those who by reason of sickness unable to work because of sickness, unemployment, physical disability or old age."

Supply Depot Fired

Above New Georgia on Kolombangara, Allied warplanes fired the depot at Vila was fired and holed by 20 bombs and the docks loaded by dive bombers and torpedo bombers.

On northern New Guinea, where Australian and American troops are driving up the coast army air base of Salamaua, the Allied planes continued to virtually isolate the town by night raids with their bombs. Medium bombers Medium bombers and fighter escorts fighters yesterday by dropping 10 tons of high explosives and fragments on enemy buildings, ground installations which caused many secting villages near Salamaua.

Other Fronts Quiet

Other formations bombed and strafed Japanese while Australian and American troops continued mopping up enemy units between Mubo and Salamaua, Gen. MacArthur's report said.

Australian and American-manned Kittyhawks destroyed eight of 14 Zeros, destroying three for certain and probably another five, when they bombed the enemy aboredrome at Penfoei in Dutch Timor. Fires statelled appeared to be burning Japanese planes. There is in the Timor area 400 miles northwest of Darwin, Australia.

Japanese bombers yesterday were the weakest reported since the beginning of the Pacific offensive June 30.

Bombers Attack Fails

In the Central Solomons on Rendova Island, Japanese bombers dropped two bombs on Allied artillery emplacements which caused only slight damage and casualties. Twenty Japanese troops tried to surprise Rendova defenders with a landing from a barge on Dugiri Island but the Japanese were driven off by alert patrols.

(The Navy Department in Washington announced a new Japanese shipping in the Pacific, saying the Navy had established that United States submarines had sank an additional 19 enemy transports and supply ships.

(The Tokyo newspaper Asahi was quoted in a Berlin broadcast yesterday as saying the Allies were pushing forward in the Solomons and were "carrying the fight to New Guinea." The newspaper urged the Japanese people to unite in support of the "hard fighting on the fronts".)

Washington, July 9 — (CP) — You see him hustling down corridors of the capitol, slipping into the offices of Senators and Congressmen, talking in low tones, sitting on the same themes: "One fourth term, no fourth term."

It is Jim Farley, the man who ran Franklin D. Roosevelt's presidential campaigns in 1932 and 1936 and who failed by the President "My strong right arm."

Farley, now a business executive in New York, broke with the President in 1940 over a third term, broke vehemently and completely because he believed the future of the White House are enough for any man. For months he has been the central figure in a man who is a mission, talking, organizing, canvassing and lobbying.

Farley beat his old friend, the ex-ruler, last November on the choice of a Democratic candidate for the New York governorship. He's out to beat him in 1944 if Roosevelt runs again for the presidency. Farley might be a candidate himself, for the Democratic nomination.

Friendship between them is a thing of the past, despite the efforts of mutual friends and political agents.

Nelson is Cunningham

When plans were being discussed here for the establishment of the services in the North African campaign, traditionalists in the British Navy objected to the Mediterranean head being given to anyone but a seaman, and an American at that, Gen. Dwight Eisenhower. They said it would be down in the log that days of King Alfred, there was no precedent for it and, therefore, it should never be a success.

Finally, in the midst of a protracted debate on the subject, one of the main objectors interposed:

"Why, Nelson would turn over in his grave if he knew what is being discussed."

"Isn't it about time he did?" asked someone down the table, with a quiet but firm voice.

The suggestion proved irreverent to a traditionalist of the British Navy clinched the argument by its implication that time did not stand still after the Napoleonic wars. Mr. Churchill then was placed under the command of the American general and, due almost entirely to the personalities and fighting nature of Eisenhower, the naval attack of the Fleet Sir Andrew Cunningham, British Mediterranean fleet commander, the experiment has been a resounding success.

ADMIRABLE CRICHTON

A person of unusual or precocious attainments is sometimes called an admirable Crichton.

This is an allusion to James Crichton, commonly known as the admirable Crichton, a Scottish intellectual prodigy who lived in the 1560's.

Crichton, also spelled Crighton, is pronounced "KRY-tun."

At the age of 14, James Crichton had taken the degree of Master of Arts, and before he was 20 he was said to have mastered the learning of 10 languages and numerous sciences.

He was also renowned for the skill with which he fought.

As the result of a quarrel with his father, who had become a Protestant, Crichton went to France. According to one story, he debated in 12 languages at a Paris and won an easy victory over the entire faculty of the Sorbonne.

After that he spent a couple of years campaigning with the French army. Everywhere he became known for his beauty of person, his skill at fencing and his intellectual accomplishments.

He visited Rome, Venice and senate at Venice with his eloquence and oratorical grace.

In Italy, too, he was appointed tutor to Vincenzo Gonzaga, heir to the dukedom. There he distinguished himself as a swordsman by killing a professional duelist who had challenged and killed many of the best fencers in Italy.

But his brilliance made other men envious, and the young duke's favorites supplanted the prince in the affections of his mistress. But on July 3, 1582 when he was not yet only about 22 years old, he was attacked by the streets at Mantua by three masked men. The Admirable fought so well that the leader of the party was forced to unmask to save his life. It was no other than Gonzaga himself!

The next day on his knees and apologized to his pupil, at the same time handing him his sword. But his ungrateful pupil immediately ran him through with it.

It takes 1,250 class hours, 250 hours of examinations and 2,500 miles of study to fill in one year—to learn the Japanese language as taught by the United States Army at the University of Colorado. It's the most intensive course ever given 12 months by the simple expedient of using a 12-hour study day.

"Ten men, carefully selected for the course, actually spend more than 12 hours a day in class and study halls than they do in eating, sleeping and relaxation.

Gimlet of Locusts

One way in which the Allies are building a substantial amount of shipping is by declaring war on the locust.

The more Allied armies in the Mediterranean basin and the Middle East are engaged in the task of producted food and fodder, the more shipping space can be devoted to military supplies and reinforcements. The threat of locusts in these areas has led to vigorous and elaborate measures to control them on a front extending from Persia, and Arabia to Northern Rhodesia, Abyssinia and the Belgian Congo.

Lucidity

Examples of the barbed wit that led Clare Boothe Luce to a successful career as a playwright and to the threshold of duplicating it in politics:—

"New Deal statisticians who draw the admirably precise lines from unwarranted assumptions to forgone conclusions."

New Deal coordinators "who have achieved unanimity at chaos out of regimented confusion."

A Thin Volume

The summer social register for 1943, black and red bound directory of the elite of the United States, will be a thin one, with only two-thirds the size of previous issues.

The editors, faced with paper restrictions, have had to reduce the number of ways. One was to omit listing personally-owned yachts — anybody who can operate these days, anyway.

Handshake

When Franklin Roosevelt was at Hyde Park with President Roosevelt, a group of boys from the army put on a play for them. Afterwards, before he was introduced to the President, they were warned not to squeeze his hand as his arthritis made shaking it to do his energy should be conserved.

After the President had shaken hands, the first five limp hands he had met, he asked: "What's the matter with you soldiers. Doesn't the army feed you enough?"

Insects Invading Gardens Require Control

Drawing and Text by Dominion Department of Agriculture

The success of Victory gardens throughout the country this year will depend, to a great extent, in controlling the insects which annually invade the gardens.

The Colorado potato beetle is a yellow and black-striped insect which appears on the potato vines. The female lays clusters of yellowish eggs, chiefly on the under surfaces of the leaves. The early destruction of these, helps greatly in reducing the infestation. The young of this beetle are small, red-dish to clay-coloured grubs which have a wetting or slimy appearance.

When the grubs are first noticed on the plants, dusting or spraying should be commenced. Calcium arsenate should be used for this purpose, by making a preliminary mix one part of the poison in 8-10 parts of hydrated lime or finely sifted flour. The plants should be covered thoroughly and the dusting repeated at 10-day intervals.

For spraying mix one-half pound of calcium arsenate in ten gallons of water, or preferably bordeaux mixture. Bordeaux is advised since this controls fungus diseases which usually attack potatoes. This is made by dissolving one pound of copper sulphate in ten gallons of water and then mixing in one pound of hydrated lime. However, should the poison be mixed with water only add one-half pound of hydrated lime to prevent burning of foliage. The first application of dust or spray should be made as soon as the young grubs are noticed on the vines.

Weekly Tips For Meat Rationing

The toasted loaf is a new and attractive way of serving left-over meat. It's a ration-wise way too, for a very little meat will go round if it is stretched by the addition of vegetables and gravy or sauce.

To make the bread case, remove the crust from a loaf of bread and cut a slice three-fourths inch thick from the top of the loaf. Use scissors to remove the centre of the loaf, leaving a case three-fourths inch thick. Crumble the bread taken from the centre of the loaf, add left-over ground meat and cooked vegetables if desired. Season well, moisten with left over gravy, white sauce, canned tomatoes or tomato sauce and pack the mixture into the bread case. Replace the slice cut from the top and brush sides and top of the loaf with melted shortening. Bake in a moderately hot oven, 375F until the loaf is crisp and browned, about 35 minutes. Serve with brown gravy or tomato sauce.

Comes Up With 14-Inning Shutout Against the Cincinnati Reds

FIRST WIN OF YEAR

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

For years baseball's mountain of youth has reposed in Yankee Stadium and joining the perennial American League champions has made almost any ordinary ball player look a star, at least temporarily.

Now Philadelphia Phillies have set up a rival clinic in rejuvenation that is producing just as spectacular results.

Schoolboy Rowe, 35 Johnson, Bebe Dahlgren, and other veterans have responded to the treatment of Dr. Stanley Raymond Harris this season and Lewis Wilson Riggs is latest to take the cure successfully is Edward (Lewpie) Barrett.

This 36-year-old righthanded pitcher who was cut loose a few days ago by Chicago Cubs after losing four games without winning one, came up yesterday with a 14-inning shutout against Cincinnati Reds to win a gruelling 1-0 battle for the Phillies after they had been battered 15-5 and 4-3 in the first two games of a doubleheader.

Considering that it came from a stumpy old-timer who had failed to make the grade not only with the Cubs this year, but previously with the Athletics, Braves and Reds, the performance was flashy enough to share attention with Cincinnati's board in deep left centre scoring Walt Judnich from first with the winning run.

Jim Bagwell also twirled a three-hitter for the first place Toronto Maple Leafs, who had the misfortune of all three coming in the third inning and losing to Buffalo, 4-0. The Bisons got all their runs in the one inning, the seventh, and the three scores on Jersky's 13th circuit swat with two on.

Sparked by shortstop Don Lang, Newark Bears won their third straight game by beating Baltimore, 6-3. Savage drove in three runs with his 20th homer with none out in the second and Lang tripled with the bases full and sixth. He then scored the winning run on pitcher Jesse Roof's singled him home.

Red Bartleson, Syracuse right hander, turned in a four-hitter in beating Jersey City, 6-3, for the fourth time this season. His teammates helped him with a 14-hit attack off Bobby Doran and Bobby Wells.

HOOPER PITCHES THREE-HITTER BUT LOSES TO BISONS

Toronto Hurler Unfortunate — Buffalo Scores All Runs in One Frame

ROCHESTER SPLITS

By the Associated Press
Bill Webb, the Atlanta boy whose first major league pitch for Philadelphia Phillies was hit for a homer by pitcher Mort Cooper of St. Louis Cardinals, popped up with a three-hit shutout in the International League last night.

Webb, sent down by the Phillies for seasoning, worked in masterful fashion for Al Simmons' Syracuse Chiefs as even again with Rochester in a doubleheader. The Red Wings took the opener, 4-0, on Ekri Naylor's triple with two out in the eighth and were blanked, 9-0, as two Rochester hurlers were pounded for 13 hits.

An inside-the-park homer by Rochester's Al Schoendienst, the league's leading hitter, kept the Royals from taking both ends of the twin bill. It came in the seventh and tied the score at 3-3. In the extra inning Naylor socked a long drive to the scoreboard in deep left centre scoring Walt Judnich from first with the winning run.

Jim Bagwell also twirled a three-hitter for the first place Toronto Maple Leafs, who had the misfortune of all three coming in the third inning and losing to Buffalo, 4-0. The Bisons got all their runs in the one inning, the seventh, and the three scores on Jersky's 13th circuit swat with two on.

AIRMEN SCORE 3 IN NINTH TO BEAT FOUNDRIES

I.T.S. Squad Always Behind Until Winning Rallies in Eighth and Ninth

1st PLAYOFF GAME

Scoring six runs in the last two innings, the No. 5 I. T. S. "Flyers" snatched a belated 9 to 8 victory from the Belleville Juniors in the first play-off game in the Belleville City Softball League at the Fair Ground last evening.

Skipper Jack Willing's Foundry lads moved into a commanding lead by scoring six runs in the fourth frame after Coach Archie Green's Flyers had amassed a brace of counters in the opening stanzas. Although the Flyers rallied in the eighth to score three and knot the count at six-all, the batting Foundry boys went at it again and scored two more in the top half of the ninth and seemed headed well for victory as the Airmen strode to bat in the last half of the ninth.

Kerr opened the ninth for Sullman's double, but the latter was forced out at second. Gignac hit for one base and Wilson whiffed for another to fill the bases. Then out the Flyers back into the running with a double scoring Gignac and Wilson, while Kerr crossed the scoring counter on a long drive to centre field by Fred Waite.

Freddie Waite hurled for the victorious Foundry Kurylyk pitched for the Flyers. The Foundries outhit the Flyers 15 to 10, but failed to capitalize on their possibilities. Kurylyk had his opponents in the losers many chances to score, Green with two doubles and a single, while Sullman, Wilson and Kurylyk helped his own cause with a double and two base knocks, while Eagley accounted for three safe hits, two of the extra base nature. For the Foundries Hap Day with two hits led the way, while Jack Callaghan got two safeties, and Fred Waite got one safe hits. Fred Waite helped his cause with three bingles and Jack Callaghan the game's sensational running catch, got a brace of hits.

Waite struck out three and walked two, while Kurylyk whiffed five and gave up but one base on balls. The Belleville Airmen Army and Navy tangle in another play-off game.

Toronto, July 9 — (CP)—Windsor softball hurlers are trying to beat the price ceiling — asking an Imperial Oil team fare from $3 to $12.50. Maybe they figure that if fans pay more now for the pop bottles they throw, the umpires should get more for stopping them....when Mrs. D. C. Coleman's colt, Western Prince, won the Canadian Derby at Winnipeg, it brought his total winnings to $8,295 — pretty fair for a $1,000 original investment. Trainer Coleman's brought a reward of $300 each to trainer Duke Campbell and jockey Gus Dye.

In Memory:

Fit. Lt. Harold (Ike) Buston, D.F.C., missing after R.C.A.F. operations overseas, was one of the youngest rugby football players ever developed in Edmonton. Buston was a star halfback with Edmonton Eskimos, even missing the Grey Cup imported American stars playing in the Western Union in his day ... Also missing with the R.C.A.F. overseas is Po. Joe Addison, one of British Columbia's outstanding track stars, Joe was a Canadian quarter-miller at the 1936 Empire Games.

Incidentally:

Bobby Hampton, veteran Winnipeg centre forward, scored in six goals as United Weston beat Army 9-1 in a Manitoba victory soccer league game....Sub-Lt. GOLFERS GETTING MORE DISTANCE WITH DEAD BALL

Repercussed Balls Have More Drive Than Old Good Ones

ANDERSON FAILS

(By The Canadian Press)

The balata ball that baseball men claim to deaden it by some tests driving the golfer more distance this summer on his booming drives.

This was on the authority today of Jimmy Demaret, Detroit pro, whose balls have changed doubting duffers into cheerful contributors of old gold balls into the repercussing bingo.

Before club members at his Plum Hollow course Demaret stepped to the tee with half a dozen balls, three from the pro shop shelves and three repercussed ones. His longest drive of 321 yards was with an old pellet. The repercussed ball averaged 285 to 290 yards.

A few days later Demaret repeated his experiment and got the same results, Demaret explained:

"Pre-war golf balls, if you can find them, have a heavy core," Demaret explained, "while the balata cover on the repercussed balls adds a lot of distance. I've been playing with the ones all year and, boy, do they carry."

A father-and-son act has been featured in the Port Erie municipal baseball league this season. Ehy Hanover, a member of the concession staff at the border point, had been playing second base for the Maple Leaf Mornarn team but was succeeded at the sack by his son, Ehy Jr. The latter has graduated in the Royal Canadian Artillery and now Dad Hanover is hoping to reunite his place in the lineup.

Arne Anderson, Sweden's up-and-coming track speedster, has failed to do it again. Last week he was beaten by Gundar Haugy and but, yesterday at Stockholm in the presence of 30,000 Anderson was left in short by three seconds of equalling the young's record of 2:46.8 for the 1,- 100-metre run held by Gunder Haugy. Anderson said the track was too heavy.

The Ferndale rink skipped by J. H. Simon won $50 in the O.R.A. final at Hamilton last night, the opponents being another Toronto boar base running that perhaps cost them the game. The $3,000 Harrisman Cup trot for two-year-olds was won by Dan's Boy, an outsider steered by Wayne Smart.

...WON'T STAY DOWN By Jack Sords

CASUAL COMMENT by R.J.C.

Some Joke

An Englishman and a Yankee were walking from Coal Point to Winnipeg and on their way they came to where a road branched off and at the end of the trail there was a sign telling which road to take to reach the city and it also said that anybody that cannot read should enquire at the farm house at the other side of the road. The Yankee laughed but the Englishman only looked hard at the sign and said nothing about it. However, when they reached the city he started to laugh and the Yankee asked him what he was laughing about.

Between bursts of laughter the Englishman managed to gasp, "I say, what if the farm folks should be deaf?"

A close fit.

Arch Green's No. 5 ITS. "Flyers" drew first blood in the City Softball League playdowns, but it wasn't before Jack Willing's Belleville Foundry lads loosed more than a dozen blue the Airmen's camp. As a matter of fact the Flyers were well down for over seven innings and had to score six runs in the last two frames to eke out a 9 to 8 win. The Foundries out-hit the Airmen 15 to 10 nine, but were guilty of more base running that perhaps cost them the game. The opponent were two-bags, the Foundry lads showed little or no respect for the heaves of Kurylyk and twice were caught napping when they scored six runs in the fourth and lap the seventh as they were also in the bottom half of the ninth. Webb, the Foundries centre fielder, pulled the feature play of the game, a running catch at the close of the fifth inning. Freddie Waite hurled for the losers, while Kurylyk went the route for the Flyers. The Foundries outhit the Airmen. It last night's game is any criterion as to the City softball league playdowns in Belleville then the fans are in for some stirring games and maybe the odd surprise.

A fair warning.

Secretary T. Schwab of the Belleville city softball league, in addition, revealed some startling information. He stated that the league is only one team in our league that has handed in a complete roster list of players signed on O.A.S.A. certificates?" he reported. Secretary Schwab's hands on or before July 15th are put plainly out of luck and without excuses or alibi.

A little food for thought — "if certain clubs in the City Softball realm are anxious to obtain a title in the Industrial series of the O.A.S.A. for subsequent competition, their application should be made in the very near future. Frankly on or before July 15th."

Kingston ball pays off.

Kingston will enter a team in the National Sandlot Baseball Congress, says Scribe Bill Mahlin. Incidentally George Knotty Lee is the Congress commissioner for Eastern Ontario, Knotty now being in the hotel business in Smiths Falls. However, it seems now that Kingston is the only community in Eastern Ontario either interested or in a position to compete in the Sandlot competition and they may have to journey to Toronto for the Eastern Canada finals the first week in August.

Two years ago baseball was a lo-

ing proposition in Kingston, but some of the wiser heads in the Limestone City fortunately realizing the seriousness of the situation and appreciating the meaning of the years. Today this effort is paying great dividends, if for no other reason than they have a successful baseball league functioning and are in a position today whereby they can compete in the strongest semi-baseball program in the country—namely the National Sandlot Baseball Congress. The maudlin winner, and it could be Kingston this year, then play-off in a more series at Detroit with all expenses paid.

Hal Paschett, of the San Diego Padres in the Pacific Coast League, tried a new base-running stunt in a recent night game, but not only scored a run, but gained the headlines the next morning.

Paschett was tiring in the ninth inning with one out when Bill Schuster lofted a towering fly to Bill Mathesen. Hal dropped about eight feet back of the bag and went into motion just as the ball was descending into the fielder's mitt. Fielder's hands.

Tagged out of the customary standing start from third, following the capture of a fly ball, Paschett was out when he tagged up, simultaneous with the catch, and scampered home before the throw, though the drive was not particularly deep.

Remember when—

The National League all-stars scored the first shutout victory in eight runs of all-star baseball competition with a 3-0 victory over the American League stars three years ago today. It was their third win and the five senior loop hurlers who blanked the junior American's to only three stingy hits.

New leaders now.

It was a tight squeeze, but a grand feeling for Tommy Golden's SWACO lassies the other night when they shut out a 9 to 0 win over Bill Davis' Bristol gals. In winning the SWACO girls moved into the top slot position, pushing the Bristol lassies into second place. With three hits the other night Lela Nelson has moved to just about leading hitter in girls' softball circles hereabouts.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 111

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

To jump or not to jump. That is the question. Whether it is better to jump or not in the first response, that decision confronts partner of the opener in every bridge deal.

We have been talking about jumps, study and in bunches, for days. Let's corral them into one rule. The better to complete them, my dears.

In answer to an opening bid of one in a suit, a one-jump response is a forcing-to-game signal. With what the opener shows, the one-jump responder promises tricks enough to make a game.

How many tricks the one-jumper shows in his hand depends on what the jump is in. And if the one-jump is at the first opportunity, it also shows two sure tricks in that hand.

With that much of a reminder, we are ready to gather the one-jump showings into one sector. It makes up rule number 3o in Horse Sense Bridge.

That rule reads: In answer to an opening bid of one in a suit, an immediate one-jump response shows two sure tricks with (1) six tricks, if a takeout; (2) six tricks, if an assist in a minor suit; (3) five tricks, if an assist in a major suit; (4) four high cards, if in notrump (or five high cards without two sure tricks.)

Your partner starts with an opening bid of one diamond and you have this hand:

♠ A Q 9 8 3 2
♥ 9 6 2
♦ K 3 4 2
♣ 3

You have enough for an immediate one-jump response in either a takeout or assist or no-trump. There are enough tricks and sure tricks and other essentials.

Bid, follow the order of preference in T-A-N; takeout, assist, notrump. So, your first choice should be a takeout. Your immediate response should be two spades, a one-jump takeout.

That tells your partner you have a biddable spade suit, six tricks, two sure tricks. Later, if necessary you can tell him other things about your hand.

I hope that does not give you the jumps.

Three Injured In Car Collision Near Steenburg

Bancroft.—July 9 (Special) Thrown out of control when it crashed into another auto coming from a sideroad at the Steenburg intersection on Highway 62, an American car Thursday evening rolled a distance of 270 feet, injuring its three occupants.

Driver of the American car, Carleton Davis of Pennsylvania, was thrown from the almost completely wrecked car when the latter, a waterfilled ditch on his head and shoulders while the another two occupants, Lily Vardy and May Mills of Coe Hill were severely shaken up, the latter sustaining a broken collarbone. All three are in Bancroft hospital.

William Embury and Max Rawson were driving in a light car from Murphy's Corners to the Faulkner Highway and stopping at the intersection to ascertain if the road was clear and proceeding onto the highway. Just as they emerged onto the road their car was struck by the American auto travelling at a fast rate of speed.

The two men in the light car were shot injured and rendered assistance to the occupants of the other machine, which was practically wrecked, including the four tires which were torn from the wheels. Davis was found in an unconscious condition in the wate filled ditch but examination at the hospital failed to reveal broken bones.

Dr. S. R. Lumb of Bancroft attended the injured and Constable Constable S. W. Palmateer Investigated the accident. Damage estimate will be laid, it was stated by police.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was reading his paper and ma was reading hers, saying, Some of these Victory Recipes for economy sound pretty good, really uncanny, they're so ingenious.

They're not always all right, I'll string along with you to that extent, pop said, and as for that one on called Tomato Supreme a la General De Gaul.

If you've read it to yourself maybe that's enough publicity for the pop said, and ma said, I'll read it to you.

Which she started to, saying, First hollow out the 3 half tomatoes left over from yesterday's Omelette a la Admiral Nimitz. Cut into fine pieces the useful end of celery remaining from Wednesday's Vegetable Stew a la Marshall Stalin and the carrot ends that garnished the Spring Hallandaise Salad. If a few grains of parsely are handy add these, as well as the crumbs of fried bacon carefully saved from breakfast. Allow the mixture to simmer with its interior in the 3 hollow tomatoes for 40 minutes over an asbestos mat. Then pour the mixture into the tomato shells and either serve hot as an entree or cold as a salad with a light dusting of lettuce leaves.

A chap at the office was telling me about a concoction his wife fixed up. It sounded like quite a thing, pop said. You take a week's supply of potato peelings and after soaking them in leftover iced tea you store them overnight with a few grains of rice, the labels from 2 cans of mushrooms and the bottle from around a bunch of asparagus. If its whole thing is eaten while it's still boiling it's practically indistinguishable from a Hungarian goulash that's so piping hot you cant tell what you're eating, he said, and ma said, that William is that supposed to be funny?

Not at all. It's suppose to be French Potato Surprise a la Lick pop said.

New York, July 9 —(AP)—The Southern California Public Links golf Association is staging an ambitious program this summer with a war worker activities which functions through recreation directors of about 100 war plants, and a junior golf instruction program, which helps to look after the kids while parents have war jobs. . . . President Alfred H. Maser reports that the association's annals include such big-name players as Olin Dutra, Ralph Guldahl, Joe Novak, Harry Rassler and Stan Kertes, as well as hundreds of others in the junior work. . . . Ten courses around Los Angeles, Pasadena and Long Beach are holding classes and they plan to wing up the courses with a tournament.

Plenty of French.

Speaking of golf, Sgt. Joe Louis who is visiting here, reports that his current ambition is to reduce his handicap from six to scratch. . . . "I don't know whether I'll still have the old zing in the zing after the war," Joe confesses, "but I still have zing in that golf club."

One-Minute Sports Page.

As soon as he heard of St. Johnson's "resignation" from the National League catcher team, old Bobo Newsom phoned Ford Frick to set for the batting practice assignment. That would have made him the first player to make the all-star squads in both leagues, but the call was too late and Ace Adams already had been given the job. . . . Judge Landis' "old-time baseball," which calls for the old official guides, finally is off the press. At a glance it seems to contain everything.

"Air Raid Wardens"

Edgar Kennedy's famous "slow burn" takes on gigantic proportions when he runs afoul of Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy in a comic sequence of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Air Raid Wardens" now closing at the Belle Theatre. The comedians as air raid wardens, try to put out the lights in his house—and get a bowl of whipped cream into his face doing it. Then things happen—and how!

The picture, in which the comics create havoc in the ranks and blunder into hazardous gales during their capture a saboteur gang and Nazi spies, was directed by Edward Sedgwick. Players include Jacqueline White, new screen beauty, and Horace McMahon in the romantic lovers, and a group of rib-tickers that include Howard Freeman, Nella Walker, Donald Meek and Henry O'Neill.

"Secret Enemies" a spy story starring Nan Leslie and Ray Emerson is the companion feature offering.

"Mighty Niagara" is James Fitzpatrick travelaid in technicolor completes the program.

"China"

Alan Ladd, the smoothest tough guy it ins movie business, turns a blistering enemy on three fronts in Paramount's spectacular war romance, "China," which opens tonight at the Belle Theatre.

Ladd's co-star is the lovely Loretta Young, who recently at the behest of Mme. Chiang Kai-Shek, was decorated with the coveted Order of the Plum Bloom for her work on behalf of china relief, the main supporting player is William Bendix, who jumps to the face as a brawny, lovable Marine in "Wake Island." Incidentally, the director of "China" is John Farrow, the man who gave us "Wake Island" and the stirring "The Commandos Strike at Dawn."

Hailed as one of the most thrilling war films to come out of Hollywood, "China" is essentially a love story, played against a background of bsttle and high adventure in the war-torn Orient. Ladd and Bendix are cast as American oil men thrown by circumstance into the heroic struggle of the Chinese people against the Jap invaders of Mme Young, an American teacher, enlists their aid in evacuating Chinese girl students to safety in the face of a Japanese advance. There's plenty of excitement and suspense in that situation and, incidentally, Ladd puts up the greatest fight of his career. "China" is top flight entertainment. Don't Miss It!

The Belle news of the week's end is an outstanding issue of Technicolor short subjects including "Travo Mr. Smith," "Moments of Charm" and "Unusual Occupations" complete the program.

Performances on Saturday are continuous.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Springtime in the Rockies"

That Spring is the time and the Rockies the place for everything melodious, romantic and gay is the big message of "Springtime in the Rockies", the lively new 20th Century-Fox musical in enchanting Technicolor that opens at the Capitol theatre.

Bracing as a mountain breeze, it's the type of cinema diversionment that wraps itself around your heart and then won't let go. There is mile-high fun, when Betty Grable, Peggy Ryan and Donald O'Connor in Universal's carefree comedy musical "Mister Big," now at the McCarthy Lake with Jeff Russell in "King of the Cowboys."

Payne, combustible Carmen and Cesar Romero get their romantic signals mixed. And there is rhythm calculated to rock the Rockies themselves, when Harry James and His Music Makers set the melliflow melody the exhilarating splendor of Dorothy Lake in the role of a sirree, for the most part, as the flinch book. The idea of dance-conscious young America, James' trumpet virtuosity will register pleasantly on the more mature ear as well.

"The Trail Blazers"

In a gun-roaring round up of bandits "The Trail Blazers" with Ken Maynard and Hoot Gibson, are back again on the screen in "The Law Rides Again," the added western hit. Mayerick outdoor adventure drama also features Jack Mahan and Betty Miles.

Including the big double feature color cartoon will be shown as well as Zane Grey's "King of the Mounties."

AT THE McCARTHY

"Mister Big"

A new movie-star won the approval and applause of audiences yesterday at the McCarthy theatre, where Universal's comedy musical, "Mister Big" had its initial local showing. The star is young Donald O'Connor, singing, dancing, versatile juvenile who has attracted widespread attention with his amusing and likeable personality.

The new film he made to order for young Mr. O'Connor, and performs in a dozen different characterizations, each one a knock-out show in itself.

Gloria Jean and Peggy Ryan hold top-spots in the cast and with O'Connor form an extraordinary screen trio. The three present eight special items written by Buddy Pepper and Inez James.

"Mister Big" the story of a live-crazy gang of kids determined to sing and dance, but handicapped by a musical school of the theatre, is one of the brightest items in movie diversion to come from Hollywood in many seasons. Other prominent players in the fine cast are Robert Paige, Elyse Knox, Samuel S. Hinds and Bobby Scheerer.

Charles Previn directed the lively and important numbers are offered by the celebrated Ben Carter choir and Ray Eberle with Jimmie Miller's Bob Cats.

Singing highlight of the picture is Jean Heather's fascinating rendition of "Moonlight and Roses."

Charles Lamont directed "Mister Big." Ken Goldsmith was the associate producer and the screen play was authored by Jack Pollexfen and Dorothy Bennett from an original story by Virginia Rooks. Louis de Rochemont was the executive supervised the dancing sequences.

Big attraction is "King of the Cowboys" with Roy Rogers and Smiley Burnette heading a large cast.

2,000,000 BILLETTES

London, July 9 (CP)—Britain's housewives have made 2,000 for more than 2,000,000 "billetees"—evacuated children from the danger areas and transferred war workers. There has been "comparatively little compulsory billetting."

CHAPTER 6

Meegan saw Toby's tall, lean, stooped figure in the slightly hopeful manner of one who has something long awaited. Before she reached the house driveway. He was thinking with the old car that they hoped would last through the summer. Meegan frowned. If the car collapsed him, he would be stranded and she would not be able to continue her little business enterprise. Moreover, she would be entirely dependent upon her friends to take her to the mainland to buy food. The car simply had to hold together until after Labor Day.

Her frown disappeared and a look of hopelessness came to her face. At times the struggle was too much. Why couldn't they be graciously poor rather than unspectacularly hangers-on in a way of life that was gone for them? Her father had not foreseen this. He had thought that his family's way of life would continue undisturbed after his death. He had not known that certain of his securities would be found to be worthless, that taxes would increase, and dividends shrink and that his wife would listen to well-meaning friends and smooth-talking salesmen. He had not foreseen that his daughter would take a business course rather than junior college, that his home would be sold, the home in the suburbs and that his son would have a series of little jobs. Nor had he foreseen that when war was upon them his son could not serve because of an old football injury to his shoulder.

Meegan thought of Toby as two people, the high principled, clean-cut, moderate brother before her father's death and the secretive, bitter, indolent brother after her father's death. As children they had been close and Toby had been fiercely protective of his sister. Now Toby came and went with little or no explanation of his coming and going and his reputation with the boys was a zone too savory one. He drank too much and slept too little and his friends who had got him jobs exhausted both jobs and patience when he consistently lost the jobs he went to sleep at his desk, showed or no interest and was habitually late.

Granted that he did not face his responsibilities and that he loathed being poor, Bill Meegan defended him. She could not excuse him but she could understand him, because she loved him. Her mother had only sympathy and hope for him. Some day Toby would find himself and be a great success. Mrs. McLean thought of her son. Meanwhile she heard none of the stories of his drinking or of the cheap girls with whom he was seen. In his mother's eyes Toby could do no wrong and his jobs had been an unavoidable run of accidents and ability that she had shown no regret when he lost them. Meegan might wait as a stenographer at Hopkins to pay for the groceries but it was entirely fitting and proper that Toby have an income to recuperate from his operation, a perfectly simple operation with any complications. But that "some day" Mrs. McLean hopefully anticipated was not in the future at all. It was in the past that would never come back.

She came up to Toby. He was beaming. His light tan slacks, his sailcloth spotted by grease, it would not occur to him not to wear a fresh suit even when he knew he was going to loiter with men, spurted. Frank Black's tick dark hair, had tumbled over his forehead and a rose had whipped color in his cheeks. He looked completely disheveled, thoroughly disagreeable and very handsome.

"I can't make the damned thing go," he said.

"Oh you must, Toby."

"Would you like to try it? I'd like to kick the thing in the river. Oh, I'm fed up with it. I'm fed up with the whole business!"

So am I, she thought. Often. Why don't we face our issues and talk about them intelligently and do something about them? But we run around them and dance around and there.

She said, "Why don't you call it a garage? If they found the real trouble . . ."

"Do you know how much they'd charge to come down here?"

"But we have to get it fixed! I'll pay for it. I need the car for my two kindergarten class."

He looked up. "You're what?"

"I mean it. I'm going to take children swimming in the morning and afternoon. I'll collect four and the pay isn't bad."

He looked at her, just looked at her and then turning on his heels went toward the house without a word.

She found her mother in the kitchen shelling peas and spilling more on the floor than she put in the bowl. Mrs. McLean's gentle and soft spoken, was as out of place in the kitchen as a fragile vase would have been in an office and her children had come to expect burned meat and half-cooked vegetables from her efforts. Pretty, with her untidy waved brown hair parted in the centre and worn in a knot at the nape of her neck her expression invariably was that of a hostess pouring tea for a group of friends. It was as impossible for her to think inexpensively as it was for her trim feet to guide her anywhere except to the "best" stores and highest priced. Long ago Meegan had abandoned the budget talks and helped the bills herself by check each month, usually bleeding the bank in painful ordeal.

"Think, dear," her mother said. "Did you have a nice game with Bobby? Oh, dear, look at these things all over the floor. Isn't Toby telephoning?"

"I think he's calling the garage," Meegan said, pulling up a chair and helping with the shelling.

"Thank goodness, we're going to have the car fixed. But won't it be terribly expensive, dear?"

"Not terribly, I hope."

"I hope not, too, because we simply can't get anywhere without a car."

"Adele and I didn't play. She was upset about Clara's coming back."

"Oh, was she? I saw it, too," she said, obviously very pleased. When Clara had married Fayne Christopher a good many people, including her mother, had chosen to forget their former friendship of Clara and even Jerry's untimely death. Mrs. McLean went on, "Really, I think it's splendid to have such a distinguished couple on the island this summer. They've been entertained by royalty, you know. And I'm sure Jerry'll entertain quite a lot here and, of course, you and Toby will be invited. You are her oldest friends. You really should have a new dinner frock, dear. Try to manage it the next time you go to town."

"Have you made up the grocery list? I must go this afternoon. We didn't bring very much from town. I'll call Adele for her car until ours is fixed."

"Grocery list? Oh, dear no. But I'll do it immediately. The phone has been ringing all morning as though I hadn't read in the paper that Clara is coming back. I'm going to Helen's for bridge this afternoon. That's why I thought we'd have dinner about one and I wouldn't have to hurry about getting back to cook tonight. But of course if you'd rather . . ."

"It's fine with me and I'm sure Toby doesn't care."

"Now about the grocery list. Let me find a pencil. What do we need? I can't remember what we have. I mean I'm making the list but the moment you go I can think of a dozen things I haven't ordered. You will finish the peas, won't you, dear?"

Leaving the kitchen, she did not see Meegan's tightened face or the look of hopelessness creep over it followed by a funny little smile.

Swedish Paper Says Goering Improved Out of Danger

Stockholm, July 9 — (AP) — The Goerteborg newspaper Handels-Och-Sjoefartstidning said today reliable information from Berlin indicated that Goering, described last week as being very ill from a nervous breakdown and heart attack, now is out of danger.

Goering was said to have been under the care of two specialists as late as last Thursday night when his condition took a turn for the better. However, the newspaper quoted its information as saying, "Goering is not yet out of danger."

Because of the rumors regarding the condition of Goering, Hess's wife, Emmy, made her first public appearance in some time at the Buhlehen horse races on July 4, the newspaper said.

On the same day, July 4, the Nazi controlled Calais radio said that reports of Goering's illness were "completely false," as well as rumors that Himmler had had suffered a nervous breakdown.

Many Prisoners Volunteer to Work After Hrs. for War

Kingston, Ont., July 9 — (CP) — Dr. H. Allen, warden at Kingston Penitentiary, said today that the institution are so enthusiastic about the war work that many of them have volunteered to work after hours.

Since April, 1939, to April, 1943, he said in an interview, more than 171,000 articles of war work valued roughly at $126,000 have been completed by the prisoners. Dry materials involved in this work were worth $184,000, he said.

"A man's feeling for his country is not generally affected by a prison sentence and in prison the chief outlet for patriotism is the war work," the warden said.

Most of the work is done under the supervision of Chief Instructor Lloyd L. Walker and O. A. Burt. Among the articles made include swagger sticks for army officers, pipe racks, boards, camp beds, army bonnets, kitbags, duffle bags, uniforms and safety nets.

Activity of the Prices Board were discussed from many angles and the last hour was devoted to efforts of George Cruickshank (12B, Fraser Valley) to obtain a ceiling determined by co-operative milk interests in his riding might be allowed to fix their own prices to retailers.

Mr. Cruickshank was in conflict with several members as well as the Minister as to the powers the Board has been unable to get satisfaction from the Board. He said that the Fraser Valley milk wholesale co-operative should be allowed to fix prices to the distributing agencies, both of which were owned by the producers, he said he presented.

Mr. Ilsley said the order of the Prices Board fixed this price and, therefore, the Board was the proper point arising from the co-operative agreement. The Board had tried to get distributors concerned, he said on no exemption for them.

Mr. Cruickshank protested that the Board was ignoring the authority of milk interests in British Columbia, which had not tried in vain to get officials of the Board to discuss the agreement with them. question then on this point but that they were "afraid" to appear.

Mr. Ilsley said a suggestion from Clarence Gillis (C.C.F., Cape Breton Right) that a Canadian Commissioner be appointed to study the question would be considered.

Mr. Ilsley said he could not understand a point of view which assumed that because it was economical he could not be credited with a profit because it was a contribution to the war effort.

During the morning debate, agricultural matters were discussed and that wheat in the bin on a western farm "belonged to the whole people" kept the grain in good condition.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner's fact that, because of the present unsatisfactory conditions it had been impossible to move coarse grains from the lands rose in his new crop shortly to be harvested.

Waterhouse, a bomber station commander still acting as group captain, has led attacks on Emden, Bremen, Lorient, Cologne, Hamburg and St. Nazaire. His citation said he has displayed every personal consideration to the discharge of his duties and "proved himself to be a born leader."

6 Firemen Dead In Chicago Fire

Chicago, July 9—(AP)—Six firemen were killed and three others remained trapped under tons of debris today in a 4-11 fire that swept through a four-story office and factory building on the near North Side today.

Mrs. Ruth H. Powell has a special reason for wanting to own the new car she buys. Her husband, Lt.-Col. Thomas N. Powell Sr., and their son, Major Thomas N. Powell Jr., and Robert F. Powell, were taken prisoners of war in the fall of Corregidor. Mrs. Powell is working as matron at the Ira Ordnance plant in Macon, Georgia, where she could contribute to the winning of the war.

The blaze, which police said was started by a short circuit in a wall switch, destroyed the building's interior and caused $750,000 damage.

Giraud Pledges French Forces To Help Smash Japs

Washington, July 9—(AP)—Gen. Henri Honore Giraud, disclaiming any political ambitions, has pledged units to equip a French North African force of 250,000 men, pledged today that French forces will help fight the Japanese after defeat of the Axis powers in Europe.

Giraud told a room-full of correspondents, gathered in secretary of war Henry Stimson's conference chamber:

"I give you the following pledge:

"France will be at your side to liberate the Orient from Japanese domination, even as she is at your main with you to build a peace that will be just, lasting and also realistic."

Gen. Giraud spoke in French to the Press Conference. His avoided discussion of the political situation in North Africa, where he shares the chairmanship of the French Committee of National Liberation with Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

Raiders Drop Bombs On S.E. English Town, Others Headed Off

London, July 9 — (CP)—German raiders dropped high explosives on a town in southeast England and a southeast coast resort today while others gave London its first daylight alert since May 19.

The London-bound raiders were headed off after a few bombs had been dropped on the suburban area, the British reported.

Anti-aircraft guns were in action in two districts of the home counties surrounding London and planes were heard overhead, diving and climbing out of sight fleeting and then heading back toward the coast.

The London all-clear came 18 minutes after the warning. The alert was London's 69th of the war.

Acting Premier Of Poland Reported To Have Resigned

London, July 9—(CP) — Differences over future Polish policy have resulted in the resignation of Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, who has been acting premier of the Polish government in London pending reorganization of a cabinet, Reuter's Gen. Wladyslaw Sikorski, killed in an airplane accident at Gibraltar last Sunday.

Mikolajczyk was reported to have submitted his resignation yesterday after a discussion of the question as to who would succeed Sikorski as premier-in-chief of the Polish armed forces.

House Progresses On Estimates For Agriculture

Parliament Sitting 12 Hours Daily to Finish Session by End of July

LENGTHY DEBATES

By C. R. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Ottawa, July 9 (CP)—Going on a 12-hour day basis to clear up the seasonal business before the month-end, the House of Commons made good progress yesterday with agriculture estimates but for most of the sitting was beset from the Finance Minister Ilsley's $143,000,000 supplemental war expenditure by its current fiscal year.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner's non-war estimates were completed by yesterday's dinner hour and after the afternoon and evening periods were on one item in Mr. Ilsley's war appropriations. This item, for assistance to be paid by the Prices Board to producers of fats and oils, was still the ceiling.

Activity of the Prices Board were discussed from many angles and the last hour was devoted to efforts of George Cruickshank (12B, Fraser Valley) to obtain a ceiling determined by co-operative milk interests in his riding might be allowed to fix their own prices to retailers.

Mr. Cruickshank was in conflict with several members as well as the Minister as to the powers the Board has been unable to get satisfaction from the Board. He said that the Fraser Valley milk wholesale co-operative should be allowed to fix prices to the distributing agencies, both of which were owned by the producers, he said he presented.

Mr. Ilsley said the order of the Prices Board fixed this price and, therefore, the Board was the proper point arising from the co-operative agreement. The Board had tried to get distributors concerned, he said on no exemption for them.

Mr. Cruickshank protested that the Board was ignoring the authority of milk interests in British Columbia, which had not tried in vain to get officials of the Board to discuss the agreement with them. question then on this point but that they were "afraid" to appear.

Mr. Ilsley said a suggestion from Clarence Gillis (C.C.F., Cape Breton Right) that a Canadian Commissioner be appointed to study the question would be considered.

Mr. Ilsley said he could not understand a point of view which assumed that because it was economical he could not be credited with a profit because it was a contribution to the war effort.

During the morning debate, agricultural matters were discussed and that wheat in the bin on a western farm "belonged to the whole people" kept the grain in good condition.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner's fact that, because of the present unsatisfactory conditions it had been impossible to move coarse grains from the lands rose in his new crop shortly to be harvested.

LENGTHY DEBATES

Earlier Labor Minister Mitchell gave the House the names of 11 men who had resigned from the Selective Service after the resignation of Hon. Norman McL. Rogers, Selective Service director and the appointment of Hon. Humphrey Mitchell as his successor.

He was answering an inquiry made by Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative member for Peel.

Hon. R. B. Hanson (Prog. Con. York-Sunbury) said it was "not a mere coincidence" that the people should resign so shortly after Mr. Little left his office.

Mr. Mitchell said he had stated his reasons when Dr. Little left. Some were dissatisfied with new methods of administration under them, others returned to positions they had previously occupied and some had other reasons.

"I think there should be some measure of confidence between the people," said Mr. Mitchell.

"You must have people who understand the position in the civil service."

Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative member for Peel: Wasn't he (Mr. Little) just trying to weed out?

Mr. Mitchell: "If my honorable friend were in my position I would have to do the same thing. You can't just meet a man on the street and hire him. You have to use some judgment."

Trying to do Job Quickly

Mr. Graydon: "He was trying to do it quickly."

Mr. Mitchell: "We have seen many trying to do jobs quickly. I'll be in a difficult position today if I did not step in and say the job should be done quickly and must conform in some degree to government policy."

Mr. Mitchell said he was "not placing any blame," but a good many men were hired without consultation with anyone, and when it was necessary to keep the record straight they were gone over by the civil service commission.

Certain allowances had been dropped and certain classifications established.

"Some of these gentlemen, naturally did not agree with their classification, and they resigned," he continued. "The Labor Department has not, and has no jurisdiction in the matter. But that was done, from my point of view it had to be done.

WALL STREET

New York, July 9 (AP)—Specialized buying of rails and industrials continued as a prop for today's stock market and turned the list generally upward after considerably early rising reluctance.

Adjournment of Congress, together with its yielding on previous stubborn opposition removed a source of possible inflation stimulation. Profit-taking developed later and resulted in the tabling of profits in many issues. In addition, accounts were trimmed for the coming weekend. War optimism persisted as to the outcome of the Sicilian invasion and investment demand was a bullish factor.

Trends were a bit spotty at the start in thinly active transactions. Dealings tapered for a while but turned into the best hour of the fourth hour, gains of fractions to around a point resulted.

Canadian stocks were mostly steady or higher. Dome mines advanced 1-4 to 5 1-4, Hollinger 1-8 to 10 1-8, Noranda 1-4 to 45, Steep Rock 1-4 to 2 and Sherritt Gordon 1-8 to 3 1-8. Base metals were irregular. Falconbridge was unchanged and Lake Shore yielded 1-4.

POULTRY MARKET

Toronto, July 9—(CP)—The dressed poultry market was practically unchanged, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reports. Although receipts are increasing they fall short of meeting requirements. Approximately 40,000 lbs. fowl, chicken, broilers and old roosters were received in four main dealers this week.

The live poultry market is more active. Receipts show an increase. Limited arrivals are reported. Sales of ducklings total 300 head of old turkeys. Turkeys cost 30c lb. for best lb. for fair.

CANADIAN-ANGLO-AMERICAN TROOPS INVADE SICILY

Landings Preceded By Air Attack And Naval Forces Bombarded Coastal Defences

Entire Invasion Corps Under Direct Command of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower—Announcement of Assault On Sicily Made by U.S. War Department

FRENCH PEOPLE ASKED TO REMAIN CALM

(BY DANIEL DE LUCE)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, July 10 (AP) — The new hour of invasion struck today, and strong forces of British, American and Canadian troops stormed the gun-studded shores of Sicily.

As the alert fighting men piled from barges and other landing craft, booming guns of naval units offshore hammered enemy defences in a thunderous accompaniment and swarms of aircraft kept up the attack they had begun before the landings started.

Canadian, British and American troops made up the landing forces. The news of the bold stroke was first told in this terse announcement.

"Anglo-American-Canadian forces, under command of General Eisenhower, began landing operations in Sicily early this morning (July 10, North Africa time.) Landings were preceded by an air attack. Naval forces covered the assault forces and bombarded the coast defences during the assault."

General Dwight D. Eisenhower, the commander-in-chief of this first major land blow to crush enemy Europe, informed the peoples of the occupied and enemy countries of the attack in a statement read from the Algiers radio.

The announcer followed up the statement with these dramatic words:

"The battle of Africa is over; the battle of Europe has begun."

There was no immediate official report of the progress of the fighting or where it centred.

(A Reuters News Agency correspondent, however, cabled from North Africa to London that "the first line of Allied troops are this morning locked in combat with the enemy after clambering over mines and barbed wire known to attack pillboxes and machine gun posts.")

The lightning-quick landings were begun in good weather in full moonlight.

Then troop ships and their escorting naval vessels defied mine-fields and strongly-placed enemy shore guns to reach the objective.

Sicily, only 360 airline miles from Rome, is believed here to be the most heavily defended part of Italy.

Although it may prove a tough nut to crack, Gen. Eisenhower had powerful land, air and sea forces—steadily increasing since the British-American landings in French Africa last year—to sustain his offensive.

Some of the newest weapons in the Allied arsenal are believed receiving their first battle tryout.

Allied air power, which forced Italian Pantelleria into submission just a month ago tomorrow, paved the way for the landing by "saturation bombing" of Sicilian targets. Yesterday was the sixth consecutive day of almost constant around-the-clock air attacks, officially described as almost comparable to the mighty air blows against Pantelleria, one of the greatest air offensives in history up to that time.

Expected Invasion for Weeks

The Italian, expecting the invasion for weeks, already had inaugurated a scorched earth program in Sicily by destroying harbor installations at Trapani, long the main base for the Italian fleet and the next important Sicilian port to Africa.

(A broadcast by the Algiers radio to North America said that the United States government monitors said landings had been carried out on the rock-studded western tip of Sicily near that port.)

The triangular-shaped island offered few accessible beaches to the invaders except along the 150-mile southwest side, where the above broadcast said attempts were before the first hills appear. High cliffs protect most of the eastern and eastern shores.

Gen. Eisenhower's personal message announcing the start of the offensive was first read in French to the people of France and advised the people of France that this was the first stage in the liberation of the European continent." It urged them to remain calm and avoid exposing themselves to Nazi reprisals.

Would Get Chance to Help

The General indirectly promised the French they eventually would get their chance to help strike back at their Nazi conquerors.

"When the hour of action strikes we will let you know," the commander-in-chief declared.

The statement also was read in Italian, German and English.

(Radio Algiers said in a broadcast in French that the assault began at 2:45 a.m. (Sicily time) and that the general headquarters was at Algiers.)

'Nerve Centre of Sicilian Defence' Is Smashed in Pre-Invasion Blow

Cairo, July 10 (AP) — Striking at Sicily and Crete in waves near-ly 100 strong, United States heavy bombers yesterday smashed the general headquarters and "nerve centre" of the Sicilian defence forces" at Taormina in a slightly previous blow, a U.S. communique said today.

In unusual description of bombers, the bulletin declared that the target area in Taormina on the east coast of Sicily was "pulped to rubble and left in smoke and flames."

"The San Domenico hotel in which the general headquarters was housed and the general post office in which were concentrated all telephone, telegraph and other communications systems have been completely demolished by a concentration of direct hits."

"Wreckage and debris were thrown high in the air and huge fires broke out, burning with an ease on railway tracks."

In the busiest day they have had, Liberators based in the Middle East dropped 250,000 pounds of high explosives on the Comiso airdrome in Sicily, and also visited the Malemo airdrome in Crete.

RUSSIAN LINES HOLDING AGAINST GERMAN ASSAULT

2,036 Nazi Tanks Destroyed, 904 Aircraft Downed and 40,000 Germans Killed

FEROCIOUS FIGHTING

Moscow, July 10 (AP)—The fifth day of Field Marshal Guenther Von Kluge's offensive on the Kursk salient brought further disastrous losses for the attacking Germans, the Russians announced today, declaring that since the start of the drive 2,036 tanks had been destroyed or damaged, 904 aircraft shot down and about 40,000 Germans killed.

There was little change in the situation yesterday according to a Soviet communique, which said that the Red army was continuing to battle enemy tanks which previously had penetrated the Russian positions at Belgorod.

In one engagement in the Belgorod area yesterday, the bulletin said, 93 to 95 attacking German tanks were destroyed.

(Berlin broadcasts declared that German forces had penetrated 36 miles northward toward Kursk in a thrust from the southern anchor of the battle front at Belgorod.)

While the German armies pushed hard against the Russian line from Orel to Belgorod, the Red army reported that it had held its own.

German Paying Heavily

In the sky battle, the Russians said, the German airforce was paying heavily in planes for its attempt to roll back the Russian artillery to clear the way for the ground advance.

From front line dispatches it appeared that it was just south of Orel, where the battle line bends to the west, that the Nazi army was making its greatest effort.

(The Germans, in a propaganda broadcast, told of "ferocious fighting" in the Orel area and said Nazi troops "gained grain ground only inch by inch".)

The Russians said a German thrust from the Orel area linked along a narrow front on the Orel-Kursk railway had been stopped dead, although the Germans had brought up reinforcements consisting of nine divisions of infantry and a tank division. Nevertheless, it claimed that its own airforce had ranged far behind the German line to bomb and machine supply and troop concentrations.

Apart air activity, the Russians said, had been highly successful, destroying 2,036 enemy tanks without the loss of a single plane for the second successive night.

CANADA'S FORCE IS GREATEST EVER ASSEMBLED

Months of Planning And Preparation Go Into Assembly of Canadian Force

IN GREAT FETTLE

By ALAN RANDAL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, July 10 (CP Cable) — A Canadian force, believed here to be the greatest assault force Canada has ever sent overseas, went ashore late yesterday in Sicily, the first action today beside Britons and Americans on the shores of Sicily.

It was the culmination of months of planning and preparation, and of training and conditioning, including for these long years and more for the last few months, the great fettle as they started out from Britain for the adventure which was known to them only as "operation X".

The announcement this morning terse and to the point, said only that Canadians were participating in the assault with British and American forces.

While there was no statement of the size of the Canadian force, there were indications in Britain that their number may be considerable.

Ross Munro, Canadian Press War Correspondent, who accompanied the troops, said in a dispatch left in Britain for publication today that "thousands and thousands of Canadian and British troops rolled to the docksides in troop trains that came from all over the United Kingdom.)

Further Details Awaited

Further details were awaited. But it can be said these Canadians, who must be expert at coastal assaults if ever troops could be so classed, have had the benefit of all the lessons of the past year since their reconnaissance in force at Dieppe—a year in which combined operations headquarters has made a long way in developing new tactics.

There is no doubt that this great test of Canada's soldier—first full-scale action for them since Dieppe last August—was a hazardous operation.

Scorching Criticism Given of Outlawed Irish Republican Army

Dublin, July 10 (AP) — The story of a plan, presumably German, to foment trouble in Ireland was told to the Dail yesterday by Justice Minister Gerry Boland in a speech directly critical of the outlawed Irish Republican army.

"In 1941, when things were looking very bad," he said, "it became known that a parachutist had landed here. He was not captured himself, but in his parachute-bag we found plans which as far as we could see, were a plan for invasion of this country.

"It took up to 18 months to capture that parachutist, and during that time, he was harbored by I.R.A. people."

Boland said a second parachutist landed, and was captured almost immediately, but asserted: "he spent about the same length of time in months to get him, and during that time, he was in touch with the same group of people. Is that not an indication of the wish of these people to involve this country, in war?"

SENT 780,000 POUNDS

Toronto, July 10 —(CP)— The Ontario clothing division of the Canadian Aid to Russia Fund sent a total of 780,000 pounds of clothing in the 26 carloads that have been sent to the Soviet Union, according to a statement made recently by Jack Creed, chairman.

Russian People Welcomed News Of Allied Landing

Moscow, July 10—(AP)—The Russian people warmly welcomed news of the Allied landing on Sicily today.

Even before the newspapers had time to comment editorially, the people entered into excited discussions, calling the new offensive "a fine gift" for the Red Army, now striving to block the summer offensive of the Nazis.

"It is not the second front," of course, they were saying, "but it is another important blow to the axis."

The public apparently recognizes the potent possibilities of the Sicilian landing as another step toward ensuring communications as an important action in making the Mediterranean still safer for Allied shipping.

The Russians are vitally interested in developments which will increase and quicken the supply ships of the Allies.

SIR HARRY OAKES WAS MURDERED POLICE CHARGE

Son-in-Law of Oakes, Alfred de Marigny, Held on Murder Count

MARIGNY DENIES

Nassau, Bahamas, July 10 (AP)—The arrest of Sir Harry Oakes' son-in-law brought a startling climax today to the mystery which grew out of the death of the immensely wealthy British Baronet.

Alfred De Marigny, husband of Sir Harry's daughter Nancy, was held on a formal charge of murder although he flatly denied that it was he who clubbed the 68-year-old Knight to death.

Police officials helped colonial police make the investigation which led to the sensation against the yacht racer and sportsman.

Alfred de Marigny was taken into custody at Sir Harry's home, it was learned that the body of the multi-millionaire was found Thursday morning on his charred bed, and that there were four serious bludgeon wounds on the head.

Attorney General Eric Hallinan reported that the bed had been partially consumed by the body.

While her husband remained in custody, Lady Nancy Oakes Dade Marigny, whose marriage in May, 1941, incurred the displeasure of her father, ended a vacation in Toronto to join her mother, Lady Oakes, at the family's Bar Harbor, Me., summer home.

Mrs. Eric Aitchen, one of the Miami detectives, said the charge against de Marigny was "first degree murder," and that there was no bail.

(Per two days the world outside of this colony was given only the talking of the mysterious circumstances surrounding the death of Miami officers and the announcement that there were "injuries" to the body gave the only hint that Sir Harry had met foul play.

The coroner's jury viewed the body at the scene, and it was reported to be sent to the Miami mortuary.

De Marigny is in his early 30's. His marriage to Nancy Oaks was the social event of the season at Miami in 1937 from Ruth Biltmore.

Swarms of Allied Fighters, Bombers Follow Raid With Daylight Attacks

10 BOMBERS MISSING

(By RICE YAHNER)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, July 10 (CP) — R.A.F. heavy bombers made "a very heavy attack" on the central Ruhr last night, it was announced today, and swarms of Allied fighters and bombers followed this up with daylight assaults on European targets.

Ten members of the Canadian bomber group took part in the Ruhr attack last night, but as they flown with the R.A.F. in practically all the massive assaults against that industrial stronghold since the aerial offensive began. In addition, scores of Canadians flew with the R.A.F. crews.

An Air Ministry communique said Gelsenkirchen, 27 miles west of Dortmund on the Duisburg-Hamm railway, was among the Ruhr targets hit.

Ten of the big bombers were listed as missing from the night's assault.

R.C.A.F. headquarters named Gelsenkirchen as the main target and added three bombers of the Canadian bomber group were missing.

U.S. Raiders Take Part

Among the great forces of daylight raiders hurling out across the Channel were many heavy Uni-ted States bombers and fighters.

Several hundred planes passed over Kent during the afternoon, observers declared the formations may constitute one of the greatest daylight attacking forces from Britain.

Thus, the combined British, Canadian and American aerial might was unleashed in full force, kept going an air offensive that helps provide proof of the ring of powerful armament the Allies are forging around European area that over a harbor thick with vessels.

At one anchorage there were ships of the Royal Navy, including destroyers, a cruiser, several battleships, flotillas of corvettes and motor launches and, sitting on the water like gigantic half-built liners were aircraft carriers. In the distance, dimly, the outline of the flat top made a flat line against the horizon.

Thousands and Thousands Of British and Canadian Troops Roll to Docksides

Mustered Aboard Multitude of Ships for Operation Known Only as 'X'

ROSS MUNRO'S STORY

Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent who sailed with the Canadian force from Britain left this story with Canadian military authorities telling of the departure of the Dominion force, which today invaded Sicily. At the time the dispatch was filed, Munro was still to be heard from on his newest and greatest assignment.

Somewhere in England, (Delayed) (CP Cable)—Secretly, quietly and in orderly fashion, this gigantic, seaborne operations force — they told us it was against "X"—was mustered aboard the multitude of ships in great invasion armadas at anchor in a number of British ports.

Thousands and thousands of Canadian and British troops rolled to the docksides in troop trains that came from all over the United Kingdom. There were Canadians from Scotland, England and others from a dozen camps in other parts of the British Isles, and had been doing special training. There were the Irish from Aldershot and hundreds, English and Welsh units.

We saw assault, infantry companies march from the depot and down with arms and other weapons and leaping lanky and fit.

There was an immense amount of special equipment, and there were many diverse units on the beach at the base; special artillery units such as airfield construction units, mine-clearing sappers, road construction units.

Large Expeditionary Force

There were also signals and supply and ordnance services, and all the panoply of an expeditionary force of major magnitude.

Then in the port where there was the largest concentration of shipping and it was a grand spectacle to stand on the top deck of our Infantry-landing craft and look over a harbor thick with vessels.

At one anchorage there were ships of the Royal Navy, including destroyers, a cruiser, several battleships, flotillas of corvettes and motor launches and, sitting on the water like gigantic half-built liners were aircraft carriers. In the distance, dimly, the outline of the flat top made a flat line against the horizon.

ATTACK ON SICILY MAY BE COSTLY NEWSPAPERS SAY

"We Have Strength and Faith to See It Through" Says London Star

HISTORIC VENTURE

London, July 10 — (CP Cable) — Coincident with publication of first news of the Sicilian invasion by Canadian, British and American soldiers, London evening newspapers today editorially warned that the attack may be costly.

"We must be prepared for losses," said the Star. "There must be no deluding ourselves with hopes of speedy occupation of Mussolini's front-door mat." Par declared that in Italy, it is also Hitler's outer ramparts and the Nazis have shown every determination to hold it."

An entirely new phase of the war has arrived, the paper added, for now the defenders of North Africa have become the aggressors, to cope with a task dwarfing that which Rommel failed to do.

"We now have shouldered the supreme task," the Star continued.

"We have the strength, and faith to see it through. Here far from the fury battlefield we can but work for the men enshrined in our hearts."

Historic Venture

The Standard declared: "We are committed in an historic, hazardous adventure in which there will be setbacks to mourn as well as successes to praise, and from which there can be no turning back."

Since the drain of population was raised by the Standard as important, to Britain's Scotland is in Britain.

The Standard added: "To the grevest, greatest cause in mankind's story, the cause of freedom's survival to which they (the defenders) give their lives, we now dedicate all we have and are."

The Express said: "No easy victory lies ahead. Let us get that conviction firmly into our minds. This is a stern business of invading a large country, well defended and alive to a prospect with which it now is faced. It is a hazardous and complicated duty."

Ultimate Objective of Invasion Unconditional Surrender Of Italy And Germany Says King

Sicilian Assault Third Major Action of War for Canadian Soldiers

NO EASY VICTORY

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 10 (CP) — Canadian troops, backed up by Canadian airmen and supported by Canadian naval personnel, landed in Sicily early today in what Prime Minister Mackenzie King described as an attack which "has as its ultimate objective the unconditional surrender of Italy and Germany."

It was the third major action of the war for Canadian soldiers, following last August's raid on Dieppe and the unsupported entrance of Hong Kong in December, 1941.

Before the terse announcement that the landing had been made, Commons members in Canada's capital were in the offing. Mr. King gave a hint himself just before the House of Commons adjourned at 11 p.m. E.D.T. when he said it was not possible for him to see "24 hours ahead."

But the Prime Ministry had left his office for home and bed to await the actual word of the landing which came from Britain shortly after midnight.

His office issued a statement which the Prime Minister had prepared in advance — a statement which was brief and terse in comparison about the Sicilian landing.

"The troops have received marks for Canada the beginning of this year," the statement read.

He warned Canadians that "in this new phase of the war for Canada, the army will share with the navy and the air force, the heat of combat, and, also, inevitable sufferings and losses.

"We can expect no easy victories and no quick successes," the Prime Minister said. Canadians must be prepared for fierce fighting and a long struggle."

CANADIAN-ANGLO-AMERICAN TROOPS INVADE SICILY

Landings Preceded By Air Attack And Naval Forces Bombarded Coastal Defences

Entire Invasion Corps Under Direct Command of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower—Announcement of Assault On Sicily Made by U.S. War Department

FRENCH PEOPLE ASKED TO REMAIN CALM

(BY DANIEL DE LUCE)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, July 10 (AP) — The new hour of invasion struck today, and strong forces of British, American and Canadian troops stormed the gun-studded shores of Sicily.

As the alert fighting men piled from barges and other landing craft, booming guns of naval units and others launched ceaseless defense by a thunderous accompaniment and swarms of aircraft kept up the attack they had begun before the landings started.

Canadian, British and American troops made up the landing forces.

The news of the bold stroke was first told in this terse announcement.

"Anglo-American-Canadian forces, under command of General Eisenhower, began landing operations in Sicily early this morning (July 10, North Africa time.) Landings were preceded by an air attack. Naval forces escorted the assault forces and bombarded the coast defences during the assault."

General Dwight D. Eisenhower, the commander-in-chief of this first major land blow to crush enemy Europe, informed the peoples of the occupied and enemy countries of the attack in a statement read from the Algiers radio.

The announcer followed up the statement with these dramatic words: "The battle of Africa is over; the battle of Europe has begun."

There was no immediate official report of the progress of the fighting or where it centred.

(A Reuters News Agency correspondent, however, cabled from North Africa to London that "the first line of Allied troops are this morning locked in combat with the enemy after clambering over mines and barbed wire fences to attack pillboxes and machine gun nests.")

The lightning-quick landings were begun in grey weather in full moonlight.

The troop ships and their escorting naval vessels defied mine-fields and strongly-placed enemy shore guns to reach the objective.

Sicily, only 200 airline miles from Rome, is believed here to be the most heavily defended part of Italy.

Although it may prove a tough nut to crack, Gen. Eisenhower had powerful land, air and sea forces—steadily increasing since the British-American landings in French Africa last year—to sustain his offensive.

Yesterday was the sixth consecutive day of almost constant around-the-clock air attacks, officially described as almost comparable to the mighty air blows against Pantelleria, one of the greatest air offensives in history up to that time.

Expected Invasion for Weeks

The Italians, expecting the invasion for weeks, already had inaugurated a scorched earth program in Sicily by destroying harbor installations at Trapani, long the main base for the Italian fleet in Sicily, and set important Sicilian port to Africa.

(A broadcast by the Algiers radio to North Africa declared that the United States government monitors said barges had been carried out on the rock-studded western tip of Sicily near that port).

The triangular-shaped island offered few accessible beaches to the invaders except along the 160-mile southward side, where the shore already lies almost under before the first hill, appear. High cliffs protect most of the northern and eastern shores.

Gen. Eisenhower's personal message announcing that the offensive was first read in French by Allied radio announcer and alerted the people of France that this was "the first flare in the liberation of the European continent." It urged them to remain calm and avoid exposing themselves to Nazi reprisals.

Would Get Chance to Help

The General addressed promises to the French they eventually would get their chance to help strike back at their Nazi conquerors.

"When the hour of action strikes we will let you know," the commander-in-chief declared.

The statement later was read in Italian, German and English.

(Radio Algiers said in a broadcast in French that the general headquarters was housed and the general post office was located in a building accompanied all telephone, telegraph and other communications facilities were also completely decentralized to avoid concentration of direct hits.

"Wreckage and debris were thrown high in the air and huge fires broke out. Bursts were also seen on railway tracks."

In the hottest day there have had, Liberators based in the Middle East attacked an RAF 180,000 pounds of high explosives on the Comiso airdrome in Sicily, and also visited the Malemo airdrome in Crete.

Sir Marigny is in his early 30's. His marriage to Nancy Oakes, was a result of a romance which began at Miami in 1937 from Ruth Mitchell.

GELSENKIRCHEN HEAVILY POUNDED BY RAF ASSAULT

Swarms of Allied Fighters, Bombers Follow Raid With Daylight Attacks

10 BOMBERS MISSING

(By RICE YARNER)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, July 10 (CP) — R.A.F. heavy bombers made "a very heavy attack" on the central Ruhr last night, it was announced today, and swarms of Allied fighters and bombers followed this up with daylight assaults on European targets.

Heavy bombers of the Canadian bomber group took part in the Ruhr attack last night, just as they have done with the R.A.F. in practically all the massive smashes against that industrial stronghold since the aerial offensive began. In addition, scores of Canadians flew with the R.A.F. crews.

An Air Ministry communique said Gelsenkirchen, 27 miles west of Dortmund on the Duisburg-Hamm railway, was among the Ruhr targets hit.

Ten of the big bombers were listed as missing from the night's assault.

R.C.A.F. headquarters named Gelsenkirchen as the main target and added that members of the Canadian bomber group were missing.

U.S. Raiders Take Part

Among the great forces of daylight raiders which swept across the Channel were many heavy Liberator bombers and fighters.

Several hundred planes passed over one district alone, and observers-geelarge the formations may have consisted of the greatest daylight attacking forces from British.

Thus, the combined British Canadian and American aerial might was concentrated on the Ruhr, kept going as air offensive that helps provide proof of the ring of powerful armament the Allies are forging around Europe's coasts for landing forces bent inward against the shores of Sicily this morning.

Hit 44 Times

Gelsenkirchen has been hit 44 times previously, last on June 25th. The town is an oil refinery centre, and also has iron furnaces, and tin, steel and boiler works. Three coal mines are located in the neighborhood.

The RAF-RCAF attack was the

Ultimate Objective of Invasion Unconditional Surrender Of Italy And Germany Says King

Sicilian Assault Third Major Action of War for Canadian Soldiers

NO EASY VICTORY

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 10 — (CP) — Mackenzie King, backed up by Canadian airmen and possibly some Canadian naval personnel, hitched in Sicily early today in what Prime Minister Mackenzie King described as an attack which "has as its ultimate objective the unconditional surrender of Italy and Germany."

It was the third major action of this war for Canadian soldiers, following last August's raid on Dieppe and announcement conference of Hong Kong in December, 1941.

Before the terse announcement that the landing had been made, Parliament was told the government's war in the offing. Mr. King gave a hint himself just before the House of Commons adjourned at 11 p.m. D.S.T. when he said it was not possible for him to see "24 hours ahead."

But the Prime Minister had left his office for home with word from the actual word of the landing reached Ottawa a few minutes after midnight.

His office issued a statement which the Prime Minister had prepared in advance — a statement which was brief and told little information about the Sicilian landing.

Mr. King said that "important" marks for Canada the beginning of a new phase in the war effort.

He warned Canadians that "in this new phase of the war for Canada, the army will share with the navy and the air force the heat, the combat, and, inevitably, the suffering, and losses.

"We can expect no easy victories and no quick successes," the Prime Minister said. "Failure must be prepared for fierce fighting and the full force of the enemy.

Thousands and Thousands Of British and Canadian Troops Roll to Docksides

Mustered Aboard Multitude of Ships for Operation Known Only as 'X'

ROSS MUNRO'S STORY

Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent who sailed with the Canadian force from Britain left this story with Canadian military authorities telling of the departure of the Dominion force, which today invaded Sicily. At the time the dispatch was filed, Munro was still to be heard from on his newest and greatest assignment.

Somewhere in England, (Delayed) (CP Cable)—Secretly, quietly and in orderly fashion, this gigantic, combined operations force — first told us it was against "X"—was mustered aboard a multitude of ships in great invasion armada at anchor in a number of British harbors.

Thousands and thousands of Canadian and British troops rolled to the dockside in troop trains that came from all over the United Kingdom. There were Canadians from Southern England and others from a dozen camps in other parts of the British Isles that have had two dollar special training. There were Scots from the Highlands and lowlands and Welsh units.

We saw assault, infantry companies aboard their ships, loaded down with small arms and other weapons for a landing battle and fight.

There was an immense amount of special equipment and there were many diverse units on the move in the last special military units such as airfield construction units, mine-clearing sappers, road construction units.

Large Expeditionary Force

There were also signals and supply and ordnance services and all the panoply of an expeditionary force of major importance.

In the port where there was the largest concentration of shipping and it was a grand spectacle to stand on the top deck of our Ro.ll-ity-landing ship and look over a harbor thick with vessels.

At one anchorage there were ships of the Royal Navy, including destroyers, cruisers, battleships, flotillas of corvettes and motor launches and, sitting on the water at a distance, half-built liners were aircraft carriers. In the distance flight deck, or the flat tops made a flat line against the skyline.

ATTACK ON SICILY MAY BE COSTLY NEWSPAPERS SAY

"We Have Strength and Faith to See it Through" Says London Star

HISTORIC VENTURE

London, July 10 — (CP Cable) — Coincident with publication of first news of the Sicilian invasion by Canadian, British and American soldiers, London evening newspapers today editorially warned that the attack may be costly.

"We must be prepared for losses," said the Star. "There must be no deluding ourselves with hopes of speedy occupation of Mussolini's front-door island. For Sicily that is Italy. It is also Hitler's outer gateway and the Nazis have shown every determination to hold it."

An entirely new phase of the war has begun, the paper added, for now the defenders of North Africa have become the invaders of Europe with a task dwarfing that which Rommel failed to do.

"We now have shouldered the supreme task," the Star continued. "We have the strength and faith to see it through. Here far from the fierce battlefield we can but work for the men enshrined in our hearts."

Historic Adventure

The Standard declared: "We are committed to an historic, hazardous adventure in which there will be setbacks in course as well as successes to praise, and from which there can be no turning back."

Sicily, its island of population was rated by the Standard as important to Italy as Ireland is to Britain.

The Standard added: "To the grave, grandest cause in mankind's story, the cause of freedom's survival in which they (the defenders) give their lives, we now dedicate all we have and are."

The News said: "No easy victory lies ahead. Let us get that conception firmly into our minds. This is a stern business of invading a large country, well defended and alive to a prospect with which it now is faced. It is a hazardous and complicated duty."

Sidney Township Patriotic Assoc. Elects Officers

After operating provisionally for the past two months the Sidney Township Patriotic Association has come duly organized on Friday evening when at a special meeting at Wallbridge officers were elected and committees set up.

W. E. Tummon of Foxboro, ex-M.P., for South Hastings, was elected president of the association, a position which will confine its efforts to providing comforts and boxes for service men from the township now serving overseas. Col. Rocco Vandervaker will act as vice-president and Fred Campbell as treasurer and Mrs. Clarence Holmes as secretary.

The board of directors will be composed of C. H. Ketcheson, Lt. R. Griffis, F. Wilson, Mrs. M. B. Griffis, Mrs. C. V. Rutherford. A films and Mrs. C. V. Rutherford. A general committee will be a representatives from each of the Women's Institutes and Red Cross societies throughout the township.

Initial fund raising endeavour of the new association which is unique in this section of the province, was the staging of a Dominion Day garden party at Wallbridge at which the Belleville Municipal Band was the principal attraction. Starting from No. 1 T.T.S. also attended and gave a demonstration of precision drill, which was enthusiastically received by the large crowd. The endeavours of the association spoke highly of the splendid spirit of the community.

Approximately $350 was raised through the sale of tickets, volunteer subscriptions and from refreshment booth profits at the refreshment booth.

There are approximately 200 young men from the township now in the armed forces, it is estimated by officials of the association. The intended schedule is to provide parcels for these boys at Christmas time and on their birthdays, with the funds to carry on the program to be raised by social entertainments and endeavours of the association.

Fall Wheat Cutting Has Already Begun

Apparently hurried by exceptionally warm weather, the first of the fall wheat in the Belleville area has been put under the binder, it was reported by local farmers attending local market on Saturday. One man stated that he estimated two or two fields of wheat that had been cut.

Although the planting season was about a week or more later than this year, the delay has not seemed to have affected the early developments of fall grains or the hay crop. Hay is just as early if not a little more than last year, the same applies to the fall grain which on the whole is not cut much before the 12th of July.

Canadian Army Self-Sufficient, Mechanized, Fully Trained— Powerful Striking Force

On Outbreak of War Canada's Permanent Army Strength Was 4,500 With Non-Permanent Militia Organized in Units Across Country— Nearly Four Years of Training Have Gone Into Building of Army

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 10 (CP)—A history, an organization study, accompanied by a compilation of weapons, training and mobile strength of the Royal Canadian army as it moves into battle with other forces on one of the biggest fronts ever undertaken by United Nations in the present war.

While the role of the Canadian army in this venture may not be fully disclosed for some time it is a self-sufficient, heavily-mechanized and fully-trained force ready for every type of operation, capable of hitting hard and travelling far.

While the circumstances of war favored the building of the Canadian army in Britain, the size and state of efficiency, its creation out of the void of a peacetime force of military training and equipment, has been a remarkable achievement.

The growth of the fighting force overseas by successive stages of some 200,000 men proceeded from the beginning, along with the growth in Canada of facilities for enlisting, training and equipping soldiers.

The 1st division was organized on the outbreak of war and from it has been built both the militia and the permanent force. With units composed from militia regiments across Canada, it was representative of the whole country.

Gen. McNaughton led the troops overseas in December and in September, 1939, Canada has a permanent army of 4,000 men with a non-permanent militia organized in units within more than 100 centres and with more willingness than military training or experience.

Industrial Preparedness

The foundation of industrial preparedness was laid in 1936 when the government established the war supply board. Its function was to survey Canada's industrial capacity and to plan for the conversion of it to war purposes. Its first step was to determine the needs of the army, navy and air force and to allocate contracts to industry.

Then followed the setting up of the department of munitions and supply, the placing of orders in Canada for munitions and supplies, the building of new factories and the expansion of existing ones.

Its function was to survey Canada's industrial capacity and to plan for the conversion of it to war purposes. Its first step was to determine the needs of the army, navy and air force and to allocate contracts to industry.

Then followed the setting up of the department of munitions and supply, the placing of orders in Canada for munitions and supplies, the building of new factories and the expansion of existing ones.

During this period the enemy air force grew up to be the world's best. It failed, but the Canadian Army, in common with the British, Australian and others suffered casualties.

Expedition to Spitsbergen

The Army's one offensive operation up to then, the expedition to Spitsbergen for the destruction of coal mines and radio facilities, was carried out with success but without opposition.

The development of the military establishment overseas into an "army" in the European sense began in the big organization development in 1942. It was accomplished by converting the 4th Division, already organized in Canada as an infantry formation, into an armored division and its expansion overseas.

Then the creation of an army headquarters under Gen. McNaughton, with command of the overseas organization reached its projected goal. The next an increased strength except for the arrival of the 3rd Army Tank Brigade then in process of organization.

Raid at Dieppe

Then came Dieppe, one of the bloodiest bits of fighting produced by the war in Europe, took place in August, 1942. A Canadian infantry brigade reinforced by a tank battalion and British Commandos crossed the English Channel, providing powerful naval and air support and landed on one of the strong points of the enemy-defended coast.

The casualties in killed, wounded and prisoners were very heavy; but the lessons learned were many. It was officially appraised as the first large-scale test of the efficiency of combined army, navy and air force operations in effecting a landing on a defended coast.

The early part of 1943 was marked by the beginning out of the army formation by provision of the Canadian Corps, the building up of the pool of reinforcements overseas, and by the operational planning in which the co-operation of the Air Force to serve as a "protecting umbrella" for the advance hitting arm for the army was stressed.

Munitions Development

With the growth of the army went the development of the munitions industry in Canada. When the 1st division went overseas it took its kit to Britain for the most of its standard fighting weapons.

Soon, however, Canada was manufacturing weapons and equipment, not only for its own forces but for many thousands of other United Nations troops. The transportation transport Canadian production to the forces overseas. Out of Canadian factories came the trucks for the British forces in the Middle East.

From Canadian factories came rifles, machine guns, field pieces, tanks, signal equipment, clothing and sufficient of the vast expanded army and with much left over for the needs of other Nations.

In the Canadian army's movement across the seas through submarine-infested waters it and other United Nations forces of supplies and equipment to Canada. Navy played a major role.

From the start of the war "the sea-going force a concentrated on the main job of defeating the submarine in the North Atlantic. Steadily Canada's role in that operation increased until this year Canada assumed control of North Atlantic convoy operations in virtue of the fact that the Canadian navy was the largest force engaged in that operation.

It began with "the support of strong naval and air force formations."

As new Allied forces have landed in the southeastern part of Sicily, said the broadcast, it added that fighting was proceeding but said it could not be stated that attempts to land at other points on the island had been made.

"The invasion forces were supported by powerful naval fighting which proved extraordinarily costly for them," the broadcast said, and quoted a dispatch of the International Information Bureau (German propaganda agency). "The casualties were enormous and the losses heavy."

"Coastal batteries and Axis warships sank a number of landing transport schooner with troops and war material. Thirty-three enemy aircraft so far have been brought down in aerial combats as Berry parachutists who landed during the dawn were wiped out."

Writers Told Of Invasion One Month Ago

By RELMAN H. MORIN
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Air Force Headquarters in North Africa, July 10 —(AP)— The invasion "D" day.

And now that it's come more than British and American correspondents in North Africa have been writing for nearly weight being lifted from their shoulders and relief in their voices and tongues.

You can speak openly now about the landing on Sicily.

For months wherever the subject was mentioned at all — which was practically never — correspondents said it "that thing" or "the Mayor" or, simply, "it."

In the middle of June Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower called a press conference at Allied headquarters.

The Allied commander in chief has speaking generally of the situation as developing. Then he added the overseas operations would be undertaken within the month. The month seemed to pass. Nothing moved except the commander-in-chief's car from his headquarters slowly from face to face.

He said that the attack would be aimed at Sicily.

Bell-Sargent Tops Reliance By 19-13 Count

Bell-Sargent defeated Reliance in an interesting senior ball at the Queens last night in the Ladies Softball League with a 19-13 decision. Bell-Sargent in the first inning and holding it to a final score of 19 runs, which proved to be enough for the winners, held Reliance for the remainder of the game. Bell-Sargent netted five runs to cross the plate before the side was retired. Reliance, in spite of an apparent loss of control, Bell-Sargent batters found in the first, one run in the second and duplicated their opening score in the third. Good batting featured batting. At her trip to the plate in the fourth, Fitzsimmons slammed a home run with the bases loaded while running to third. When a pitched ball got away from Bell, she set shortly after and returned to the box to take the game through to the end. Although losing the game, Bell-Sargent hit only two homers in three scored in the fourth, the remaining cost throughout, seemed to be putting them right where they wanted them, allowing six tallies to register before the side retired for

Twelfth of July Celebrations

Due to wartime restrictions, such as rationed gasoline, scarcity of rubber and the possibility of workers being unwilling to take time off from productive and essential jobs to attend, the 12th of July celebrations in the Orange district this year are being a bit curtailed.

The nearest all-out celebration of the battle of the Boyne will be held at Middle Village where lodges from the southern and central parts of the county are expected to congregate, while the one other parade scheduled for the county will be held at Bancroft. A basket picnic at Point Anne will mark the annual Orange celebration in the southern part of the county.

last year in London, the Associated Press that it would keep repeating the announcement "day after day and all night. To the Italian version, it added this postscript:—

(PTN) Lord Haw Haw says that Churchill have now become a swindler, liar, drunkard, has this German way by Mussolini, has become a battlefield, the German paratroop and scum will now be fought on Italian soil."

Two Major Strongholds

In addition to their North African bases, the Allied attacking forces had two major strongholds in the Mediterranean from which to spring against Sicily—equipped Pantelleria, some 60 miles southwest on the direct route across the 90-mile wide Sicily Strait from Tunisia and the impregnable British naval stronghold of Malta, even closer the south of the eastern end of the island.

The invasion came two months after Allied troops had crushed the resistance of a quarter of 220,000 Axis troops in Tunisia. Ever since then, Axis broadcasts have talked nervously of a "conquest, warships, and supply vessels moving in a steady stream eastward past Gibraltar.

In words of feverish preparation for defence, the Axis had strung rings of minefields around the island, installed strong coastal batteries and submarines constantly lurked in its waters.

Airborne Pounded

Another hazard confronting Eisenhower's amphibious offensive was the constant pounding by Allied bases on the mainland. Many of these, however, like the many airfields of Sicily itself, have been bombed steadily in recent weeks.

Sicily, densely populated with 4,000,000 persons in peacetime, was denuding of many of its residents as the invasion drew nearer, this Germ Axis reports saying they had been evacuated to the Sicily "rear."

The Italian mainland itself, less than two miles away across the narrowest point of the Messina Strait at the eastern corner of the island, also formed the next logical step for the Allied armies.

8,500 Sq. Miles in Area

Sicily, 9,985 square miles in area, roughly the size of Vermont, is mountainous and hilly. Its western and southern coastlines, nearest Africa, are mostly flat, although there are few points, where either shallow-draft vessels can approach. Good harbors around the northern coast, but it is steep and cliff-bound, difficult to assault. Along the south, also fringed by bold cliffs, Mt. Etna towers into the sky.

The major part of Sicily's transportation system skirts the coast, making it subject to crippling attack. Mountainous roads, over which most of the invasion must go through the interior and there are comparatively few transportation routes.

Major Raid Deep In Burma Staged By British Forces

New Delhi, July 10 (CP)—British and Indian troops, staging a major raid deep behind Japanese positions on the western coast of Burma, recently destroyed a Japanese base, held the enemy stronghold several hours before withdrawing it announced here.

The Indian mainland itself, less than two miles away across the narrowest point of the Messina Strait at the eastern corner of the island, also formed the next logical step for the Allied armies.

The Navy had a number of ships in the Mediterranean for the North African landing late last year but nothing, however, like the many warships of Sicily itself, have been bombed steadily in recent weeks.

Sicily, densely populated with 4,000,000 persons in peacetime, was denuding of many of its residents as the invasion drew nearer, this German Axis reports saying they had been evacuated to the Sicily "rear."

The Italian mainland itself, less than two miles away across the narrowest point of the Messina Strait at the eastern corner of the island, also formed the next logical step for the Allied armies.

8,500 Sq. Miles in Area

Sicily, 9,985 square miles in area, roughly the size of Vermont, is mountainous and hilly. Its western and southern coastlines, nearest Africa, are mostly flat, although there are few points, where either shallow-draft vessels can approach. Good harbors around the northern coast, but it is steep and cliff-bound, difficult to assault. Along the south, also fringed by bold cliffs. Mt. Etna towers into the sky.

The major part of Sicily's transportation system skirts the coast, making it subject to crippling attack. Mountainous roads, over which most of the invasion must go through the interior and there are comparatively few transportation routes.

Two British place was listed as missing.

Must Not Fail

He called on Canada for "all the strength that comes from a united feeling of unity" for "we must not fail our fighting men".

"I repeat, we must not fail our fighting men. In the name of Canada, I give to them the assurance that Canada will not fail her fighting men."

There was no mention of the submechanized Canadian army overseas—five divisions in all—is involved in the Sicilian operation. There was no word as to the Canadian senior officer with the troops in the Mediterranean.

Mr. King's statement merely repeated the earlier announcement from Washington and elsewhere that British, United States and Canadian naval forces had landed.

The Royal Canadian Navy was the first service to make its position in the operation clear. A headquarters spokesman said no Canadian ships took part in the landing on Sicily, but added that did not preclude the possibility E. N. personnel on Royal Navy ships were helping out.

The Navy had a number of ships in the Mediterranean for the North African landing late last year but nothing, however, like the many warships of Sicily itself, have been bombed steadily in recent weeks.

R.C.A.F. headquarters in Ottawa said it had no information on the part Canadian airmen played; but it is broadcast early today from "Tripoli" that a Canadian Spitfire squadron" of Canadian Wing-Commander Johnnie Johnson, Prosser Leaves Home

Wing-Commander was a reference to Canadian participation in the heavy bombardment which preceded the landing of ground forces.

In his last evening Mr. King received a communique in the House of Commons. He read it and it once with Norman Robertson, his parliamentary secretary, and Ralston who was on the floor of the Chamber as an adviser. Then he handed it to Defence Minister, who slid over him.

Later the Prime Minister left the House for a few minutes. He came back and announced that he had and he referred to it frequently in answering both Col. Ralston and Mr. Robertson.

Several Opposition men started betting Mr. King would make a momentous announcement, but kind the fore the House adjourned. They were wrong.

Prime Minister Ralston was in the Prime Minister's office when the news was announced with Victor Turnbull, Mr. King's secretary, Col. Ralston and Col. Ralston's statement to make immediately and declined to comment in any way on the landing. Mr. Turnbull issued the following statement:

"The war for the liberation of the conquered and enslaved countries of Europe has just entered upon a new and vital phase," it began.

"Armed forces of Great Britain, the United States and Canada now are in the forefront of an attack which has, as its ultimate objective, the unconditional surrender of Italy and Germany.

"All Canada will be justifiably proud to know that units of the Canadian army are a part of the Allied force engaged in this attack."

Said As Slated.

After the fall of France, the Canadian army was held in Britain as a shield and possible invasion. For a time the Canadians were virtually the only land force in British equipped to meet an invasion.

Since then, the overseas army has grown to five divisions, two of them armored, Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton who took the 1st Division overseas near the end of 1939 is his commander. The two corps are commanded by Lt.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar and Lt.-Gen. E. W. Sansom.

The role of the army, said Mr. King's statement, was in accordance with the strategic planning "by those who have had the supreme direction of the war."

"The news we have received marks the beginning of a new and vital phase of the war," Mr. King said. "The Canadian army has had few opportunities for active combat with the enemy. This has not been through any fault of its own or because of any policy of the Canadian government.

Reflected Undying Honor

"From the outset of war, the government of Canada has adhered to the position that Canadian forces in whole or in part, should be used where and when they can make the best contribution to the winning of the war."

Mr. King referred to the Canadian share in Hong Kong and Dieppe, and said: "In both cases the courage and the daring of Canadian soldiers reflected undying honor upon themselves and upon our country."

The soldiers of Canada had gone into battle "exceptionally well-trained, smartly equipped, keen and full of spirit, ready for offensive warfare.

"The fighting men of Canada—on land, at sea, and in the air—are making their lives to preserve everything that is of us held dear.

"Of one thing we may be assured. They will not fail us. We must not fail them.

"They will fight better for the assurance of the support of a united Canada. They will have need of this strength that comes from a deep feeling of unity.

"I repeat, we must not fail our fighting men. In the name of Canada, I give to them the assurance that Canada will not fail her fighting men.

CANADA'S FORCE

Further news was not expected for some hours, but reports on the battalion of where the Canadians may be engaged. There was every indication that the presence of Canadians in the invasion had caught the Axis by surprise for they had not been concentrated in any of the long stream of Axis broadcasts which made mention of the movement of the invasion troops.

Announcement that Canadian troops participated followed by less than a day the announcement that Canadian Wellington bomber squadrons of the R.C.A.F. bomber group in Britain had been shifted to the Mediterranean war.

T.-t Island of Sicily, while only one spot of "Fortress Italy" of Hitler's Europe, was undoubtedly well fortified by the Axis. It has taken an air and pounding but there can be no doubt the task of the Canadians will not be easy. Likely Made on South Side

Reports from the south side of the island, but there was no confirmation on this point. There are no big harbors on the south side, but there are a number of beaches where landing barges could be grounded.

Such a procedure, too, would tend to ease the Royal Navy's task to some extent. Barges could be taken across the Sicilian Narrows where, with British command of the sea and air, the risk would be lessened.

At the same time the larger Allied naval forces could be disposed in northern waters around the island to deal with any part of the Italian fleet which might attempt to sally out for harassing activities.

At this early stage, London authoritative sources declined to say anything but cautious speculations. They pointed out that large-scale operations of such a nature on such a large island must be fraught with great dangers in the early development.

It was not immediately known what part Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, commander of the Canadian Army, was taking in the invasion. In De Gaspe and, Maj.-Gen. J. H. Roberts went into action with the Canadian troops while Gen. McNaughton remained with the main body of his army.

But the action on Sicily is a much bigger show, likely to demand close contact from the Canadian commander.

Meanwhile, the movement of the Canadians from Britain had been known to be going forward for some time effort was made to protect the security of the troops and details were not known, but war correspondents "disappeared" from London a good while ago.

Four Canadian Press correspondents left London last week. Ross Munro went first, followed by Louis Hunter, William Stewart, and Maurice Desjardins. They have not been heard from since, which is only natural in view of the secrecy surrounding the entire operations.

"Let Us Go Forward Together"

To all Ontario people who want our province to make its greatest possible contribution in the war effort . . . and who are also concerned about what will happen after the war, the CCF now says:—

"Let us go forward together during the war and after the war.

"Let us keep faith with our men overseas by giving them our utmost support now.

"Let us keep faith with our men overseas by making sure that there will be jobs and security for all when the war is over."

The CCF is close to the problems of labour and agriculture—so vital to our war effort. To these and to their allied problems such as health and housing, the CCF will bring new and vigorous action.

Hundreds of thousands of Ontario people suffered in the last depression and are fearful today of what the post-war period will bring. A post-war depression must be prevented. The CCF alone presents a clear-cut, constructive program for after the war.

The steady swing toward the CCF, reported by the Gallup polls, shows that an ever-increasing number of people look to the CCF for the solution of today's problems. Later advertisements will set out the points in the CCF program.

Outstanding men and women have already been nominated in most Ontario ridings and further nominations are being made. With Edward B. Jollitte as CCF provincial leader, these men and women are prepared to form a government now and introduce a genuine new deal for Ontario.

The CCF depends upon the work and dollars of the people. It urgently needs YOUR work and YOUR dollars. Write the Provincial Office, 2 Berti St., Toronto or your local candidate.

Let us go forward together for a better war effort . . . and for a better province in which to live when the war is over.

Allied Invasion Has Come

The hour for which the whole world outside of the Axis has waited has come with the invasion of Sicily by British, Canadian and American forces. After months of speculation and excitement over the time and place of the invasion, the world realizes that the beginning of the end of the Axis domination of continental Europe has come.

To Canadians the event has great significance though Canadian troops have been in action on a number of previous occasions in fairly small numbers. How many are in the force which landed on the shores of Sicily is of course not disclosed.

This was the first of the major events for which the armies of the United Nations have been trained, their air forces developed and their navies prepared.

The United Nations have reached towering strength in armament production, in munitions, in manpower, while the enemy's power is shrinking.

With the beginning of the invasion all the powers of the Allied Nations will be thrown against the Axis. The Allies have the inspiration of the victory in North Africa and of the great spirit of Russia.

The invasion of Sicily begins one of the great ventures of the war, the beginning of the campaign which is aimed at the utter destruction of Axis tyranny and the unconditional surrender of the Axis nations.

The United Nations have strength and spirit — they are fighting in the most just cause that ever drew nations together to save the world for liberty and in that spirit they will drive forward to the end in the crushing of the enemy.

The thought of the Allied peoples all over the world will at this time focus on the progress of the invading forces and be with those men who are carrying the power of Allied might and the spirit of victory into Axis-dominated Europe.

Nazi Claims

The Germans have naturally come out with a statement which is an evident attempt to answer the Allied claims of great destruction of the industries supporting the German war machine. They say that German tank production and ammunition output have expanded, this in the face of R.A.F. attacks around the clock against the German war industrial cities, especially in the Ruhr, the main centre of German war effort.

The signs of the devastation of German factories in the industrialized areas so heavily bombed are too clear to be misread by the Allies. They know what German war production has been greatly interrupted and that the German claims but an effort to offset the British attacks.

Now Germany have other worries.

A story from Stockholm says that the R.A.F. heavy bombers are so successful in locating targets by the light of "flare bombs" that German air raid precaution units have been instructed to concentrate on extinguishing flares. According to the story the "bomb" explodes and these each contain 60 flares, the bomb exploding 400 to 800 yards above the ground, and scattering the flares which are each capable of lighting up an area of more than one hundred yards in diameter. The brilliant light is so bright that the glow can be seen through the clouds, according to the statement of the Germans as reported through the Swedish journal.

Italy's Navy

Bombs rain upon Sicily and Sardinia, and strategical points in Italy but Italy cannot effectively strike back. Italy has lost any vestige of control she ever had in the Mediterranean for British ships use that sea route.

Mussolini's navy was badly battered several times early in the war and has had no zest for fighting. Strangely it has played no considerable part in the sea operations in the Mediterranean. Now his ships are said to be sheltered in the Adriatic and Tyrrhenian sea ports, unable to render any effective aid at a time when Italian defence is being put to the most severe test. The ships are said to be scattered in the ports of the two seas and unable to unite because of the impressive airpower of the Allies.

The Italian Dictator spent a vast fortune on his swift fleet and Italy has not had much return from this branch of the defence services.

Mussolini's investments have been sorry ones for the Italian people wealth poured out with nothing but loss in return of Fascism which has proved the curse of that country. Fascism has made a sorry mess indeed of Italians and Italy, it took her into the war on the side of aggression and tyranny and ignominy.

Volcanoes and Bombs

Some time ago there was suggestion of an experiment in dropping bombs into the crater of volcanoes, such for instance as Vesuvius and Etna.

The National Geographic Society is satisfied that those who proposed this are entirely wrong and that volcanoes eruptions cannot be man-made. So titanic are the forces of nature required to form a volcanic eruption that the bomb would be wasted that would be sent into the crater of one of Italy's volcanoes. The explosion of a large bomb would be like the bursting of a paper bag as compared with the discharge of a sixteen-inch gun, it was pointed out. Nature acts in her own way and man cannot equal her forces.

Etna and Vesuvius have taken a toll of many lives during history. In 1892 there were destructive eruptions from Etna. Some years ago Messina's orange and lemon groves were destroyed by an eruption. In the island of Java and nearby islands there have been sad experiences with volcanoes. Tidal waves are often companion to earthquakes and thousands of lives are lost. Mountains sometimes crack open. In one eruption volcanic dust was borne by air currents around a great part of the earth.

Vesuvius caused one of the greatest and most famed disasters of all time when in 79 A.D. it erupted and destroyed the cities of Herculaneum, Pompeii and Stabiae. The importance of this eruption was that in the destruction of the cities, there were preserved in the ruins evidences of Roman civilization in the first century of the Christian era. The famous elder Pliny was one of the victims of the eruption and his nephew Pliny gave a graphic account of the scenes which took place in the last moments of these cities. Even today there is interest in these once-famed centres and excavations have within recent times been able to recreate in the mind of observers the dire events of the great eruption. In the eruptions of 472 and 1631 of Vesuvius particles of the dust fell on Constantinople and some actually lighted on Tripoli in the great eruption of 512. This volcano which had other times of activity in 1794, 1822, 1855, 1871 and as late as 1906 and Etna were evidently the volcanoes mostly in the minds of those who proposed this experiment.

The slopes of Vesuvius possess amazing fertility and there grow the grapes from which the wine "Lachrimae Christi" is made. On its slopes were prior to the war dense populations attracted by the fertility of the volcanic soil despite the dangers of eruption.

The National Geographic Society believes the attempt to cause an eruption of such titanic power would be futile as volcanoes act in their own way.

Swiss Autos Laid Up

Two-thirds of the registered motor vehicles in Swwitzerland have been laid up by gas and tire shortages. Only 20 per cent of the country's prewar requirements of petroleum and its derivatives are available. Tire imports have practically ceased and the result will be an additional withdrawal of vehicles from service, it is revealed in Berne. The quest for domestic mineral oil deposits has not been successful and efforts to get oil from peat and bituminous rock have ended. Gas-producer units are gaining in favor. About 13,000 vehicles are being operated on solid fuels which are rationed and sold by licenced dealers.

SUMMER

How futile seems the wintry blast
Of last December now
With springtime's bud and blossom past,
And fruit upon the bough!

Time was those branches, ermine clad,
Were ghastly things and cold,
But now they seem like children glad
Whose arms have much to hold.

Ere long where peach and apple cling
Will eager boys be found
To climb and shake and try to fling
The young fruit to the ground.

That winter was not meant to stay,
In very certain now,
But summer seemed so far away
When snow was on the bough.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

30 YEARS AGO

JULY 10th, 1913

The Station Street paving deadlock was broken at the meeting of the City Council last evening when the by-law submitted to the paving of the thoroughfare passed its third reading by a vote of 10 to 3.

In the Sunday School rooms at the Tabernacle last evening the members of the congregation attended a hearty welcome to the Rev. H. B. Kenny, who for the second time becomes pastor of the church. He was here twelve years ago and returned to Belleville from Campbellford. The Rev. W. Elliott, his pastor of the Tabernacle, succeeds Mr. Kenny at Campbellford.

Will Play Full Part In Care of Refugees Says Prime Minister

Ottawa, July 10 —(CP)— Prime Minister Mackenzie King said Friday in the House of Commons that the Canadian government will be glad to play its full parts in plans for the care of refugees, which would involve the reception in Canada of certain refugees until peace is restored.

"I cannot state how many additional refugees Canada will be prepared to receive," added Mr. King.

"This depends on many factors not within the control of the Canadian government."

Dispersion of refugees now in neutral European countries and the reception of those who may hereafter escape from Axis territories had to be conducted under international auspices, with consideration given to the possibilities of transport, of repatriation at the end of the war, of uniting families and of useful employment in war industries.

Considerations of security also had to be carefully weighed.

Mr. King said there was outstanding an offer of the Canadian government made last August, to receive for the duration up to 1,000 Jewish children from unoccupied France and separated from their parents. Before effect could be given to the offer, the Germans had occupied the whole of France.

"The offer, however, is still valid.

"If arrangements can be made through neutral countries or the inter-governmental committee for the departure of these children from France, Canada will welcome them admission to Canada."

Canadian Imports Of Cotton Textiles To Be Restricted

Ottawa, July 10 — (CP) — Canadian imports of cotton textile fabrics from Britain will be restricted to those necessary for war requirements and special industrial uses under an arrangement announced simultaneously today by the Prices Board in Canada and the Cotton Board in England.

J. F. H. Turner, Price Board cotton administrator, said that under arrangements approved by the combined production and resources board, Production of cotton textiles for supply to the United Kingdom to Canada will, while present circumstances prevail, be restricted to highly specialized yarn, with a limited poundage of fabrics for war requirements and special industrial uses which cannot be obtained or substituted domestically in Canada or the United States.

The supply of United Kingdom cotton yarns to Canada will be maintained as in past months, but those types of fabrics which cannot be supplied on this continent may still be imported.

Hard, Prolonged Fighting Must Be Expected

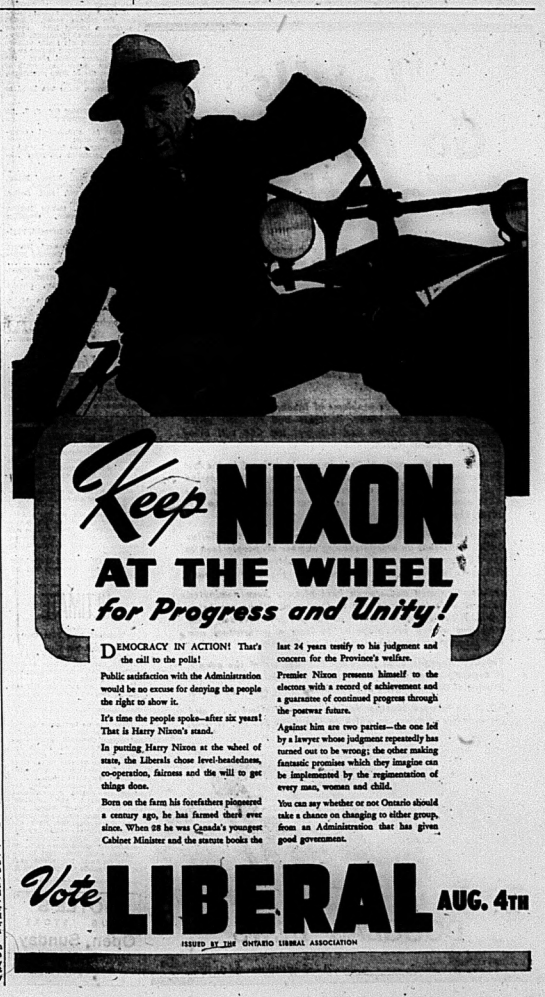
London, July 10 — (CP) — The invasion of Europe now under way through Sicily should not be regarded as "the only landing, nor even as the landing" planned by the Allies, a British observer told correspondents today.

He also warned that "hard and prolonged fighting must be expected" against the island's total defence forces, estimated at 400,000.

Deployment of the Allied striking power along the upper coast of North Africa suggested a strong possibility that the assault on Sicily might be accompanied at any moment by co-ordinated moves elsewhere along the Mediterranean front, it was said.

This possibility also was strengthened by Winston Churchill's House of Commons statement in his personal capacity as Minister of Defence that the "Battle of Europe" now had begun.

The total strength of the Allied forces in the Mediterranean area now has been estimated by Allied sources, but Axis radio broadcasts reported 44 infantry divisions, from 15 to 20 tank divisions, two air-borne divisions, and a parachute battalion ready in Northwest Africa and the Middle East.



London sources declined to comment on the chain of command under Gen. Eisenhower, although there had been no indication of any changes in the team which swept Tunisia clean. This had Gen. Sir Harold Alexander in charge of ground forces and Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Tedder commanding in the air.

No Heavy Influx Of New Potatoes Seen at Present

Despite the fact that the first early potatoes appeared on the Belleville market on Saturday, there will be no great influx of the new crop until much later in the season according to local fruit farmers.

With the price of new potatoes pegged farmers will not dig any great amount of their potatoes until they reached greater maturity. "If I have my potatoes dug by August until they are fully matured there will be at least three times the production than if they were dug now", one farmer stated. "And I don't even think there will be any difficulty in getting the price at that date, either."

The general opinion was that farmers would lose considerable money if they dug their early potatoes before they were fully matured.

Two Disturbing Ways Of Getting Berries For Evening Meal

Two boxes of strawberries caused an eventful day for one woman the other afternoon. Mrs. Ethel Hall, of Bloomfield, she aged a truck loaded with the delicious fruit on the way home to the curb on the other side of the road. She intended to purchase the fruit from door to door, however, when she noticed a car coming some of the berries she bought from the truck rolled into the street, with the thought of how good the fruit was going to taste with cream on it, Mrs. Hall almost forfeited the opportunity of having anything again, for the car coming along the street, for it had not been for the quick action of the driver, would have run over the same part of the pavement that she was travelling on. Mrs. Hall escaped unhurt and an accident was narrowly averted.

The woman, undaunted, purchased two boxes of strawberries from Mrs. Charles Clarke. Her adventures were not over, however. When at the Bloomfield store, the strawberries decided to roll off the back seat with more excitement, and at an inopportune moment, one box split themselves all over the floor. Dismay filled the woman's face as she gazed at the pile of luscious treasure among such other articles as her two gentlemen promptly came to her rescue and helped her to pick up the berries and return it to the house. It is to be hoped that Mrs. Hall's neighbors were suitably appreciated when they finally appeared on the family supper table.

The Clerk, the Stamp And the Buyer

"The customer is always right" may be a good rule from the standpoint of the manager of a store, but from the standpoint of the clerks it is sometimes almost a joke, according to Dan Cupid.

A clerk in a Front Street drug store was telling of the many incidents that bring the "urge to laugh" to the clerk. He thought she had been on a twenty-mile hike, judging by the appearance of the shopper. The shopper was buying the size of the stamp she remains standing uncertainly just before it, gave the clerk the length of the store. "Can I do anything else for you?" the clerk asked, politely. "I'd like a four-cent stamp, please." The clerk returned to the end of the store, procured the stamp and came back to the customer, who placed it carefully forward about two inches in the meantime. After finishing the purchase the customer triumphantly emerged with a five-dollar bill.

Resigned to the injustice of her lot, the clerk again made to the back of the store. The bill is deposited in the cash register, and the change carefully counted. On the other trip to the door and the customer, accompanied by a rather bald-headed man, came to the store suddenly illumines the face of the customer. She smiles sweetly, a trifle apologetically. "Oh, I do believe I need one stamp. I'm sure I didn't think of it before, Do you mind?"

Curtain!

How Not To Get Rich Quick

A local beef buyer purchased a 1,200 pound beef for ten cents per pound, a total of $187.50 with an ultimate sale in view. He transported the animal to the Toronto market and when he paid for the feeding and watering the beast for one day before it was brought up for sale, the cost of transportation to Toronto is not stated but it is assumed that it was by rail. Supposing the gasoline consumed amounted to 10 gallons (a liberal estimate) used cane to $1.00, the feeding at the stock yards added another $2.00, he would have piled up an overhead bill of $190.50 before he could even get a start expense if one does his own calculating in terms of price and weight. The truck-load of pets and round steaks, but this animal had not yet become a steak and it would appear that a fair profit would be made on the massive hamburger.

But such was not the finale to this bull story, the drover returned west with the sum total of 9 cents realized on the sale . . . the bull sold for $187.50. This would be a striking example of how not to get rich quick.

Victory Recipes Planned For Canadians' Health

(By LAURA C. PRYTHE)

Chief, Consumer Section, Department of Agriculture.

The aim is to be my wish, as the title is to be my name, if I did song Nancy Hanna's fine old sentimental state seems to have been realized. Not only do I wish to take a cherry pie with great pleasure, but I can also "look an oyster" according to her words. Perhaps I am not quite so enthusiastic about the latter, but I am not susceptible to cherry pie—but what delicious pie!

Canadian cherries are on the market once more, though there are not as plentiful this year for a hard winter and heavy frosts in the spring did a lot of damage to the buds and blossoms. Nevertheless, there will be a good crop, according to the Department of Agriculture, provided there is not more frost. Here is a recipe adapted for wartime cooking:

Cherry Cream Pie
2 cups pitted, sweet cherries
¼ cup water
¼ cup sugar
1 tablespoon cornstarch
Pastry for 2-crust pie
2 tablespoons cold water
½ cup sugar (additional)
1-3 cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup cold milk
1 egg
1 tablespoon butter
1 teaspoon vanilla.
Baked pie shell

Cook cherries with half cup water ten minutes. Blend sugar, cornstarch and salt with cold water. Add a little hot cherry juice to mixture and add to cherries, cook 10 minutes longer. Cool.

Mix flour, additional sugar and salt. Add milk gradually and cook in hot milk, and cook in a double boiler, stirring constantly for ten minutes. Add egg yolk beaten with a little of the hot mixture, return to double boiler and cook three minutes longer. Remove from heat, add butter and flavoring. Spread cooled cherries in the bottom of baked pie shell. Cover cherries with cream filling. Cool and serve.

If desired, cream filling may be placed in pie pie shell first and the cherries poured over the cream.

Cherry Cottage Cheese Salad
2½ cups pitted, sweet cherries
¼ cup cottage cheese
Lettuce or other greens
Salad dressing or mayonnaise

Fit the cottage cheese, mix lightly with cottage cheese and serve on shredded lettuce or other greens. Garnish with salad dressing and serve well chilled.

Cherry Cobbler

Cottage cheese is easily made at home. Use only freshly soured, clean flavored milk. Put the sour milk into the top of a double boiler and heat until it separates into curds and whey, stirring occasionally. The milk will separate when the temperature has been 160 and 110 degrees F. Add a drop of milk, placed on the inside of the wrist will feel lukewarm at this temperature. Place a double layer of cheesecloth in a strainer and strain the milk.

When the curd is cut, wash thoroughly by pouring cold water over them. Then add salt to taste, a bowl, salt well with a fork, season with salt and pepper and moisten with a little top milk or cream.

Cherry Sauce
1 cup pitted sweet cherries
1 cup water
¼ cup sugar
Pinch of salt.
1 tablespoon cornstarch
Add water to cherries and cook 5 minutes.

Mix sugar, salt and cornstarch and add to cherries and cook 10 minutes longer, stirring occasionally. Remove from heat and add flavorings. Pudding or cold with plain sauce or plain baked custard.

Fatigue Often Sign of a Physical Disorder

Of late, much has been said about fatigue. Fatigue undoubtedly is a lack of energy. But when we realize that there are many conditions causing overstreteched and lack of "pep" we can see that fatigue may be a symptom in all of these conditions. Take, for example, pernicious anemia. This is a progressive disease in which the blood-forming tissues of the body are deficient in red blood cells. This is due to what is commonly known as lack of iron in the blood. Now, iron is a mineral which is found in many foods. Iron is also found in the blood. Iron is also found in the blood. Iron is also found in the blood

SHE REBUILDS OLD LONDON'S BLITZ BABIES

Clinic in War-Blasted Metropolis Makes Good Youth of Under-Nourished, Bomb-Shocked Children

(By BARBARA WACE)
(Associated Press Writer)

London, July 10 (AP) — "I want to train six students from each of the Allied countries—six Danes, six Czechs, six Yugoslavs, etc., and then, when the war is over, I want to take them into the various countries whose wars have been stopped, and set up clinics to work on the under-nourished, bomb-shocked children. You just wait until the war is over and you'll see what I can do!"

Dr. Estrid Dane laughed cheerfully as she swung a six - handed chuckling boy of a year old over one arm and with the free pull him half up to a sitting position with his own muscles.

"That is wonderful for the tummy," she said as the boy, his limbs are straight and he has no deformity. He was bow-legged when him when I first had him—he screamed the house down, and was so cross!"

Mrs. Dane runs a clinic for babies in the East End of London. Her patients are chiefly children suffering from the results of war blitz, pre-natal shock, bomb shock, long hours in air raid shelters.

A Dane by birth, but British by adoption she had an uphill battle at first. At the beginning of the war she had a job as a full time air raid warden in South London. In her free time, she worked on the children gathered in the shelters — straightening their limbs, changing their nervous, timid behavior into boisterous, blooming ones. Trained in Norway by Dr. Neumann-Neurode because she wanted to treat her own son who had a slightly shortened leg, she learned a technique of curing rickets, curvature of the spine and other deformities in infants and toddlers by means of gymnastics.

In Stricken Europe

Her patients in Lewisham increased, and the British War Relief Society paid her a salary so that she could devote all her time to the children. Later the society helped her to set up a larger clinic in the East End. Now 80 children attend each week.

But Mrs. Dane, slim, grey-haired, with an aristocratic sensitive face, is not content with her success. "I want to get ready for the postwar Europe and train the children in occupied countries," she says.

She is already training a Danish and an English pupil and two Yugoslav girls are coming when the other two are ready.

Looking around the room covered with toddling and anxious mother-nursing babies in their laps, she pointed to a child of about two and a half, with an enormous head and thin, rickety legs, standing uncertainly beside the slide. "But he is better now, in spite of me getting him so late. His legs were in such pain he could not bear to put them off at once, and within three weeks he was walking almost properly. But if I had had him earlier it would have been quicker."

"Here Michael," she called to a fair haired, chubby boy of two years. "Now show me how you can swing." Eagerly Michael pulled himself up, swung on the bar, was lifted up and placed on it again. In this time broken by his feet with his toes curled around the bar.

"He fell—was killed in an air raid just before he was born," whispered Mrs. Dane.

"He's fine now, isn't he?" said the boy's mother. "They told me he might have fits, because of the trouble I'd had, but he's all right, isn't he?"

Soldier's Daughter

A blind-eyed, curly - headed laughed eagerly forward watching the motion of the dimpled daughter, and gently climbing up the remedial ladder, which cured her blindness. She looked like little girl above she was a few months old, a nervous, hollow - eyed child, who spent her nights in a shelter. Now, at six, she can get out from under a chair and around the room. It was hard to believe she could ever have been the whimpering bundle of misery Mrs. Dane described.

Turning to an old lady, Mrs. Dane asked "you wouldn't have treated your children this way, would you?" as she pulled out the legs of a three months old girl and started work on her head.

"Indeed no," answered Grandma, "we were almost afraid to touch them in case they would break."

News From Home Town Is Just What Troops Overseas Welcome

Local Events, Doings of Neighbors Make Pleasant Reading

A SUGGESTION

What is important to Canadian servicemen overseas? It is the receiving of regular shipments of smokes, boxes of food now you socks and pajamas, or is it bits of letters, hey-here? The first named items are important, of course, but there is nothing can equal the pleasure of reading long letters from home.

By now practically every man overseas understands that few articles can be written about here and are not expecting them, but they can never resign themselves to the rationing of news from home: what Joe Smith is doing, whom and when Sally Brown, the former girl friend of Jack Jones, is married. There is a great sensation when one hears some special bit of news such as when someone well known in the absent townman does something spectacular or elected to Parliament in the provincial elections, or becomes a member of the city council in municipal elections. The simple fact of the fact that some friend and family have left town to spend a week or two in the North Country brings back memories of former summer holidays when the absent one went to the North Country himself.

Pleasant Memories

These are pleasant memories and should be brought back to mind, revived for he who may remember during the long hours on guard duty under a pall of lightlessness when the whole world seems at a few feet of circumventing him and his companions. To us who are here at home, home town news is not important; we are living it, making it, a part of it, but to him overseas everything that happens at home has taken on a major importance.

But it is hot and sultry and no one feels very much like writing long letters. The best drives every thought out of reach and the result is a short uninteresting letter of which you are thoroughly ashamed when you read it over but are too miserable to rewrite or add to. Perhaps his letters are short and contain practically nothing of his doings, but remember, he is at war, he is right up there where the enemy is within striking distance and every word he utters, every word he writes must be guarded and watched and all he has to write about is himself or, once in every three months, one of others by went for his leave; the people he meets are strangers to you, therefore they are not news.

But, the people you meet every day are his friends, his chums and everyone you mention is his kin. If it is difficult to write long and newsy letters why not send him this stunt: take the local paper each day, read it through and cut out the items you think will be of interest to him. Then obtain the stationery upon which you are writing and then add your own comments. Before you realize it you have written a long letter that will contain more news than you could sit down and puzzle out in a week of writing. And it is simple but it is novel and will bring replies which will repay you for the little spent a thousandfold.

Aroused Bengals Zoom Into Second Place By Winning Eleven of Last 13 Starts

Could Take Lead by Winning Three-Game Series From A's

CARDS WINGING

Detroit Tigers, in a drive reminiscent of their surge to the 1940 pennant, may edge New York Yankees from first place in the American League this weekend.

Victorious in 11 of their last 13 starts the aroused Bengals have zoomed into second place only two games behind the pace-setting Bombers. With the New Yorkers and the third place Chicago White Sox locked to sing it out in doubleheaders today and tomorrow, the Tigers could take over the lead by sweeping the three-game series with Philadelphia even if the Yanks win one.

Led by manager Steve O'Neill, the Tigers already have beaten the A's twice. Their torrid comeback was climaxed by Virgil Trucks' 4-0 shutout last night. Hal White twirled a four-hitter, permitting only two Mackmen to pass first.

Of the Shuttle League's many time, Mort Cooper of the first place St. Louis Cardinals got down Boston Braves with three singles for a 7-0 shutout.

Brooklyn temporarily staved off Pittsburgh's challenge for second place by coming from behind twice to beat the Pirates, 11', in a 9th and wooly game.

Squaws play brought Washington, D.C., a thrilling triumph over Cleveland after Dutch Leonard and Jim Bagby locked up in a magnificent pitching duel for 12 innings.

Manager Joe Cronin's homer, one of a brace, and a pinch hitter, but his effort went for naught when Mike Chartak connected for a decisive inning homer to give St. Louis Browns a 6-4 win over Boston Red Sox.

Ernie Lombardi, husky Giant catcher, went on a rampage at the Polo Grounds, batting four singles in five times at bat. Lombardi's fourth was a double. All his effort accomplished was to get a head for the Chicago Cubs to go 13 innings before winning, 1-0, on Bill Schuster's triple.

Cincinnati whacked out six runs in the 8th inning to come from behind and beat the Phillies, 11-4.

Yankees and White Sox were idle.

ARMY AND NAVY JRS. NO MATCH FOR RELIANCE

Plane Makers Win First Game of City Championship Series 23-4

LUSTY HITTING

Army and Navy Juniors proved no opposition for the Reliance softball nine last evening at the Pats' grounds when the city softball champions the plane makers downed the teen-aged lads by a lopsided 23-4 score.

Poor base running, a flock of errors and many free passes issued by their pitchers spoiled any chances the juniors had of really making a game of the pastime with the Reliance nine also counting runs in every inning. Only in the second, fourth and fifth innings was the winners' total of five runs held to a score of 2 and five runs respectively.

Ken Hall started on the mound for the juniors but wildness caused his downfall and he was relieved in the sixth by Ross Fryer, who later gave way to Boyle who finished the game. All three pitchers yielded a total of eighteen safe singles, while Jack Jenkins was able only to collect five safeties off the combined efforts of Ludington, Gould and Vault.

Teddy Hann with five singles in five trips to the plate was about the most consistent hitter of the night, while Murray Green connected out a trio of triples and Fryte two runner. Besides the homer Wood collected a couple of singles while Cross knocked a triple and a double. Brace of singles by McQuaid also cooked a triple but neglected to touch the next base, and was counted out.

Reliance—Barrtage lf, Henn 3b, Green cf, c, Lalbonne 1b, Ehlter 2b, Bawden rf, Fryte ss, Tuttle c, Laffin main p, St. Louis, Anderson, Yaull.

Toronto, July 10 (CP)—Another Edmonton softballer couldn't resist the chance to be a glamour girl.

Kay Heinz, 21-year-old catcher, has signed with the all-American girls' professional league operating in the Chicago suburbs. This one should be easy for Kay. She started her career at the tender age of 12 as a catcher for the Edmonton Eskimos girls' hardball team.....It's a terrible shock to discover that Porky Levine is signing the dregs and at the comparatively early age of 35. Porky came out of Timmins, Ont., in 1928 to make quite a name as a professional hockey goalkeeper. He withdrew gracefully from hockey, took a job in the Vancouver shipyards. Now, prefab the thought, Porky is reported to be sports columnist of the Boilermakers' weekly. A sports columnist? Shudder! Shudder!

Wee!

Incidentally:

Sports writers squelch flatly the rumours that Edmonton and Calgary may withdraw entered senior interprovincial football union this fall. They say senior football is definitely "out" for this year.....Johnny Mielko of Hamilton, Ont., signed a professional baseball contract with the Hamilton Pony League club last season. How he's back home—because he's too small. He played a few games this year with Jamestown, then went to Batavia in the Pony League. In his first game there he played third base, collected one hit in three attempts. Not bad. Still it was his last game Roger Peckinpaugh, Cleveland great, was in the stands and he formed the Batavia manager Mielko was too small for big league ball.....How to be happy though rich: Dink Carroll of the Montreal Canucks reports the eminent railway president, D. TORONTO LEAFS WIN TWIN BILL FROM THE BISONS

Increase Margin Over Newark at Top of the International Loop

ORIOLES BEATEN

By The Associated Press

Gerry Bassey was back at his Buffalo way in his home pitching as he has been without fall on virtually every work day this spring and summer — after having put in a full day there yesterday and then pitching a nine-inning International League contest after dark.

Bassey is one of the few war workers who is making a success of spasmodic appearances in professional sports although he was charged with Buffalo's 2-1 loss to the league-leading Toronto Leafs in the second game of last night's doubleheader. The other was also won in the Hi's hook-smart, this Tuesday, but he's dumb as' I'll fool him."

Gene Desautels, Leaf catcher and smashed a bone shattering punch on the nose of Jim Ripple, Bison pro- file in the first round. "Flesh, bone and cartilage all mixed before that sickening wallop. The nose was broken with virtually the first punch."

From that first punch Gene landed his bag of flesh tricks and slashed away like a human buzz saw as he had converted Ripple- ney's face into a horrible crimson mask. From the start Gene was the assult and the unstoppable flow of blood. Ripple's left eye swelled and half-choked after two minutes of the first round and was not opened with Gene's attack. It was too wild and fast for ordinary counters. Ripple's punches caught from strokes, rubber legs," says Arthur

Today, with the question of contact sports as a body-builder comes to the forgeground, Desautels remembers his fight with Harry Greb. He remembers the nausea developed from the blood he swallowed to hide the extent of his injuries. He remembers the blood smeared canvas, fight fans yelling to have the fight stopped and Greb's fierce protest as each ghastly round ended. "Those memories are enough to go into contact sports today, he continues.

"The final round topped the whole thing. Greb was out on his feet specta," he adds. "It found Greb faster and stronger than I had been in the fight. It found Tunney with an undefended target. You could see Greb's fist land from strokes, Tunney was a beaten human. His bag was gone. It was the same as the savage Harry Greb, one of the greatest fighters ever known, was plastering the daylights out of him as symbolic of a decade of brutality as the history of contact sports knows.

"Hours after the fight when Greb was celebrating his triumph and position of championship in a Broadway night club, Tunney was still at the Garden, beaten and weak from loss of blood.

When Tunney was finally able to leave the Garden after the fight he was taken to his home in New Jersey, where he spent almost two months recuperating, and as a result of his wisdom and value as contact sports. He is now against fighting of women, and subsequently defeated Harry Greb four times, but the fight on Soldier bond a profound effect on his attitude toward contact sports, concludes the article.

Did You Know

Babe Sharkey, a heavyweight wrestler of some prominence right now, is revealed as a former football star under Pop Warner at Temple. Babe has been matched with Sharkey. It was Charlie (Dutch) Commerford and he hails from San Antonio way and not Canada, as advertised.

Bill Terkuhle, who wants back in baseball, weighs 30 pounds less than when he was an Indian in 1941.

Belmont Park racing attendance was 17 per cent. under the 1942 marks, but the betting was so great it showed a 3.54 gain.

Four members of the Cleveland Indians make their home in that city. They are Jim Bagby, Mel Harder, Al Milnar and Roy Mack.

Jim Ripple, veteran slugger with Toronto, has been in more than 1,000 baseball International games.

Two San Francisco boxers won't be drafted. They're deaf. Their names are Silent Escobar and Leroy Pake.

Ben Miner, who was the first president of the Washington Senators is 85 years old. He recently saw his first night ball game. It's all right, excepting for the insects the lights attract, he says.

Gunder Hagg trained all winter by running in heavy snow. It brought him fame.

Eddie Arcaro, just about the best jockey in the business today for anybody's money, who has been riding since childhood, became a shoe- away back in October for rough riding. A fine is rumored in the very near future according to the current edict by Washington. This enforced idleness has been worth many thousands to Willard Garfield "Jimmy" Eddie and the New York Jockey Club steward's feel now that they have been sufficiently punished. Certainly there is no better example of a jockey who tries so hard to win that he is accused of bronco-busting tactics and a jockey who just doesn't try, like Arcaro.

Don't be surprised if The Tigers' Dick Wakefield and Washington's Cecil Travis will face the National League All-Star team which will be selected in Cleveland on Tuesday, July 13. He will probably be chosen to replace Ted Williams or Joe Gordon, Yankees who is on the injured list.

MORGAN TO MEET JERRY MONAHAN

Former Masked Wolf Says 'Toar' Will Get Ears Pinned Back

Having thrilled the largest wrestling crowd ever in Sin Is way to the Hume arena, promoter Frank Tunney, of the Queensbury A.C. picked a tough one in "Toar" Morgan, the United States fighting Marine, who was signed to meet "Irish Jerry" Monahan, the former masked wolf, in his next bout in Belleville.

Morgan won for himself friends and admiration by beating Al Duncan in the Six second grapple contest and no more popular wrestler ever graced the Hume arena than the young Marine. He is now at Guadalcanal. However, promoter Tunney didn't pick any plum for the "Fighting Marine" when he signed him to meet Monahan here next week. Monahan says he fears no wrestler in the world, even though he respects Morgan's war record. "I've been in this game for years he'll make matters so interesting for Morgan he'll wish he was back in Guadalcanal," Jerry says. "He's only an upstart. I took all the Billing that and won my first 4 each beat an ex-Marine I'm sure slipping" significantly added Monahan as he signed papers to meet Morgan.

As an added attraction and to bring the various opponents face to face in a new attraction in action promoter Tunney again signed Jerry Monahan and Al Duncan to meet Al Dunlop in a special bout. You may remember that Al Duncan was not beaten by Monahan, but had his own bout, when he fell out of the ring. No doubt he'll please the Belleville fans by matching Dunlop into oblivion, and that should be music to Belleville fans, Tunney suggested matchmaker Tunney as he guarantees his next two show he his No. 1 attraction of the year.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 111

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Hello, there. Haven't you been following these Horse Sense bridge lessons? Let me tell you what I have been talking about so far. Then you can take over.

Partners tell each other how many tricks they can take and what they like for trump, if any. Each high card (ace, king or queen) is a no-trump trick. Each high card or short card is a suit trick.

When you bid a suit, it must be biddable. When you assist a suit, you must have adequate support. With two equal length suits, first bid the higher rank. With different lengths, first bid the longer.

An opening bid of one shows five tricks, four high cards, two sure tricks. With not more than two tricks, with not more than two tricks, he bids.

Follow the order of choice in T-A-K-I-N takeout, no-trump. A takeout is a bid in your suit, an order to a higher partner's suit. No-trump is a bid in no suit.

A takeout to a new suit forces for one round. A one-jump bid forces to game. An unbiddable one-jump response shows two sure tricks and enough tricks to help partner make game.

That just about covers the high spots in what I have been saying in this column. If some of it does not register, don't worry about it. More details are coming.

Your partner starts with an opening bid of one heart and you have this hand:

♠ A 4 3
♥ K Q 10 8 5 3
♦ A J 6
♣ 5 4 2

You have no biddable suit for a takeout. But you have adequate support for your partner's heart suit. So, you should assist in hearts.

Also your hand contains tricks enough to make a game with what partner has promised, with that and two sure tricks, you have enough, for a game, to make a one-jump assist. Bid three hearts.

That will make you study a look of intelligence. On you it is becoming.

Occasionally palaces of the Fleet Air Arm provide a pub, or two.

The Invasion force was rathered amid the most amazing and wild rumours about future operations ever heard in Britain since the start of war. Talk would start on the rounds about a possible German invasion of Britain in 1940 was nothing compared to what could be heard this time in London and in towns and ports of England and Scotland.

Only a Few Knew

Only a few of the highest authorities in Whitehall knew the full importance of the expedition—its target and its timetable. Only a few people outside the actual force knew it was coming.

Fleet Street, centre of London's newspaper world, was startled to see it was just that — rumor.

Rumor because as this was being written to have confused everyone, and stories of the Canadians themselves there was inevitable speculation.

The Canadians I am with here were in the south of England on regular duty. Then, they found themselves, and meanwhile staff officers were "working" on a "suspected on special duties." People seemed to be marshalled from a train round the country in strange places.

Canadian officers and men did not let speculation get out of hand, as far as I could see. I heard most of it in quiet corners of messes and in the privacy of headquarters offices that probably heard, as with us anybody else who was not "in the picture," and even I knew practically nothing. I sensed there was a big operation in the making—that was all.

Need for Discretion

The public relations unit with which war correspondents work was a soul of discretion. It had to make full arrangements for press facilities, communications, transportation and attachment to units, but we could see that it, chief every day and not get a glimmer of an idea of who, what, when or where.

Then it started. I was dining one night at an Aldershot mess when the F. E. officer said privately, "Get your kit ready for there are some interesting manoeuvres to cover."

I followed instructions, completed it up lit in a hurry, and left a comfortable billet without even a goodbye to the English family, who had been so hospitable for three years.

I did the ordinary things I had been looking for months on weekly visits to London, and played dumb when it came to speculation about our destination or the Canadian troops.

The next day I joined a Canadian force, which had completed its move.

No considerable German defence formations as yet appeared on the islands, this source said, and new arrivals have come simply to bolster Italian fighting units and to train with them.

A Dense Smoke

Before the Canadians embarked they had taken down their pashes and "Canada" shoulder titles. Spare equipment they might have been British troops. But when they shouted to girls on the streets of the towns through which they marched or made friendly comments to civilians they sounded pure Canadian.

Wait Became Tedious

The long wait before sailing eventually became tedious. Finally we were told we had just one day to get mail ready. Then, after many letters were taken ashore, censored and mailed from the expedition ships, extended far off into the distance.

Between practice landings and exercises ashore the troops continued to lounge around and talk of what the future held.

One's convictions swayed from time to time, but what whole thing would be cancelled — an awful thought — a speculation on the target. There was not a whisper on our ship who knew the target, or even the way in which the attack, exception of the colonel.

Colonel Is Introduced

I heard it mentioned in all seriousness that an attack on Japanese in Burma, or an operation that force would be used.

Then we thought of the northern army fresh in the mess decks and there was boating, as there usually is about every day. But the men seemed as happy as most troops. They played cards, or shot dice.

There is "no" best unit in the army" but I think the force which I accompanied certainly is considered in the British Army which had been in the original North Africa landings with the skipper winning the Distinguished Service Cross for handling the ship with gallantry at the height of Algiers during an intense bombing.

On the decks were Canadian and British infantry in battledress (their tropical uniforms were hidden in their packs) as well as naval ratings and officers and Royal Marines.

Along the sides of the ship were assault landing craft along on special davits. It is 25 feet and craft, 40 feet long with a 10-foot beam. Each craft has a ramp which is to a crew of four, which carry assault infantry to the shore.

The British and Canadian troops were all in the mess decks and most officers were lucky enough to get cabins four in each.

The first night aboard ship in port a meeting of all officers was called.

Today's daylight raiders set out shortly after 1.30 a.m. The first Liberators flying at an altitude of 24,000 and 30,000 feet, took a four hour to pass over one coastal point. Other formations were known in relays as one group of fighters returned, another took off.

Hour of Grace

CHAPTER 6

During that week Meegan's group of children increased in size by several ten. . . . There was little trouble, preferring to dig in the back garden than go in the house. There was no accidents or scares reported. Each morning Meegan met them when she called for them and delivered them when she saw Mrs. Lester safely and pleasantly but she saw Erica only at a distance. She knew Erica only as a shadow. She wondered what would say were she to tell her that Mrs. Lester's children were no trouble, were a trouble than Dora.

For the two Lester children had a natural desire to help the others and spend their time amusing the smaller ones.

And one day Meegan came home to find an invitation from Clare to a cocktail party. She opened it on the porch where her mother was busy knitting and where Toby was sending he to sweep on the glider. And as she read she went pale from a sudden burst of terror upon her. How clever of Clare not to let anyone see her until she appeared as a hostess and therefore at her best. How like her to plan a dramatic entrance into their lives again! Cheerful, gay, elegantly dressed on the day Clare had left Baltimore. She had been cruel to her walking hurt and covered her face lest any of her neighbors see it. But perhaps she was talking unfair. People change and are sorry.

Her mother looked at her and smiled. "Tea, Toby received one, too. It's this Saturday afternoon, isn't it? How nice. I'm sure it will be a wonderful party."

Meegan gave a quick turn of her head which caused her hair to stir on her neck. The hours on the beach with Clare had tanned her face to the pink sharkskin playsuit and straw sandals on her feet. She looked more less fragile than she had a week ago.

Slowly she slipped the invitation back into the envelope.

Toby opened his eyes and smiled at her.

"Aren't you going to accept, Meegan? Sure you are. You haven't any choice, you know. Clare never did anything to you."

"That's true, Toby."

Their mother said kindly, "But of course you're going, dear. You know how loyal you are to Adele but she always says Clare has made a brilliant marriage and you can't afford it."

"I said, 'You don't have to accept.' Like the hostess to have a good time at a party. As a master of fact, there have been very few hostesses I've liked."

"How Toby" his mother said. Meegan looked from one to the other. Yes, they would go, they would all go because it would be rude not to. They would be enchanted by the event. Clare would still giving commands not with a sledge hammer perhaps or crowbar but with a large and jeering good but with a large and jeering good but with a large and jeering good humor, vast intelligence and distinguished mind. She thought it. I shall see Payne again and I shall be—Cold.

The thought she felt a curious mixture of poignancy and pleasure. It was as though, at last, she had certainty, they had promised to meet again.

"I take it then that you're going," she said to Toby.

"Sure thing. Wouldn't miss it for the world. We'll all be together."

Meegan went into the house and up the broad stairway to her room, a room that was so much her own that when the house would no longer be hers the room would continue to be stamped with her thoughts and actions in it. It was a large, high-ceilinged room with frilly white organdie curtains at the windows and white wall paper splashed with blue flowers somewhat that faded now. The furniture was old mahogany, and the chest of drawers and the bookcase and bed had been made by her grandmother. It was a room that was a haven and a refuge after sharing a bedroom with her mother in the small city apartment. One of the worst things Adele had done to a girl, she had thought often lately, was not to have a room of her own. Here the stone fireplace was associated with her father's face as Adele better and he had used to bed as a child. Now so many of the things he had wished for and had him would never be said. Death was irreparable.

She walked to the window, facing the island dotted with pretty houses and beyond them the beach and the bay. It was a balmy summer scene and its peace and beauty lifted her heart. But only briefly though the sun was still dazzling, it was as though a shadow and a storm-shadow and furiously burst spreading confusion and darkness. And the storm was not the war; nor was it a combustible thing of the heavens. It was Clare, whose hands struck sulphur as though lighting a flame . . .

She thought of Paul whose entitlement in the Army Air Corps and whose subsequent training in Texas had made Meegan and his mother feel thought was a hopeful romance. To forget Payne, to begin remember his life face and sandy hair and deep set blue eyes, the gentle humor and the love for her. But she did not respond and the laziness of his letters, even the shameful antipathy. She could go to him for the rest of her life and writing him cheerful letters and hoping and praying that he would not die in the air . . . but she could not marry him. No amount of self-lecturing on the wisdom of such a comparison (Paul had said that he could well afford to take care of her mother) had convinced her that she could go through with it.

She had seen Payne only once, the day of his wedding and later at the reception at the island club house. And it was not how he looked or what he had said but what he had not said to her imagination that so impressed her that she had not been able to put him out of her mind. She had read about him in the newspapers, for Clare had made the most of the story of a local girl's marriage to Payne Chandler, the last of the line of chins of industrialists, educators and statesmen. The bridesmaids had been the best, were mentioned as well as the bride's gown. Lovely as it undoubtedly was, it was not the gown that had been interest in travel and sports. Also he was said to take a keen interest in the care of racehorses, the same try-covered, slender-steepled church at which she was her bridegroom had a soldier's bearing he had stood, his deep set eyes looking at the lovely, lamp-cropped fair hair. His face might have been the face of the lie betraying excitement in his eyes. His eyes seemed to have had an electrifying effect upon her, making her, unseen, unknown, a young girl in the sixth year wearing a blue dress and a hat with cornflowers on it, more beautiful by being alive than she had ever been before or since.

Then Clare had risen, so beautiful, and they had been married. The ice phase of her eight table rang.

Adele said, "I suppose you got an invitation . . ."

"Toby and I both. Did you?"

"You don't think for a moment that Clare thinks I've let a little thing like Jerry's death upset my life. Are you going?"

"Yes, Toby and I are going together." It had been a long time since Toby and Adele had been anywhere together. That in itself was an event.

Adele said, "Oh no, I listen. It I've been wrong and she's okay, I won't be a long face around here this summer."

"You're very fair. I'm glad you feel that way."

"My husband is in Washington. Something in the government. Clare knows. I know. Europe and Africa like a book and they're dedicated to the conception of a captain. One of the girls I met Washington told me. She also works in Washington. He can't commission, of course, that's one of the reasons they took a house here. All of which makes us even but . . . Oh, maybe, maybe, maybe . . .

"Don't sound so threatening," she added in an airy laughter.

Adele's voice was heavy. "I've settled a long time ago, thanks."

Toby was dressed and waiting and she had only begun to dress. Her mother knew she could not hurry. Her thoughts were rattling about in her head like pebbles in a tin can. She slipped into her dress, sat down at the dressing table and brushing her hair up into a conservative pompadour and then picked up the silver-backed brush, screwing in her ears small imitation pearl earrings. Perfect. She wanted to look older today, she wanted to look poised, she wanted that they treated her as though they were an infant. They couldn't see di.ard the little hurts and slights of childhood and what was important to grow up in one, becoming bigger hurts and slights as they grew older. Her thoughts were no good now. The past and the present were meaningless today and there would be furious if she kept him waiting. Meegan. He has a right in such a good mood all week. He has been so happy. She has been more no one on the island ever wore a hat with cornflowers and went downstairs where Toby, immaculate and handsome in white linens, was waiting with their mother. Meegan thought, I wish I didn't think every time I see Toby in a white suit I sell how much it costs to have one laundered. I'd like him to wear a fresh one every day . . .

Toby grinned, caressed his long legs and got up. "You certainly look long enough," he said. But he was smiling, teasing her. The tenseness of her relaxed. It was wonderful to see him smile, to have him tease her . . .

"You look wonderful, dear," Elinor Meegan said. "I like your hair that way. It looks good out from your face to a better advantage. Have a good time and remember me to Clare and tell her to come to see me. I'll call on her as soon as possible, she always does things so well." Toby had emptied look that interested Meegan as they walked to the car. She knew she had been staring at him when he asked, "Well, what's the matter with me now?"

"Oh, nothing."

"You wouldn't tell me, would you? Your face always gives you away. You can't hide anything in your head that face. I might add that it's very becoming. You look the best . . ."

"Thank you, Toby. Thank you very much. A compliment from you makes me feel very festive. I'm glad you're pleased. Hands look care of them for you. Paul anyone . . ."

She smiled. "Paul isn't very articulate, you know."

"No, he isn't. He's a nice guy but when you've said that about him, you've said everything. Not much imagination. I hope you don't marry him. You'd stagg . . . and I don't mean you wouldn't eat well." In the car he gave her a long inquisitive look. His eyes quickened and his mouth pulled mischievously at one corner. "If this party of Clare's is any criterion of the one I went to in Rome, it will have this staid little community on its ears." When Meegan's eyes opened wide, he laughed. "Yes, I saw Clare in Rome this summer before Dad died. She had a party to end all parties, a real Roman bacchanal that would have made the old emperors green with envy."

Munda's Defences Being Pulverized By Allied Blows

By MURLIN SPENCER

Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied air blows against the Southwest Pacific, July 18 — (AP) — The reduction of Munda's defenses by pulverizing blows from warships, bombers and artillery of Allied invasion forces is now underway.

Japan's air forces in the Upper Solomons, the key to conquest of the Central Solomons — was raked Friday by the combined forces of United States Naval units; rocked by 1,000-pound bombs dropped from more than 100 torpedo and divebombers; and blasted by bursting shells of artillery on nearby Rendova Island.

The powerful three-way bombardment, reported from Allied headquarters, presumably is the prelude to a land invasion of the group already on New Georgia.

The more than 70 tons of bombs concentrated on bivouacs and supply dumps in the Munda defence area yesterday were said by a spokesman for Allied headquarters to constitute the heaviest air blow yet to fall on that much-bombed air base.

Prior to the daylight air raid, United States destroyers moved in to treacherous waters just off Munda before dawn yesterday and poured deadly accurate shells on the target area.

Little Benny's Note Book

I went to the market with me dad and he was talking to one of the butcher's, and the butcher was waiting on a lady asking for a nice tender steak.

Being a fat lady with a lot of rings, and she also had on a coat I only have 5 pointis left, I had no idea, but many pointis, and so the butcher said, Oh well, I've got a few extra pointis myself, and I guess I can let you have the steak, Mrs. Brown.

Which he did, wrapping it up for her, and she took it away, and I said to him I said, Now really, I mean, I mean really, that's the sort of thing nobody should do, and I know who that woman is, she's one of the richest women in the neighborhood and that's the sole and only reason why the steady stream of rationing seems to have a null and void meaning so far as she's concerned. Everybody should be treated exactly the same, I said, in rationing and maximum for all, that's the whole idea of the point system and I think it's a shame, she said.

I'm sorry, Mrs. Potts, I try to treat all my customers just the same, and just to prove it, you tell me your husband is very fond of bacon so I think I can manage to give you a quarter pound of bacon along with whatever meat you have with, for the butcher said, and he said, Now, will it was for myself I wouldn't think of excepting it, but just for the sake of the principle, I suppose it's all right. I mean just to prove that money isn't everything and we're living in a real democracy after all. And besides, I'm sure I often give you more points than the meat is worth, with the bone and the fat and everything exerting such an influence on the scales, so I'm glad to see you owe me something anyway if I'm any judge of butchers and meat.

And when pop came home for lunch he was going to have bacon for breakfast tomorrow and why, and pop claimed it's a wonderful world.

TY COBB THINKS BASEBALL SHOULD BE CONTINUED

Claims Some Teams Will Make More Money This Year Than Last

DISAGREES WITH RUTH

"I think baseball should continue by all means," declared Tyrus Raymond Cobb when at the Georgia Peach, served the Detroit Tigers in the capacity of vice-president, and later for two decades manager. Cobb, one of the greatest of the game in the diamond sport, declared he saw no reason why the game should not survive in wartime.

The immortal Ty was taking exception to a declaration by his old opponent, Babe Ruth, that baseball, who recently expressed the view that major leagues banded together before the current season is ended and the two circuits should not operate next year in any event.

Now in the city of Detroit Tiger, in an interview at Detroit, comes out with the statement that at least some baseball clubs will make more money this year than under normal circumstances. This, he said, is the feeling affected. In one respect alone, he thinks baseball is close to the home base last spring.

Another change has been made in the picked team of the American League for the all-star contest in Philadelphia July 8. According to the replacement of Frank McCormick of Cincinnati Reds, leading first baseman Elbie Fletcher of Pittsburgh Pirates. Outfielder Dilmeda Walker ran the tournament.

Neither fighter had much to say before the appearance in their dressing rooms after what probably was the shortest work-out of the fight game. "I thought it would be quick, but it was quicker than that," said Pete Peterson, who not only took the Canadian championship but retained his British and Empire titles, Said Walker: "I'm sorry."

The fight was recognized by the New York State Athletic Commission, the British Boxing Board of Control as for the world championship.

In normal times 23-year-old Bobby Riggs would be a highly-successful financial tour of the United States and Canada. Now he'll have to wait for the end of the war and the reduction from the Royal Air Force where he's a sergeant physical training instructor. He never has fought outside Britain.

Hardest hit of all games in Britain by restriction of equipment is tennis. Dozens of clubs are closing their doors because they can't get and there'll be little civilian tennis this summer.

Utmost manufacturers can do now is to clean and refurbish the old ones. But since the cloth play can be renewed — and the cloth that wears first — the life of a ball is prolonged only a little.

About the only high-class tennis in British nowadays comes in Red Cross matches where several of the best players in the country, including Captain Fermor Davis Cupper, Flt. Lt. Walter Martin of Liverpool, meet up. Some of these are allowed but three balls a court. The moral is that a tennis-minded fellow coming over from Canada should stick a few tennis balls in his kit bag.

Score one for the ladies: Pam Barton, British women's golf champion, hit a 40-foot putt on the 18th green to outdrive W. J. Cox, Wimbledon Park professional and a noted long hitter, and Percy Allen, another of Britain's good professionals, by one stroke after ruefully that it was the first time she had ever been outdriven by a woman.

Britain, Canada and United States Ready to Meet Production Needs

By JACK WILLIAMS

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, July 10 — (CP) — Members of the combined British production and resources board today gave assurances at a meeting attended by Britain, the United States and Canada that they would meet production needs of an all-out offensive.

From our standpoint I can say we will be ready — we are ready," said Donald Nelson, chairman of the United States war production board.

"I think we can all say that," added Munitions Minister Howe, Canada's representative on the combined board.

"We thoroughly agree," said Sir Henry Self, United Kingdom deputy minister of supply.

Mr. Nelson said he did not consider British supplies had yet reached a basic minimum and he expressed the opinion that more would be necessary. Large inventories had been built up, he said, but these from the full impact of war but these now were being rapidly reduced.

Sir Henry cited the gasoline situation as "very serious" and warned that in the event of U.S. entry into the war there would be sufficient petroleum products for only a year.

Warning that he was making a prediction and not speaking of present conditions, he said "The rubber situation can come steadily from all of the Far East."

THROUGH THE DIAL SIGHT

A Weekly Column Devoted to the Activities of the Members of the Armed Forces and Abroad

When it comes to family active service records, possibly no other centre of its size in the Dominion of Canada can better the record of Belleville.

Three brothers of one family serving in the Canadian Armed Services is comparatively unusual in this city while there are also quite a number of families with four brothers in the services. There were the four Pepper boys; the four sons of Mr. Harry Boyle and the four sons of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Turner. Today we heard of another family with four boys in the services.

Three sons in the army and one in the navy is the family record of Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Shortt, Moira Street East. Jason, Wilfred and Cecil are in the army while the second youngest boy, Albert chose the navy. All are 23 years of age.

Leon, the oldest boy in the series is now overseas serving with a Canadian army unit as cook. His service in this capacity is an illustration of the modern army practice of choosing men with experience for the job. He worked at Black's Meat Market before his enlistment and now is carrying out his civilian profession of serving up hams for the boys.

Truck driving for York Trading was Wilfred's peacetime employment but he craved something faster and more exciting so he chose despatch riding when he enlisted last January. He is now in training at Camp Borden.

The two younger Shortt brothers followed their call to choice of profession. They worked for the railroad before the urge to enlist led them in search of a uniform. Albert now 18, is in training at Halifax as a seaman after enlisting last February, while the youngest, Cecil, 17, is in training at Peterboro. "He just wanting to be in uniform like his brothers," commented his mother.

All were born in Belleville and attended St. Michael's.

The time of their lives is what the personnel of the Belleville Air Cadet squadron claim they are having as they get more or less accustomed to the routine of their summer "camp" among the airmen and airplanes at Mountain View Bombing and Gunnery School. Approximately 40 members of the Belleville squadron are enjoying a ten day holiday at the training station and despite the fact that there is lots to do all in fun they claim to be enjoying it immensely.

Squadron Leader Air Cadet Officer Jack Wilson, prior to leaving for Montreal, left Tuesday's activities at the station but nevertheless the cadets are advised to bring their bathing suits when they camp to camp on Tuesday. According to reports the boys are putting their swimming periods as a suitable pool has been under construction, all sponsored by the airmen themselves.

Every unit of the British Army soon will have an "Ideas Box." Officers, N.C.O.'s, and men will drop into the box any idea that occurs to them for improvements or economies. One stipulation is made. Complaints will go into the waste basket. The army has drawn men from all kinds of careers. Scores are inventors and they will be encouraged to put their ideas into the common pool. The boxes will be under the company commander. Good suggestions are passed on to the Major General of Administration. Those of outstanding merit will reach the War Office in London.

One of the most popular young men in the Foxboro district, Eugene M. Spencer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Spencer of that village, had the pilot's wings of the Royal Canadian Air Force pinned on his tunic at a wings presentation ceremony at the Centralia Service Flying Training School, Exeter, this afternoon. His brother, sister Lois and brother Cecil saw him become flt. Pilot Spencer.

Born in Foxboro, Mr. Spencer went to school in the village and attended Belleville collegiate. Following school days he entered the employ of the Bata Shoe Company when they first started at Frankford and remained as one of their office staff until his enlistment in the R.C.A.F.

He attended initial training school at Toronto, took his elementary flying training at nearby Oshawa and went to Centralia for the completion of flying training. Best of luck 'Gene.

Stationed at their Picton training centre for the past several months, the 12th Canadian General hospital unit of the R.C.A.M.C., under the command of Col. L. E. Carr of Hamilton, has completed training and personnel is waiting word of their posting.

Two hundred and twenty-six strong, the unit consists of 15 doctors, 30 nurses, the regular administration officers of an army camp and 140 of other ranks, chiefly nursing and ward orderlies and cooks. When the unit goes active it will be able to look after approximately 600 patients.

While waiting for their posting the personnel is learning something about the art of gunmanship, marching, saluting and other military etiquette. Also they are receiving instruction when uniforms with snap shoulder tabs and rank insignia are noticed on Belleville streets as they have been issue in this city.

Word was received in the city this week to the effect that Douglas Carr had been commissioned overseas. Lieut. Carr is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Carr, formerly of this city, and was one of the original members of the 34th Battery which left at the outbreak of the war when the 34th was first mobilized.

In the Argyll Light Infantry ("Tank) it's Sergeant Major "Doc" Ross these days. The popular non-commissioned officer received his promotion recently.

Other promotions listed on Part 2 orders for the Argyll Light Infantry this week included Cpls. P. Fisher, P. C. Morris, G. H. Burley, Sgt. Hine, W. J. Latimer, C. W. Lott, S. Gaplin (cook), and D. H. Wood, all of whom were promoted to the rank of sergeants. Lance Cpls. Sam Goodman and C. B. Matthews and Tpr. Geo. Elderly were also promoted to the rank of sergeants.

Promotions to corporals this week included R. Bradford and C. Spencer while Tpr. Jack Murphy has one stripe as an acting Lance Corporal.

Word was received in the city this week that Sgt. Jack Bear of the R.C.A.F. has arrived safely overseas and immediately got in touch with his brother Sgt. Dick Bears of the R.C.A.F.

The sergeant was asking recruits why walnut is used for the butt of a rifle.

"Because it has more resistance," volunteered one man.

"Because it is more elastic.

"Wrong!"

"Perhaps it's because it looks nicer than any other kind," said another timidly.

"Don't be dumb," snapped the sergeant. "It's simply because it is the only kind in the regulations."

Good heavens, Gus, close that refrigerator door! Can't you see the mayonnaise is growing?

Encouraging reports are coming back from Petawawa Camp where the 34th Battery is training at summer camp. The boys are putting in active training and they really love it.

The same situation holds good for the Argyll Light Infantry (tank) when they go to summer camp at Ottawa later in the month. If you have no particular place to spend your summer holidays, and want to get paid for it in the bargain, here's a splendid opportunity to learn the fundamentals of modern warfare, get fit and have two weeks' vacation all at the expense of the government.

Recruits for the reserve army in Belleville are needed to bring the Argyls to full strength before they leave for Connaught ranges in October and summer camp. Lieut.-Col. D. Donnelly, officer commanding the Argyll Light Infantry, is anxious to have his unit as near to full strength as possible before entraining for Ottawa. Civilians interested in reserve army training and who may be interested in enjoying two weeks' vacation are invited to report at the armouries for further details.

Lieut. Knablitsch, who has been training officer for the the Argyll Regiment past few decks, was recalled to Ottawa the other day. It was Lieut. Knablitsch who had out the plans for the Argyll training grounds in the Jones' Creek area.

Big Ones First

On the parade grounds marched the recruits, row on row, as they paraded men, rubbed his muscles and had another cod.

"Hang it all," he barked at the captain, "what's the idea of parading al the big men in front of the smaller men?"

"Sorry, sir," explained the captain. "It seems that the sergeant was wearing a fresh shop before he enlisted."

CapitalCloseups

By JOHN DAFFERNEW
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, July 10 —(CP)— Probability—but not certainty—that soon after the war ends to provide for amendments to the British North America constitution without reference to the British parliament are seen in statements this week by spokesmen for the four major political parties.

It is generally acknowledged that now is not the time to go into the problem, but the resolution adopted by parliament with a view of postponing redistribution of federal constituencies brought the matter into parliamentary debate.

These are extracts from the speeches of representatives of the Liberal, Progressive Conservative, New Democracy and C.C.F. groups:

Justice Minister St. Laurent—"I think that there is a problem developed whereby it will be possible for us to deal here in our country with seven to be registered, for that is what it really amounts to, the size statute of another parliament."

Hon. J. T. Haig (Prog. Con. Manitoba)—"What I have to suggest . . . is that at the beginning of next session we have a committee of, say, 40 members . . . On that committee representation are needed in the British North American Act are any of its principles to make any difference to redistribution affected."

Rev. R. G. Mansel (N.D. Macleod)—"Now, we now are a nation capable of running our own affairs; we should not therefore have to go to the parliament of the United Kingdom to change our constitution. That is my own view."

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader—"This (resolution) is a roundabout and unsatisfactory way of doing something which we ought to be able to do in a direct way. The procedure of passing a resolution by this House and then by the British North Sea Majesty to do something now is outmoded and entirely out-of-date."

Those Taxes

The page boys in the House of Commons got a look at Minister of Finance Ilsley's increased income tax schedules, it's cut down their earnings.

Not their pay from the government, of course, but their tips have suffered. One young lad whose name we didn't manage to get, that tips used to average a couple of dollars a day for each member for now they're down to about 50 cents.

"Shucks, it isn't like it was in the old days," our informant added with a sigh. "It was good times for us. Up goes the income tax and down come the tips."

His voluminous pockets indicate that the "best Tucker" in the House is Dr. McCrae (Lib, Vancouver Burrard).

When the House of Commons reconstitutes itself sometime next the other day, one of the witnesses was Mr. R. G. Fanjhan, president of the Canadian National Railways. Hon. Martin, parliamentary assistant to Labor Minister Mitchell and member for Ontario's Essex East riding, thought it a good time to campaign for a new station in Windsor. Mr. Martin—"The cost would be a d . . . . . disgrace."

Chairman Gray Turgeon (Lib, Carlboo)—"Do you want that on the record?"

Mr. Martin (with emphasis)—"Yes!"

Ten Year Men

One member who believes in advertising like his home constituency is G. K. Fraser (Prog. Con. SYRACUSE, 9 MAJOR SICILIAN TOWNS CAPTURED BY ALLIES

British Armies After Taking Syracuse Race Northward Toward Catania on E. Coast

Seven Counter-Attacks by Enemy Tanks Are Turned Back—2,000 Prisoners Captured, Mostly Italians—100-Mile Stretch of Coast Involved in Action

400 ENEMY VEHICLES SMASHED BY PLANES

By DANIEL LE LUCE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, July 12 —(AP)— Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's British armies raced toward Catania from captured Syracuse in a tremendous push up Sicily's east coast today after Allied forces had captured nine other important ports and towns, turned back seven counter-attacks by enemy tanks and captured 2,000 prisoners, mostly Italians.

City of 53,000

Heading units of his famous British 8th Army — with which the Canadian forces are associated for this operation — Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery plunged toward Misalina and the strategic airdrome some 8 miles northward after securing firmly the advantageous port of Syracuse, a city of 53,000 and potential springboard for invasion of the Italian mainland.

Leading the western crescent of the Allied attack, Americans under Lt.-Gen. George S. Patton crushed heavy enemy armored counter-attacks in the Licata-Gela area, some 80 miles west of Syracuse, and advanced northward of Gela.

American Hold Bridgehead

(The Americans were holding a bridgehead 25 miles long and 10 miles deep after taking Licata and Gela on the south coast, said a dispatch from the Allied Command Post by Edward Ciliing, representing the combined British press. Their equipment was being unloaded at these ports.

(Florida eight miles inland from Syracuse, is in British hands, said another dispatch.)

Allied planes were sweeping the skies from airfields captured in Sicily.

They had left Catania, the next objective of the British march, aflame, and they had dive-bombed columns of Axis troops being brought up for counter-attacks, destroying 400 or more of the enemy's vehicles.

Allied naval forces, unhampered by the Italian fleet, continued to pour men and supplies into the bridgeheads stretching for 100 miles along Sicily's southeastern coast for the rapid push up Sicily's eastern shore, and hurled shells into the enemy's communications and defenses.

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, July 12 —(AP)— The British army swept into the ancient port of Syracuse, a city of 53,000, Licata, 30 miles to the west on the southcoast; Gela; Pachino, on Cape Passero at the extreme southeastern tip of the island; Avola and Noto, midway between Syracuse and Pachino; Pozzallo, site of an important air base on the south coast; Scoglitti; Ispica, and Roseline were among the captured places listed in today's Allied Headquarters communique.

(In Malta it was officially announced that Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery, commander of the 8th Army, is in command of British forces in Sicily and that American forces are under Lt.-Gen. George S. Patton. No Canadian officer was listed with the "senior" Allied commanders.

American troops in the Gela area repulsed seven counter-attacks by the Italians' fourth Livorno division and 45 tanks in the heaviest or all the seven enemy counter-blows.

Italian Division Driven Out

The 96th Napoli division was driven out of Syracuse by British troops —a lightning blow at the end of the second day of the Allied invasion which appeared to be a serious handicap to the enemy in bringing up reinforcements to meet a rapidly swelling penetration into the interior of the island.

The civilian population "seemed more pleased to see us than they had been to see the Huns," said one observer.

The swift occupation of the strong ports and towns along a 100-mile stretch of Sicily's southeastern coast was accompanied by a furious air action yesterday in which Allied planes crashed at least 400 enemy vehicles endeavoring to rush up troops and supplies for counter-attacks, and scored heavy blows at Catania, on the east coast, the Sicilian airdromes of Milo, Scaccs and Gerbini and two other airdromes at and near Reggio Calabria on the Italian mainland.

Planes from Catania's military yards gave off smoke visible for 140 miles at one time after a bomber formation roared homeward, leaving fires raging in oil storage dumps.

Italian Fleet Hides

With the Italian fleet still noticeable by its absence, Allied naval forces continued large-scale operations of putting ashore more and more Allied troops and equipment, although the Allied commandos said the enemy's air opposition was increasing.

Swarms of Allied fighters patrolled the beaches, protecting the operations however, and 45 enemy aircraft were shot down yesterday. Only nine Allied planes were lost.

Casualties among the Allies continued much "less than might normally be expecter in such a sweeping offensive. It was said 93 Allied headquarters and a number of hospital ships were still waiting in reserve.

"One Allied hospital ship, which was fully lighted and anchored three miles off the Sicilian coast, was sunk Saturday night by enemy bombers, but the 400 wounded were successfully transferred.

As a result of the swiftness of Allied action, it was said at headquarters that the enemy was being compelled to regroup his forces and most of his counter-attacks up to now had been comparatively weak.

Most of the Italians, especially were surrendering fighting freely and most of the 2,000 prisoners taken were Italians.

Few Details Available

An Allied headquarters communique said: "Few details are available of the work of the navy during the past 24 hours.

"The raid of disembarking troops and their supplies on all beaches continues according to plan.

"On the whole, weather conditions have improved though enemy interference from the air has been on a slightly increased scale.

"Considerable area of the coast town of Pozzallo, 12 miles west of Scoglitti, remains in the line of fire between Syracuse and Ragusa were bombarded last night by our destroyers.

"The surrender of Pozzallo was accepted by the commanding officer of the port at 10 o'clock the early afternoon Sunday.

"Our ground forces have continued to make good progress.

"During the course of the day we were meeting counter-attacks which were being made with tanks and infantry supported by guns. 2,000 prisoners have been taken.

"It must now be stated that the following major towns and ports have been captured by our forces: Syracuse, Avola, Pachino, Pozzallo, Scoglitti, Gela, Licata, Ispica, Roselini and Noto."

CRITICAL PERIOD IS TO COME SAYS PRIME MINISTER

Mr. King Tells House Of Commons Number Of Canadians in Sicily 'Substantial'

REFERS TO PRESS

Ottawa, July 13 —(CP)— Prime Minister Mackenzie King today said in the House of Commons that the "first critical period has passed" for Canadians engaged with the Allied forces invading Sicily, but "the most critical period is to come."

Mr. King said reports indicated counter-attack had already commenced.

He said Canadians should be proud that their men were engaged in the inception of this first assault upon Europe.

The Canadian force engaged was "substantial" Mr. King said, but he could give no details.

The newspapers were the best and quickest source of information in this campaign, Mr. King said, and he did not propose to give progressive bulletins on a regular schedule.

"We should not lose sight of the fact that in the present operations British and United States troops also are engaged," said Mr. King in speaking of information from the air of fighting.

Security considerations had to be observed in giving out information but war correspondents were with the forces.

Read the Papers

"There is no way in which we can be better informed than by the press," said Mr. King.

The correspondents were able to transmit information which military authorities believed could be released.

From time to time, as circumstances warranted, statements would be made in the House by himself or the Defence Minister Ralston, in the same way as statements were made to the United Kingdom parliament, Mr. King said.

FOUR JAPANESE BASES IN PACIFIC UNDERGO BOMBING

176 Tons Bombs Dropped on Enemy Installations Including Munda

9 ZEROS DESTROYED

Allied Headquarters in the Southwest Pacific, July 13—(AP)—Allied bombers poured four widely-separated Japanese bases in the southwest Pacific Sunday, striking most heavily at Munda, the enemy's key defence point in the Central Solomons.

More than 176 tons of bombs were loosed on the Japanese strongholds and at least nine Japanese warplanes in the air were shot down. One Allied bomber and two fighters were lost.

Torpedo and dive-bombers smashed 61 tons of heavy bombs upon anti-aircraft positions and blockhouse areas near Munda during the night, the communique from Allied headquarters said results of the attack were unobserved.

A headquarters spokesman said the ground situation at Munda was unchanged.

Bombers over Bougainville island dropped 46 tons of bombs on Kahili, the enemy's largest air base in the Solomons. Several large fires were started. Seven Japanese planes tried to attempted unsuccessfully to intercept.

Heavy bombers also made a night assault against Vunakanau airfield at Rabaul. Their 21 tons of bombs started five large fires, two of which were visible 60 miles away.

On the Salamaua area, bombers dropped down almost to tree-top levels to deliver a devasting blow on villages along the trail from Mubo to Salamaua. Sixty-two tons of bombs were dropped and the Mubito village area was heavily attacked. Five enemy fighters were shot down but two Allied fighters are missing.

REGGIO CALABRIA FERRY TERMINUS BATTERED BY AIR

British and American Airmen Set Fire to Large Number of Axis Aircraft

BATTLE OVER CRETE

Cairo, July 12 — (AP) — Operating in co-operation with Allied forces fighting in Sicily, fleets of R.A.F. and American bombers struck again at two Italian airdromes and engaged enemy planes in combat, a special communique today announced today.

At Reggio Calabria, Italian terminus of the vital ferry connecting Sicily with the mainland, Liberators dropped on the airdrome runway and large fires were started a communique said. A number of large aircraft were reported set afire on the ground and one German Messerschmitt was destroyed in combat.

At nearby Vibo Valentia, airplane hangars and administrative buildings were left blazing and a three-engined aircraft and damaged another German Messerschmitt was shot out of the skies over this airbase, the communique said.

R.A.F. flight bombers meanwhile attacked a formation of Messerschmitt fighters southwest of Crete and shot down three, the communique said.

Allied airplanes were reported to have returned safely from these and other operations.

MILITARY EXPERTS SURPRISED AT EASE OF LANDING

London Papers Unanimous in Cautioning Against Early Optimism

By FOSTER BARCLAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, July 12 —(CP)— Complete success of the initial phase of the Allied landings in Sicily was hailed by military experts here as well as by morning newspapers but the latter sounded a cautious note, sounded that the battle was only beginning.

Most newspapers stressed, too, that the Sicily operation was just part of a vaster plan to storm the continent itself and linked the invasion with the Allied campaign in Russia.

"This attack must be put in its proper setting," said the Daily Telegraph, where a heavy fighting is believed at Sicily, the enemy is by no means being able to degrade other vulnerable points in order to repel it. "The first impressions today indicate that nothing like the whole force available in the Mediterranean is going to the invasion.

"Sicily is not likely to prove the only spot in the Mediterranean at which Britain and America will fight it out," declared

Red Cross Outpost Hospitals Serve Many Isolated Communities

When the average citizen thinks of the Canadian Red Cross Society, he visualizes nurses and ambulances and stretcher-bearers carrying the wounded off battlefields, or under a barrage of heavy gun fire and aerial bombardment, hospitals where long lines of casualties are under the ministrations of their doctors and nurses, but there is another aspect, one which is often overlooked, buried under the weight of war news reports of invasions and communiques, and that is the "outposts of mercy". From the borders of Quebec by within a few miles of the Province of Manitoba, twenty-eight Red Cross Hospitals are placed wherever the need is felt to be most urgent. These range from the impressive $250,000 Memorial Hospital at Kirkland Lake to the small one-nurse centre at Kataheka Falls, Today, with the ever increasing need for hospitals and number, prospective and timber prospects in search of gold and commodities although far from the battle attacks, the Red Cross Outpost Hospitals make life safe, with completely equipped Red Cross Hospital car, donated by the C.N.R. travels up and down the Province where-ever medical attention is needed for these Canadians who live beyond the reach of the city hospital. "Outposts of Mercy" is a fitting name for these isolated hospitals

Obituary

MRS. EMMA SUTHERLAND
(Formerly of Belleville)

Mrs. Emma Sutherland, widow of William Sutherland, died at the home of the late Samuel and John Philpott of Belleville, died in Columbus, on Saturday, July 10th, at the advanced age of 92 years and 7 months.

The late Mrs. Sutherland lived in Belleville for many years and about thirty-five years ago, with her late husband, moved to Oshawa. During her residence here she was a member of the Methodist Church and took an active part in church work. The little lady will regret to learn of her death, which occurred the day of her birth.

The funeral took place this Monday afternoon from the Canadian National Railway station to the Belleville Cemetery, where interment took place in the family plot. The committal service was conducted by Rev. Dr. Ferguson, assisted by Rev. Father A. E. O'Connor, who also read the committal prayers at the graveside in St. Michael's Cemetery.

The bearers were Messrs. William Sutherland, Ernest Sutherland, Messrs. Daniel McDonald, Gilbert Symons and Harry O'Neil.

Quinte Sea Cadets Back From Camp Bronzed by Sun

Sun-tanned and showing full evidence of their intensive two weeks training period at Deseronto Island near Gananoque, personnel of the Quinte Sea Cadet Corps returned to their homes on Saturday.

The Belleville cadets, with corps from Kingston and Port Hope, were the first of 1,200 who will take a period of training on the large island which has been leased by the Gananoque Rotary Club and which will be operated by the Department for Naval Service, Ottawa, for the duration of the war.

"The boys measured up 100 per cent in their training period and know a whole lot more now than they did before," Lieut. Stated Sea Cadet Lieutenant-Commander Hinchey, commanding the "Quinte" Corps, at the cadets' return. "Evidence of the change is evident in the boys. It was really a fine camp and conducted everything to the standards demanded by the navy. The two weeks' training course, Mr. Wesley pointed out, has given the boys a foretaste of naval training. It being impressed on the boys that if they were going to wear the naval uniform as home for men on active service with the R.C.N.V.R., they must act and look like sailors. The camp was carried out under strict naval discipline and the boys really thrived on it."

Included on the camp schedule of training were boat drill, seamanship, gunnery, compass work and rifle practice. The boys were given their regular watches, the same as aboard ships in the navy.

"It was not all work and no play however, as the boys had their full share of recreation and fun. One item on the program was the annual Parting of a rear entrance at the Belleville Metal and Waste Paper Company, Front Street. Here the loot amounted to about one dollar in silver.

Apparently having a bicycle against the east wall, youthful thieves entered the Belleville filling station on North Front St. somewhere on Wednesday night and stole 30c in pennies that had been left in the cash drawer.

George A. Dafoe, a resident at 30 Bleecker Ave., reports that a pair of field glasses had been taken out of his private room on Friday.

Sergeant Douglas Ellis apprehended a boy who was found at a broken parole from the Bowmanville Boys' Training School on Saturday. After questioning the boy at length and minutes investigations, Sergeant Ellis discovered the boy had escaped from the institution in the small hours of Saturday and sold them elsewhere, one to Richard Ashton and the other to Holloway. The boy also told Sergeant Ellis he had stolen a bicycle from Bowmanville, but that was later turned over to the custody of Mr. Bowen, a group of the Children's Aid Society and will subsequently be returned to Bowmanville.

Seventy-four year old John Thatcher of Prince Surrey, has not bought at least one garment for the forces each week since the war began.

Lt. Cpl. William Stalley has arrived home on leave after being away for nine years on foreign service. His mother lives at Shoreham.

Lieut. E. R. Hinchey's March Athene Chosen As Military March Of Canadian Army Women's Corps

C. W. A. C. Organization and Army Council Unanimous In Approval

VETERAN COMPOSER

Lieut. E. R. Hinchey of Belleville, who has written a large number of military marches and other compositions and has formed a national reputation as a composer, has again honored by the choice of one of compositions as the military march-past-in-quick-time of the Canadian Women's Army Corps.

The public will not have long to wait to hear this stirring march for it is to be played by the Toronto Symphony Band which comes on the air on Friday evening at the early hour of 8.30 to 9.00 o'clock with the CBC program. Also will be heard on this program the "Canadian Women's Army Band".

Some time ago Lieut. Hinchey was called to Ottawa to attend a regimental marches for military bands. While there he was asked to set to work on composition and submit it for approval as the official march of the Canadian Women's Army Council. Present were the Vice Chief of Staff, the Adjutant General and the Quartermaster General.

The band was ready and played the three numbers and selected the first as the best fit for the C.W.A.C. ficials. It bears the name "Athene", the badge of the C.W.A.C. and the C.W.A.C.'s.

Lieut. Hinchey now has received the following message from Ottawa.

March Athene", E. R. Hinchey, Regimental March of C.W.A.C.'s, Belleville, Ontario.

"(1) Chosen by the officers of the Canadian Women's Army Corps from a number of numbers submitted.

"(2) Approved by Military Members of Army Council.

'Oriana' C. 7, 43.

It is possible that the other numbers will be used for other army units.

Lieut. Hinchey has had thirty to thirty-five of his compositions played in broadcasts.

POLICE BLOTTER

Petty thieving was reported in Belleville over the weekend with several cases of cash taken. Revenues are believed responsible for the parting of a rear entrance at the Belleville Metal and Waste Paper Company, Front Street.

Lieut. E. R. Hinchey's March 'Athene' Chosen As Military March Of Canadian Army Women's Corps

C. W. A. C. Organization and Army Council Unanimous In Approval

VETERAN COMPOSER

Lieut. E. R. Hinchey of Belleville, who has written a large number of military marches and other compositions and has formed a national reputation as a composer, has again honored by the choice of one of compositions as the military march-past-in-quick-time of the Canadian Women's Army Corps.

The public will not have long to wait to hear this stirring march for it is to be played by the Toronto Symphony Band which comes on the air on Friday evening at the early hour of 8.30 to 9.00 o'clock with the CBC program. Also will be heard on this program the "Canadian Women's Army Band".

Some time ago Lieut. Hinchey was called to Ottawa to attend a regimental marches for military bands. While there he was asked to set to work on composition and submit it for approval as the official march of the Canadian Women's Army Council. Present were the Vice Chief of Staff, the Adjutant General and the Quartermaster General.

The band was ready and played the three numbers and selected the first as the best fit for the C.W.A.C. ficials. It bears the name "Athene", the badge of the C.W.A.C. and the C.W.A.C.'s.

Lieut. Hinchey now has received the following message from Ottawa.

March Athene", E. R. Hinchey, Regimental March of C.W.A.C.'s, Belleville, Ontario.

"(1) Chosen by the officers of the Canadian Women's Army Corps from a number of numbers submitted.

"(2) Approved by Military Members of Army Council.

"(3) Lt. E. R. Hinchey of Belleville, is a well known Canadian composer. Composition of marches is a prolific writer of band music. The C.W.A.C. have had two bands military and pipe. These bands will be used for C.W.A.C. Corps, and it is expected will soon be featured across the Dominion.

"(Signed) R. D. Coleman, Major, Corps Inspector Army Bands".

'Oriana' C. 7, 43.

It is possible that the other numbers will be used for other army units.

Lieut. Hinchey has had thirty to thirty-five of his compositions played in broadcasts.

Nursing Sisters Reach N. Africa

Will Care for Wounded Men in Hospitals In North Africa.

By I. UID-Y. HUNTER
(Can. Press War Correspondent)

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, July 12—(CP Cable)—Canadian nursing sisters have followed their fighting brothers to the Mediterranean theatre, prepared to succor those who are wounded in the Sicilian invasion campaign the care and attention of their own people.

The hospitals where these scores of girls in the uniform of the Canadian Army will be based in North Africa, possibly under canvas, possibly under more permanent conditions entirely different from anything to which they have accustomed in England where they—many of them—have already been waiting patiently for this day.

Walking For This

Lieut. Vaudine Gister Florence Cooke, of Brandon, Man., and Ottawa, Ont., Canada, said: "This is what we have been waiting for"—then she added with a smile which was reflected in the faces of the girls around her—"Walking For This"

The reaction of the girls to the news of their arrival in Africa was evidently finished. "Thrilling," "thrilling," "adventurous," were the words they offered to their friends.

The announcement was a climax to a busy morning.

Lieut. Anne Balbura, a petite girl of Arabic descent, who schooled the sentiments of the sisters.

"We have been looking forward to this event for months. We know what we are going," she said.

Lieut. Marjorie McQuarrie, of Erin, Ont., said she was anxious to get to work. She had heard the story-book towns and villages pen-tion. Her companion, Lieut. Ivy Hart, of Hamilton, spoke for company her.

One of the surgeons of a hospital mentioned, a colonel from Hamilton is Maj. C. Abertart, of Toronto. The matron is Maj. Mc. Shaffner of Toronto and the assistant matron is Capt. Church of Kellough, of Almonte, Ont.

Attached to this hospital is Capt. Marion Rose, of Toronto, the first Canadian Red Cross girl attached on active service in this war. A bacteriologist, she said, "I wouldn't miss this for the world."

The nursing sisters made the trip in the same convoy with another hospital unit but they did not see the Mediterranean during the day or so before arrived here, when they had their first sunbath.

Sisters and doctors aboard the ship formed a group of other respondents amused themselves by sun-bathing, playing cards on deck and studying atlases. The most popular sport was the nightly guess outside the ship's shop which was well-stocked with duty-free cigarettes. The ship was a day out, and the sisters christened the orange, lime and cherry soft drinks "the yellow peril, the green peril and the red peril".

Among the nurses, was Lieut. Ruby Rogers of Havelock, Ont.

'Glorious Twelfth' Is Celebrated

Arrayed in their gay parade uniforms, members of the Young Loyal Orange Lodges headed by Belleville L.O.L. parade to celebrate the Glorious Twelfth today. The traditional fife and drum band headed the local processionists. Belleville Orange Lodge and kindred societies left for Point Anne, where the day was to be held.

For the greater part, however, the celebration of the 253rd anniversary was far from the conventional custom of Orangemen to celebrate the Battle of the Boyne.

The Belleville Junior Orange Lodge members headed the local parade along Front St. to Victoria Park. Then motor boat and motor buses were transported to Point Anne. A number of members of the L.O.L. have also paraded, but as officials pointed out there is important work to be done in connection the war, which amounts for the absence of the usual 12th of July celebrations and parades and parade decorated vehicles. The "gas" restrictions also had effect on the usual style of celebration. In Madoc the district observances was held.

Holstein Breeders Send $10,793.18 For British Relief

With the forwarding today of a draft for $10,793.18, Canadian Holstein breeders have brought the total of their gifts sent to British during the past three years for war relief to $54,617.94. In 1941 they raised $17,992.16 and in 1942, $1,-900. As in the two previous years, officials of the British Friesian Society have again undertaken the task of distributing the money where from personal knowledge they know it will do the most good. A large part of the 1941 and 1942 funds were used for clothing and otherwise relieving the distress of merchant sailors whose kits and personal belongings had been lost in the Battle of the Atlantic. Airmen were also aided through donations to the R.A.F. Benevolent Fund for Pilots and Crews.

The 1943 total is made up of $6,-265 realized at a war effort calf auction held May 28 at Brampton, $3,768 from a similar auction held the following day at Kemptville and cash donations of $662.18 from all parts of the Dominion. The calves sold were donated by County Holstein Clubs and individual breeders in Ontario and Quebec.

Wallbridge

Wallbridge — The July meeting of Wallbridge W.A. was held at the home of Mrs. F. Storey on July 7th with the president Mrs. Jas. Stine, in charge.

It was moved by Mrs. G. A. Ketcheson and seconded by Mrs. R. Elliott to buy a share for the patchwork quilt. A discussion followed about having a garden party, but Mr. Storey intended the socials for flowers sent during her recent bereavement. Mrs. Chauvin would very kindly invited the ladies to her home for the August meeting.

Mrs. W. Badgley then opened the W.M.S. meeting. The minutes of the last meeting were read and the treasurer's report showed that over half of the allocation had been raised. It was decided to bring contributions for sale to the next meeting.

Mrs. Badgley states that the W.M.S. money was partly used for mission work in Canada.

Mrs. Elliott group leader, took charge. The scripture lesson was read by Mrs. W. Stine. Mrs. Clarence Woods gave a reading describing some of the mission work done in Trinidad by pioneer missionaries and their wives.

The W.M.S. work is a responsibility but it is also a privilege and one sometimes lacks zeal and cultivation in one's own spiritual sliding. The world should be shown that there is a difference between Christians and non-Christians.

Mrs. James Hinchliffe gave a temperance reading stressing the need for greater temperance education and stronger enforcement of laws forbidding the selling of alcoholic liquors to minors and depicting the great increase of drinking among women. A hearty vote of thanks was given Mrs. Storey for her hospitality and the meeting closed.

LONELY SOLDIER ADOPTS FAMILIES

Famous Russian Soldier, His Own Family Lost in Nazi Invasion, Finds Unusual Comfort

Moscow (CP) — Guards Lieut. Nikolai Vomov, who gained nation-wide fame as a sniper with the Red army and received the Order of the Red Star, has another side to his life which has just come to light. He adopts families—or more accurately, he adopts families of comrades killed in action as his own.

When he joined the Red army at the outset of German invasion he left his own family in their home on the coast of the Black Sea. Later the Germans occupied that district. He has never heard from his family since.

One day this brave but lonely warrior received a package containing a pouch, filled with tobacco and a letter from the wife of a comrade who had perished at the front. To cheer the unknown soldier, Sinibert Gabet, father of two children and enclosed their photographs.

Vomov adopted the children as his own. He transferred several hundred rubles to a bank with the request that toys and necessities be purchased and given to the children. Then Vomov made a regular monthly allocation of his pay to the children.

Later a comrade told him of another woman whose husband had died in battle, leaving her with a small child. Vomov allocated another part of his pay to the family. Shortly afterward he adopted another family in Moscow.

Now Vomov feels that he has relatives. His new-found families write him often, addressing him as a kinsman. He is no longer alone.

SUNBATHS IN YARD TIPS FROM EXPERT

If You're Broiling in Oil at Home This Wartime Year, Here's Advice

(By BETTY CLARK)
Associated Press Beauty Editor

Just take a peek at your backyard. It's sunny, isn't it? The shades are up and the sun has got your sweetheart. Many sunbaths will have to be of the at-home variety this year so let's make the most of it. Your old apple tree or elm is right there waiting to take the place of that gaily colored sun umbrella.

It's unattractive to have a deadwhite look during the summer. You can look just as cool and beautiful if you can catch yourself an even coat of tan. How to do it? Just don't be over-anxious. You'll get a lovely tan by being systematic about it.

First, decide whether your skin is too fair to burn. A long sunbath will be the beginning. If it is, regulate yourself. Spend 15 minutes the first day, say, gradually increasing your time. Be equipped with a good suntan oil and use it. Rub it on every part of your body that is exposed, particularly the shoulder blades, knees, and backs of legs, which will blister if not protected.

Be sure your face is well oiled. Blistered lips are miserable afflictions and look ugly besides.

Sunglasses are another must for your sunshine bath—they will help you avoid a painful headache and red lids.

After the sunning and a tubbing apply a lotion of cream to your face at least a half hour before you apply your makeup.

Subs Under Water One Third of Time

London (CP) — British submarines on operations lurk beneath the water about four months out of 13, according to Commander Ben Bryant, one of the navy's aces.

About three-fifths of the year were spent on patrol, he said, "but generally submarine crews are happy as the day is long. They spend their spare time in childish games, Ludo and cribbage reality."

"There is plenty of laughter," he told a B.B.C. audience. "Few of us would swap our job for any other. And when a commanding officer's priest of view in tracking down and beating up the enemy at his dorgsten we enjoy what it is to be the finest sport in the world."

Axis Anxiety

With the invasion of Sicily begun with powerful Allied forces including British, Canadians and Americans, backed up by the finest demonstration of United nations' naval might, air power, and a powerful striking army, inspired by the triumph over the Axis in Tunisia and North Africa, the Germans and Italians cannot be certain that this is the extent of their troubles. They know they have to meet the powerful resistance of the Russians to the Hitler third' annual summer offensive, which lacks much of the striking power of the other two drives, both of which ended with disaster to the Germans before Moscow and Stalingrad. And there is no assurance, it was pointed out on Saturday, that there may not be other points from which Hitler's so-called "fortress of Europe" may be attacked, while the Allied air forces pound Germany and Italy in their war on industrial cities, their communications and their transportation and defence systems.

The story in detail of the invasion will come later as it is too soon to reveal what is transporting and to tell the full story of the great armada by air, by navy and by shipping which threw the powerful United Nations forces upon Sicily, the stepping stone to Italy.

Four years ago the power-infatuated Hitler could not have foreseen what happened Saturday morning before dawn when fate in the form of the Canadians, British and Americans with forces of the other United Nations whose hands are Axis-dominated, knocked at the front door to Italy. Many hundreds of airplanes which created havoc of the defence system, as many as two thousand ships that took part in the invasion and the outpouring of shells from the guns of the powerful navies of the Allies spelled one word and one idea—"invasion."

The Germans who were spending much of their time trying to predict the time and the place of the invasion have missed again. Their guesses in the past year have been invariably for the Germans were wide of the mark. Even the Italians who had been announcing that the invasion was near, appear to have been surprised, too, though they reported the presence of large numbers of ships moving eastward through the Straits of Gibraltar for some days, before the zero hour.

It is reasonable that they should fail to predict. The Axis is the victim of the war of nerves especially as Germany and Italy have so many fronts that are vulnerable.

Sicily's Checkered History

Sicily, subject of news stories of bombings for weeks, and suddenly thrown into the glare of the world interest by the invasion by British, Canadian and American forces on Saturday morning, is a land which has borne the scars of war many a time throughout the centuries. Even in ancient days the unique position was realized and seen as after ages as they strove there for mastery. The most beautiful of the islands of the Mediterranean, the largest and most populous, Sicily early in civilization came into notice of sea-faring and colonizing peoples who saw its central position in reference to control of North Africa and Italy and the Mediterranean.

Sicily is steep and cliff-bound and possesses good harbors. In the west and south and in the south part of the east coast the hills are lower and recede farther from the sea, the coast is generally flat and generally less favorable to ships in the sense of commerce, while in the northern part of the east side a rocky coast extends except opposite the plain of Catania. In the north half of the east coast lava strips of Mount Etna stand out for a distance of twenty miles in bold cliffs and promontories. Consequently the south coast and the southern part of the east coast are the areas more suitable for invasion of the nature of Saturday's landings.

As history did not go back far enough tradition put the Cyclops on the island as inhabitants.

Sicily is known to have been inhabited by the Siculi, after whom the island is named and who came over from Italy. Greek and Phoenician colonies were established in the eighth century, B.C., and Sicily became in time divided into several states and independent cities. Owing to civil dissension, Sicily came to know tyrants. Dynasties of tyrants rose in Messina and other cities. One of the tyrants Gelon transferred his capital to Syracuse, which became the chief city on the island. In the course of time the Carthaginians from Carthage in North Africa, itself founded by the Phoenicians, one of the great early trading peoples of the eastern Mediterranean, made their influence felt with various settlements and wars sprang up between them and the Greeks. In time the Romans came on the scene and challenged the authority and power of Carthage and Sicily became a Roman province in 246 B.C. In time Sicily became the first country to be tilled by slave gangs for the benefit of rich natives and Roman settlers. Pirates roamed about the coast.

In 440 A.D. appeared a new race to contest for mastery, the Vandals who had by this time overrun Italy. Ninety-five years later Belisarius took possession of Sicily for the Eastern Roman Empire. In the early ninth century came Saracens sweeping from the east and they in turn fell to the Normans, that powerful race who held Sicily from 1072 to 1194. Under the Normans Sicily saw its most brilliant period and was never so united and so independent as under Count Robert. During this period it was attached to the Republic of Naples. It came under the Emperor Henry Sixth of Germany and German influence became a source of confusion under Emperor Frederick Second. In his time the Italians of Lombard element became paramount in Sicily.

In time Aragon held sway over Sicily, and then Spain. It remained with the House of Austria and the Spanish Bourbons and at last was annexed to Italy in 1860.

Such has been the revolutionary history of the island as volcanic as the island itself. Its history has been checkered by revolutions and changes of rule perhaps more than any country. Its area is something less than ten thousand square miles and its population is over four millions.

Germans Haven't Changed Much

(Port Arthur News-Chronicle)

"When the Germans come ashore in Norway or Holland, Belgium, Sicily . . . and go on their way without any regard to God's word or the prevailing laws and without any thought of giving compensation to those who have suffered. Where they stop they wreck public and private buildings for firewood . . . they take home with them both corn and other good things at pleasure."

That was written in 1351 by Magnus Erikson, King of Norway, who had firsthand experience of them.

They haven't changed much — unless for the worse. The world would be as well off, or better, if Germans were never again permitted to possess an offensive weapon of any kind.

London Needs Room

London needs more room, according to Lord Latham, leader of the London County Council. In his opinion houses cannot be built because of lack of space and cost of land. He points out that if it is desired to house Londoners in houses and not flats, it will be necessary to remove all the people to the fields that if flats have to be built they must have every reasonable labor-saving device and improvement, such as sound-proof walls and ceilings, heating, electrical cooking and heating, bathrooms, fully equipped kitchens with good sinks, cupboards, roomy pantries, and refrigerators.

The only exclusive sign of a thorough knowledge is the power of teaching. —Aristotle.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

HAIRCUT TIME

Time was the mother used to say
(How swiftly years can run!)
"Spring time of year, next Saturday,
You'll get a haircut, son.
Remember now the barber shop
Is where you're going to be.
Your hair is like a worn-out mop
And you're a sight to see!"

I thought that just a mother's whim
Or mother pride it be.
She liked to have me neat and trim
And "fit for folks to see."
But now I know 'tis woman's way,
For since we first were wed,
I've often heard my Nellie say:
"You need a haircut, Ed!"

When daughter Janet older grew,
With all a woman's wile,
My locks she'd run her fingers through
And tell me with a smile:
"You're much too shaggy round the ears
And much too thick on top
And very plainly it appears
You need a haircut, Pop!"

A venerable citizen wishes to advise the young men of this town, that they must exert themselves if they do not wish to see many of the charming young ladies of the town wed married by men from distant places. Our old friend is led to make this observation owing to the numerous marriages recently in which the Belleville girls have gone elsewhere to make homes.

The Dodecanese

(Harold Nicolson in London Spectator)

The Dodecanese, lying off the Carian peninsulas of Asia Minor, have names as lovely as the New Ida who followed in the train of Thetis—Astypalaia, Calymnos, Cos, pathos, Chalki, Syrni, Telos and Nisyros. They include large and important islands such as Rhodes and Cos and Leros. They include Patmos, in a cave of which the Revelation was written by St. John the Divine.

In ancient days Cos, with its vines and roses, boasting the historic privileges of Hippocrates, was regarded as the most beautiful of all the islands of the Carpathian Sea. The Dodecanese possessed a long and high tradition of wealth and culture. Rhodes was a great Hellenistic state, and so was Charos who constructed the Colossus of Rhodes; when Caesius looted the latter island he sent to Rome three thousand statues and two million pounds worth of bronze.

Sybaris, which was considered by the ancients as the very acme of luxury, was a Rhodian colony. Every island of the 11 was rich in timber, pomegranates and wine.

ACH, WILDERNESS!

Calling On a Queen

(By Lieut. Commander Geoffrey Brooke, R.N.R. in London Calling)

I was serving in an armed merchant cruiser which was patrolling the island outposts in the South Pacific, shortly after the Japanese had begun their conquering progress of Australia and New Zealand. One of our ports of call was Nukualofa, capital of the Tonga Islands, which are a British protectorate. The island —a bright blue lagoon, white sand, and straggling trees and shanties and building with thatched or corrugated iron roofs. One building was different—the palace. It was a big Victorian-looking country house facing the lagoon. Around it the Queen's subjects gave pigs to specially imported fig.

A two-day program was arranged for the ship's officers. A launch from the ship were to be presented to Her Majesty, Queen Salote, at noon, and the next day she was to visit the ship. There were to be military and naval spectacles, tennis matches, and a dance between the ship's company and the islanders. We had been warned that the dance is any sport that had a name, from cricket and football to fencing and wrestling.

The ship's company paraded through the town, led by the band we could muster—four mouth-organs, two tennis rackets and a drums. Four mouth-organs incidentally, can constitute a naval band.

Three hours later we knew you might have stepped straight from age and place. The furnishings were all Victorian, and photographs of the British Royal Family in elaborate frames filled every available space on the walls. The palace servants were dressed in European shirt drill. Only their bare feet reminded us that this was still the tropics.

The Queen received us in full evening dress after the custom of European courts. She stood, often on a dais holding a big fan of red and white ostrich feathers. Behind her great height—she is six feet three inches—her various regalia figure and quite dwarfed the small, grey-haired British Vice-Consul who had introduced us in turn. The Queen welcomed each of us and thanked us for having called at Oxford. She said how pleased she was to see us and how proud she was of the fact that the Royal Navy had visited the island with a visit and how she had been following the progress of the Axis.

Our drill was to bow and then make our exits through a bay window to the right. One engineer commander was so incensed that he made his exit through the wrong window. He had a six-foot drop and broke his ankle, so that taught him a lesson.

In the evening we were invited to sit quietly on chairs in the hall.

Apparently all dances in the island stop by royal decree at 11 o'clock. The commander-in-chief was given for this one to continue to 1 o'clock—for the first time in the history of the island.

Our partners were grass skirts and danced in bare feet. There was something about the band, for they did not have a great idea of modern dance tunes, but they had a remarkable difficult the chief refreshment was guava wine, which has strange effects on the feet if you aren't used to it.

But on the whole a most entertaining day on and a good time we had for all.

The next item on the agenda was a rugby football match against the island timed for dawn, which was 8.15 o'clock. Result: The island team played in bare feet. Well, I'm afraid they wiped the floor with us. A cricket match followed—with the same result. They had not played cricket before and afraid the time of day and the sticks, shaped like clubs, and bowled.

A special stairway of about 15 steps had been built for the Queen to come aboard the ship. We put it in above the top step and stood at action station, and a detachment of New Zealand troops drilled on deck for her. On the next day, too, they staged a military parade for the Queen to review ashore.

Later all the girls were invited aboard, among them the Queen's niece. The Queen herself was present of five seating pigs and before we left the islanders loaded us with gifts or fruit. It was days before you could open a door in the ship without a bunch of bananas falling on your head.

Allied Troops Reported Locked in Battle With 30,000 Germans

New York, July 12 (AP)—The Mobile radio, in a broadcast received by CBS, quoted Algiers radio reports today as saying that Allied troops were locked in a fierce battle with 30,000 Germans for possession of the city of Enna, important road and rail junction 35 miles inland from the south coast of Sicily.

"More Allied parachute troops have been dropped near Enna, and our landing forces have now built up divisional size reinforcements while reinforcements were being poured ashore from the sea," the broadcast said.

It is a common mistake to suppose that honeybees collect wax from flowers. Wax is a product of digestion and is secreted by the honeybees in the form of thin scales that appear between the segments on the underside of the abdomen. The notion that bees collect wax from flowers no doubt arose from the fact that many people observe wax with the pollen that bees collect and carry to the hive in pellets packed tightly in hairs of their hind legs. The pollen is mixed with honey and converted into bee-bread for the young bees.

Reinforcements For Canadians Arrive in N. Africa

Men Are Ready and Eager to Join With Canadians Now Fighting in Sicily

HEAR OF INVASION

By WILLIAM STEWART
Canadian Press War Correspondent
Allied Headquarters in North Africa, July 13 —(CP Cable)—Protected by a powerful warship escort, a troop convoy has just brought to North Africa several thousand Canadian reinforcements from Britain, ready and eager to get into the fighting in Sicily.

They were landed in North Africa within 24 hours of the start of the invasion of Sicily by Canadian, British and American sea and air service forces.

Canadian medical personnel and a number of Canadian Nursing Sisters, as well as British troops, made the uneventful voyage through calm seas and under sunny skies. Canadian gunners manning the anti-aircraft guns of the troopships, like the sailors aboard the protecting warships, saw no sign of the enemy during the voyage.

Neither the officers nor the men knew their destination when the ships sailed at dusk from a British port. Issue of tropical medicine aboard ship only intensified the rumors.

Aboard one of the ships were 13 war correspondents, including Louis V. Jiunier, Maurice Desjardins and I, all three representing The Canadian Press. As we neared our destination, the ship's public address system broke the news of the Sicilian invasion and the fact that Canadians were participating. Lively Under Canvas

Before leaving Britain some of the troops spent weeks living under canvas in mobilization areas and were put through hardening courses, including long route marches in full kit and still paysical exercises. Then suddenly they were put aboard troop trains and dispatched to the port of embarkation.

They were temporarily stripped of any insignia identifying them as Canadians. Every province in the Dominion was represented among the troops and nursing sisters.

The French-Canadians included Company Sergeant-Major J. A. LaClaire of Montreal, who resigned his Brigadier's commission and returned to the ranks in Canada shortly before being sent overseas.

Some of the troops, like Pte. Leo Coulas of Barry's Bay, Ont., spent only three months in Britain before moving to North Africa.

Security Perfect on Shipboard

Security was perfect, at least aboard one ship.

Until the vessel put into a small Mediterranean harbor the troops were uncertain where they were going and although Sicily seemed a certain bet it wasn't a sure bet by any means.

Pte. Pat Burns of Ottawa cautiously remarked as he leaned over the rail: "I don't know where we are going but don't try to tell me this isn't the Mediterranean."

Then the convoy entered the Mediterranean the ships' captains told their army passengers that the danger zone of the voyage was reached and warned them to be prepared for anything. But the peaceful weather and the perfect ease of routine aboard ship proved a deterrent to any feelings of nervousness.

When finally the troops began to disembark at a picturesque French North African town, one soldier, looking under the weight of his pack, stumbled down the gang plank and shouted to his mates: "Well, now we're in it at last—let's go."

Munro's Eye-Witness Story

London, July 13 (CP)—Canada's troops, fighting on the Island of Sicily and Saturday morning are being backed up by the arrival in force of the next of reinforcements, it was disclosed over the weekend.

Ross Munro, Canadian Press War Correspondent, who landed with the Canadian troops on Sicily, reported Friday and Sunday in a 1,000-mile story of the southeastern corner of Sicily, apparently meeting little immediate resistance as they consolidated newly-won positions against a counter-attack.

Three Axis airfields already are in the hands of the invaders, two at Gela where American assault troops blasted their way ashore early Saturday and another at Pachino, captured by Canadian and British forces.

British glider troops and American parachutists who dropped from the Sicilian skies Friday night to attack coastal defences from the rear, were reported to have met the Allied sea-borne landing parties after a spectacular series of lightning missions with negligible losses.

Great armadas of warships and merchant ships, ably herded by powerful flotillas of warships, are now pouring troops and supplies ashore, and air fleets dotted the sky, giving the invaders full cover and lending a helping hand to ground troops by bombing Axis concentrations.

1,000 Ships Used in Invasion

A British war correspondent, Edward Ellis, has contributed a first advance post that the invasion armada, totalled more than 1,000 ships than double the record-breaking 800 used in the first landings of North Africa last November.

A communique yesterday said all Allied landings so far had all the many invasion points were "firmly held" and that Canadian troops there were believed light.

Military observers emphasized the early fighting involved only Italian defenders, but that Germans, under cover of enemy defenders, known to include many Germans, still was to be engaged.

German propaganda asserted the Nazi and Fascist troops already had begun a counter-offensive.

Engage Enemy Tanks Successfully

A late report from an advance command post said the Canadians who hit the coast of Gela, about 35 miles west of the South-Eastern tip of the island, already had successfully engaged enemy tank reinforcements in that area.

Gela was the first specific landing point mentioned in the official announcement. In the first eyewitness account from correspondent Ross Munro of The Canadian Press also told of landings at Pachino at the southeastern tip by Canadian forces.

Early headquarters reports said the landings were effected along a 100-mile stretch of the southern coast.

German broadcasts admitted Allied bridgeheads were forged near Gela, and, in addition, near Syracuse, at Licata, 13 miles west of Gela, and near the port of Syracuse along the eastern coast.

German Count at Allied Plan

A German military analyst declared Dwight D. Eisenhower, Allied commander-in-chief, apparently intended to establish a front across the southeastern corner of the island between Gela and Syracuse.

(Other Axis reports relayed through Stockholm said Allied troops had landed at seven points, including Cantanzil, 18 miles north and inland from Lacata. Canicatti presumably was an objective of the airborne troops.

(Quoting a clandestine German station, the Algiers radio said Allied forces had captured the Sicilian towns of Licata and Scoglitti on the east and the Mediterranean on the West—and as a result for a possible drive up the east coast to isolate Sicily from the mainland.

British, Canadians in S.E. Tip of Island

British and Canadian forces hold the southeastern tip after forming a junction across narrow Cape Passero and cutting off the Pachino airdrome. The Canadians there captured many prisoners.

It was disclosed here last night that several thousand Canadian reinforcements had landed in North Africa within 24 hours of the start of the invasion—presumably with Sicily as their next step.

The aerial troops who floated down upon chosen Sicilian objectives between 10:30 and 11:30 p.m. Friday night, three to four hours before the invasion fleet, were the Axis a taste of the tactics Germany had used so frequently to terrorize her foes.

Gliders and Transports

Huge air transports carrying smudge-faced British and Canadians parachute troops and towing back in London.

His dispatch was followed up last night by one from Wilton Stewart, Canadian Press War Correspondent in Africa, that a troop convoy had landed thousands of reinforcements from Britain in North African ports, ready for duty in the first Canadians to see action in the new theatre of war.

Apparently With Famous 8th Army

Munro's eye-witness dispatch was a world beat. In it he revealed that the Canadians on Sicily apparently formed part of Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's famed desert fighters, the 8th army.

Some hours after receipt of his account, other dispatches told of a junction having been formed by Canadian troops with British forces, the combined troops having won full possession of the area that includes the fishing town of Pachino in Sicily's extreme southern corner. The Pachino airport fell to the Canadian-British force.

For security reasons, the strength and composition of the Canadian formations he accompanied from England to Sicily were not revealed by Munro, but observers here assumed that the initial landings were carried out by forces in greater number than at Dieppe last August when two infantry brigades and part of one tank brigade were used.

London eagerly awaited today further detailed word of progress of operations. Relief was felt that The Canadian Press correspondent could report there had been no enemy air attack in at least the initial stages of the assault. All day Saturday, Munro said, R.A.F. planes were "continually in our area."

Clandestine German Press Says New Allied Landing Made Near Marsala

London, July 13 — (CP) — The Algiers radio said a clandestine German radio station reported today that Allied invasion forces had captured the Sicilian towns of Arezzano and Licata and that a big battle was raging around Ragusa, several miles inland from the southwestern tip of the island.

Military observers emphasized the early fighting involved only Italian defenders, but that Germans, under cover of enemy defenders, known to include many Germans, still was to be engaged.

German propaganda asserted the Nazi and Fascist troops already had begun a counter-offensive.

campaign to whip up enthusiasm for the fighting ahead.

The London Daily Mail reported Mussolini would make a final effort to address the Italian people in an effort to save the country which followed reports of the Sicilian invasion.

"The Italian high command has refused an offer by Mad Field Marshal Erwin Rommel to take over the defence of French Corsica and the Italian mass of the Italian Riviera, the Daily Mail said today in a dispatch dated at the "Italian frontier."

"The special correspondent said reports from Vichy Sunday night told how Rommel now said to be commanding German forces in southern France, had wired Rome that he had sufficient troops to move into those areas within 24 hours, but that the Italians were unwilling to accept his offer.

"London advices said many arrests had occurred in Naples, where Axis and Italian Fascist and Fascist party, broadcast an appeal to Sicilians and Italians. It was said sharp measures were to be taken to suppress rumors, speculation and defeatism.

Food Situation Worsens

Another factor which appeared to weigh heavily on controlling the Italian state of mind as the crisis approached was the steadily worsening food problem brought about by the relentless Allied air attacks on Italian railroads. There was no indication of how many trains had been smashed, but if Cicernale D'Italia said 123 trainmen have been killed and 341 others wounded.

The Germans also were well aware that on the transportation situation might well hinge the fate of the Axis. A Berlin dispatch to the Nazi Koetzber Zeitung quoted Nazi military circles as being "confident of the Axis ability to master the situation."

Canadian leaders, pointing to the heavy bombing of Crete, suggested the Italians might be the next stop listed on the United Nations timetable.

The dark-haired bride looked charming as she entered the church on the arm of her father. She wore a floor-length gown of triple sheer organza over satin, heart neckline and long full sleeves. Her full length veil fell from a short train and was held in place by a halo of white rose buds. She carried a cascade bouquet of dark red roses and sweetheart roses.

Early Diagnosis and Cure Will Prevent Kidney Disease From Becoming Chronic

When disease attacks some vital part of the body, it is usually true that the disease can be halted. Bright's disease, as it is commonly called, of the kidney, is such a disease. Bright's disease, if not treated in the early stages, however, may halt the progress of the disease.

In the first stage of Bright's disease there is swelling of the tissues because the kidneys there is decreased reduction of the power of the kidney to eliminate salts, and a moderate rise in the blood pressure. This is the time the treatment should have as its aim the prevention of the chronic form of the disease, before any symptoms appear. Many people have developed the beginning of Bright's disease. That is why I stress so often the "some" looks more like the "some" of Johnson than it does like the last two letters of "Joan," which we are accustomed to pronouncing as "ay."

However . . and this can be your guide . . if you have trouble in the pronunciation and spelling you probably have a little of the "some" way to pronounce and write the "ay" sound. Perhaps it is the "some" pronounced and written by the person whose name is "Some" . . a useful rule of etiquette. The classic example is Mr. Smith, who wants his name pronounced to rhyme with "myth," and Mr. Smythe, who wants his name pronounced to rhyme with "myth."

If you wish to "stick by your guns," it's your privilege to do so. But in your way of pronouncing your daughter's name will necessarily have to become your friends' way of pronouncing it. By the time your daughter is grown up, perhaps your grandchildren will call her name may be so fixed there will be no question but there is she is the one who then can be the arbiter of the spelling and the pronunciation.

Wedding Without a Father

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My fiance, who is in the service, and I are to be married this summer at my church, with only my brother and my fiance's brother present. We are each having one bridesmaid.

I. As white is not becoming to me and since my wedding will be very informal, would it be permissible for me to wear a blue or pink dress and dress perhaps of light blue?

2. Since my father isn't living and I have no close male member of the family to give me away, should I wonder it my maid of honor and I could lead down the aisle together and meet the bridegroom at the altar? Or how could this be arranged?

—JAYNE.

Yes to both questions.

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Mother Has Difficulty Establishing Her Own Identity With Friends

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am terribly puzzled over the name of my daughter. Everyone calls her "Joanne", thinking (and still believing)- that "Joanne" is pronounced "Jo-ann" as it looks. However, practically all my friends pronounce it "Jo-Anne" and call her "Jo-Anne." I very much like the name "Joann" and would like to be correct to spell it "Joanne." And which is the pronunciation of "Joanne." Please tell me if I am correct or if my friends are, and if the I can feel at ease when people ask me the name of my daughter.

M.E.

I think it may be true that your spelling of "Joann" is a way by which we aren't accustomed with undoubtedly many more pronunciation difficulty for you now and for your daughter later on. Correct inclination would be to pronounce "Joann" as it looks, rhyme it with the "anne" looks more like the "anna." of "Johanna" than it does like the last two letters of "Joan," which we are accustomed to pronouncing as "ay."

However . . and this can be your guide . . if you have trouble in the pronunciation and spelling you perhaps have a little of the "some" way to pronounce and write the "ay" sound. Fashion Flashes

NOTHING LIKE IT has been seen in days of rationing and economizing on orders placed for the Fall season. Dainty woolen with a suede finish is used for a nine coat, with tucked and double-breasted stitched buttons. Lined with rayon satin the fly is used for wide notched revers, narrowed tuxedo and turnback cuff.

IT'S WONDERFUL what designers have done with the little street-length dress. Here's a dress-up frock. Young and lovely in a black crepe with a deep yoke border on the skirt, tiny shaded sleeves with lace cuffs and a lace collar, petal roses at the base of the deep V neck.

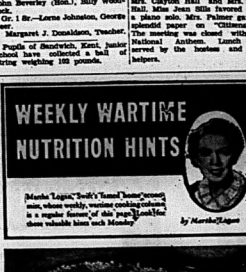
PLENTY OF WEAR against the new season for the light-weight woolen frock. Gold woven is used for a useful frock with matching composition buttons all down the front. Finish is made with a flaring neckline finished with a ruffle. Pullover either side of the centre.

A DOUBLE LIFE is what most women are leading these days. Separate skirts uniforms, work overalls or slacks, for daytime duty and a pretty frock or negligee at night. A pretty housecoat is of red silk rayon crepe, with deep cowl and rear's coat lines with two double-breasted buttons at the front. Slash cloth either side of the waist. Notched waist-length revers and cuffs, padded with narrow black velvet ribbon.

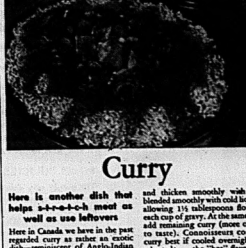
NEW ORDERS drastically curtail the fullness in women's dress suits, coats. So choose your girdle with regard to your curves. A pointy made also is unkind to bulges.

A BOON for summer-in-town women is a well tailored suit in rayon crepe. Fitted jacket, the jacket fully fitted, the skirt gored. Matching colored combination set with shantung. This suit is nice for evening wear too.

If all the letters posted each day in London were salvaged, enough paper could be obtained to make 300,000 ammunition boxes, said C. U. Peel, Joint Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Supply.



Curry



Here is another dish that helps s-t-r-e-t-c-h meat as well as use leftovers

Here in Canada we have in the past regarded curry as rather an exotic dish—reminiscent of Anglo-Indian Colonels and dark-skinned native cooks. But in a time like this, curry comes into its own. In the first place, lima beans, peas, and other meat substitutes are not mention see food and eggs—all take very kindly to curry flavoring. And it is a perfect way to use assorted and miscellaneous collection of leftovers—curry can assume any glamour in a curry. Finally, curry offers the perfect treatment for the last tender and tasty cuts of meat.

and chicken smoothly with flour blended smoothly with cold liquid (or allowing 1½ tablespoons flour for each cup of gravy. At the same time, add remaining curry (more or less, to taste). Consistency consider curry best if cooked overnight and reheated . . . the "hot" flavour becomes mellow. Serve with fluffy hot rice, and chutney.

The basic recipe we give here can be varied to suit your family's taste. If they like "hot" foods you can double or treble the quantity of curry powder. The important thing is to have a generous layer of onion and plenty of onions. Any vegetable leftovers can be added with benefit, both to the dish and your diet.

CANADIANS

combined-operations training in Britain. Immediately after the exercises the convoy carrying assault troops sailed for the Mediterranean and they went right to their battle-stations when the convoy was attacked by aircraft.

The eight 3,000-mile trip was made without any trouble — fantastic considering that it was made in daylight right through the Straits of Gibraltar and into the Malta Channel towards Pachino Peninsula, with the full invasion armada concentrated into one gigantic convoy.

The day before the attack we started to head in the general direction of Sicily and everyone was keyed to a high pitch. In the morning the wind started to kick up whitecaps on the Mediterranean which up till then had been as calm as a millpond.

The wind was steadily until by afternoon it was of gale proportions. By that time we could see Malta, 60 miles away, but we never thought the operation would have to be postponed. Our boats could not live in that sea but paratroops came toiling on the job we'd set.

Told Attack to go on.

A Colonel told us the attack was to go on, at last we were definitely on our way. There was quite a strong air force there though, and it wasn't going to be any innocuous landing in which we could just be a tough beach with a sandbar stretched out in front of it.

During the evening (Friday, July 9), we learned that the Intelligence officers ship that the Pachino airfield had been plowed up. Some thought perhaps that would be the end of our attack. But security had been perfect right to the end. The attack was definitely a tactical surprise, according to headquarters staff officers.

Down in the mess decks the Canadians were preparing for their landing. Every man had a light sweater, dabbed a little more oil on their weapons, sorted out grenades and loaded up with ammunition. There were having a whale of a time. In the morning, however, NCO's were playing cards and drinking soda pop and all was "dry" all the way. In the officers' lounge a British Colonel had a piano accordion — playing some lively tunes and a few undoubtedly ones.

Canfarence is Held

The officers met in the lounge and were addressed by the Brigadier. Similar meetings were held aboard the other ships. It was an hour approached.

"We are on the eve of a night in history that will never be forgotten," said the Colonel, "we will be back on this night, and our children will be in the world of the future as the night we started to put the Axis to the enemy."

Then everyone repeated the Lord's Prayer and shook hands all around.

The meeting broke up. I went on deck and watched the convoy in the moonlight.

There was still no air attack. Unbelievable! At midnight we saw great flashes in the distance where Malta lay. Our bombers were hitting their targets. Tracers reached into the sky. There were some coastal searchlights playing over the sea. We were too far out then to be bothered by them.

Earlier we had all been getting a little jumpy for it looked like suicide to lay to land in the dark. We had the evening meal and were becoming reconciled to a possible postponement. But when darkness fell we were still heading for the southeast tip of Sicily.

Hundreds of Ships

Hundreds upon hundreds of other ships and warships were around us — the greatest convoy ever to sail to the attack. There were ships as far as you could see, about 10 p. m. the wind suddenly dropped and the whitecaps disappeared.

The Italian Command gambled on the wind falling — undoubtedly it had the worst of the gamble. We won. Then the big convoy broke up. The Canadians lobbed off for the Gela beaches. We sailed right ahead under a first-quarter moon that glided in the west. The sky was clean and crowded with stars.

I could hear the thunderous drone over towards Italy. Some flares shot up from the shore. They were unnerving and lingering. I was going in with the naval commander in a naval motor launch which was to guide the assault troops to the right beaches.

Debarked at 1 A. M.

At 1 a. m. we went down the side of our ship in an assault landing craft and set off for shore. Still when up high in the air. We rocked about and moved among the ships which now were all anchored a thousand miles off Pachino Peninsula. Finally we landed on the beach quietly and clambered aboard. Slowly the assault landing craft manoeuvred around us for the run in. Many of the troops were awake in them.

Through a megaphone, our commander on the bridge of the motor launch told the flotillas destined for our beach to follow him, and we set off with our three flotillas aped off noiselessly for other beaches. The British Commander was the Canadian left flank and another British formation on the right.

Crack units were to land first and destroy a coastal battery. Ahead of us we could see a glare in the sky. The air attack and naval bombardment had set Pachino ablaze. Wooden buildings in the town of 13,000 inhabitants were burning. See Canadians.

To the left I saw tracer bullets and could hear the bang of machine-guns. Troops were landing. We crept in closer until we could see the low, dark coastline of Sicily in the shadows. Dawn was about up, fingered and snuffed out. The enemy was giving some kind of signalling. Tremendous explosions boomed out in the night. I think it was when we got our bombing in Ireland. We could see gigantic flashes.

On our right there were more flashes, but this time more forward. Warships of the Mediterranean fleet were shelling positions on the Pachino line. The noise was ear-splitting; though the ships were miles away. Well, that is, I thought occurred but could see the gleaming gun barrels up some at that distance. Tracers started to criss-cross our bows.

Some Royal Canadian Engineers from Ontario, with a 21st Canadian unit of an Ontario regiment were touching down ahead of us. There were mines in the water. Also there were underwater obstacles to rip the assault boats. Then I heard our Bren guns. They have a quick, distinctive knocking sound like a stick striking on a door.

In Action

Canadians were in action.

Dawn was creeping up as I transferred from the motor launch to a landing craft for beaching. Engineers had gone in ahead of us, bringing up the first waves of an assault division who had done over and in we went. Naval craft were laying a smoke screen for us, and from destroyers, cruisers, monitors and a monitor dinned in our ears.

Some boats had engines that kept sagging away with their final assault troops. Others were sent the coastal battery halfway between the beach and Pachino, which was another six-inch guns. Shells crashed in the water around us. We writhed this story for it looked plenty hot then.

But we waded frantically through the breakers and were ashore on the beach. Troops swarmed off their craft and went through a gap in the wire defences which the Italians had been prepared for capture. They had, however, left their dead soldiers lying out in the sand dunes on the other side of the wire.

Not an enemy beach machine-gun post was in action right now. Machine guns were cut through the wire which stretched the whole length of the beach which was sandy and 50 yards wide from the sea to the dunes where the wire was located.

Little Firing Heard

Canadians were firing to the right and left and an occasional burst of enemy fire was coming from several hundred yards inland. The Canadians for their first Second World organization now was being set up with naval and army and a second working speedily.

I counted in the water on the beach 9,000 prisoners have been taken. with one thought in mind—digging in for three-hundred miles on the basis of a past disagreeable experience, I dug a foxhole. Then I became. I had no spade so I scooped out sand with my hands and my tin cup.

The sun now was up. Infantry-men with fine bayonets were prodding Italians on the dunes. Then a first prisoner had been taken—a soldier in a uniform. Apparently his comrades had run for it.

Canadians moved up a hill to the right of the beach and occupied it. Others scooted north and west. There was some firing from farm-houses among the vineyards on the hillsides inland. There were stone walls around most of the farms. We approached a farm land, though, with many rocks.

No Fe Planes Seen

For half an hour we waited tensely for enemy planes but they never showed up. The beach was organized now, and special Britian beach groups had the whole situation in hand.

Canadian infantry were racing up the road leading to Manchi, a mile and a half from the beach. Manchi is a hill mountainous hilltop and served as an Italian barracks and ammunition dump. The troops surprised nearly 200 Italian soldiers there and conquered the lot of them. The infantrymen went on to a coastal junction about farther north on the same road. This was the one that blasted at us on the way in.

Attacking with grenades, the Canadians stormed the gun position and knocked the battery out, taking more prisoners. Troops of an Ontario regiment by now were also about three miles inland and pushing ahead at top speed. The R.C.E. and British sappers were clearing mines from the roads in sectors. They located several large minefields and dug up some of the latest model German mines.

On the right flank a British formation had equal success in landing and taking out beach defenses. They occupied the tip of the peninsula and then, I believe, captured Pachino town. (The capture of Pachino was confirmed Monday, some hours after Milton wrote this dispatch, and was unofficially credited to British and Canadian forces.)

At any rate, Pachino, burned to a crisp, fell during the morning.

DEATH RAINS DOWN ON ST. NAZAIRE

There are some mines but many more hits and right in the buffs'eye, says Great Pyrie Portsmen raided the Nazi sub base at St. Nazaire and shattered all three locks leading into the U-boat basin. Many bombers had passed over the target as this picture was made and many of the "white mushrooms" bear evidence of their accuracy.

Durocher Apparently on Way Out As Manager of Brooklyn As Dodgers Rise Up in Revolt

Peace Restored, but Players "Sick of Being Second Guessed" and Troubled Waters Ahead

LEADERS ADVANCE

Both Yankees and Cardinals Increased Their Respective Leagues Lead by Winning Pair

By TED MEEKE

Leo "Lippy" Durocher apparently is on the way out as manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers as the aftermath of the revolt against his leadership Saturday.

While no first-hand evidence regarded today in thily latest Ebbets Field upheaval, rumours the three-day suspension of star pitcher Bobo Newsom for what Thursday, termed "insubordination," the sentiment of the players generally reported to be that they are "sick of being second guessed" and that future lineup changes can be expected unless Durocher succeeds in restoring harmony.

These developments overshadowed the baseball and other action on the diamond that saw St. Louis Cardinals and New York Yankees sweep doubleheaders from Boston Braves and Chicago Sox to widen their leads to 3 1-2 and 4 1-2 games, respectively.

The runaway Cardinals chalked up their sixth in a row and their 12th in 13 with a 12-4 win over Gumbert blanked the Braves, 3-0, on six hits in the first game and Whitey Kurowski doubled with the bases full in the 11th inning for a 3-2 conquest in the nightcap.

Yankees likewise had no trouble in widening their margin in fine style by making it four straight over the White Sox, taking both wins in 11 starts.

Spud Chandler won his 10th game with a six-hit 9-0 shutout in the opener, in the nightcap the Yanks took a 6-0 lead blew it when the Sox scored in the seventh inning, then won out, 8-6, in the 9th on Bobby Rod Metheney's first homer of the season.

Mike Gaudsil suffered his first defeat in eight starts for Washington when Cleveland knocked him out in the first inning and went on to a 5-1 victory behind Al Smith's five-hit writing. however, gained a split the day by winning the second game, 6-4, in 10 innings.

Detroit and the Philadelphia Athletics also split a twin bill. Rookie Don Black of the A's beat the Tigers, 4-3, in the opener, Veteran Tommy Bridges pitched a brilliant three-hit shutout to gain a 5-0 triumph for the Tigers in the afternoon nap.

Behind the seven-hit pitching of Bucky Walters and Ray Starr Cincinnati beat the slumping Phillies 7-0-1, 4-2, and 5-0.

St. Louis Browns took both ends of their bargain bill from Boston Red Sox, Chet Laabs' 11th homer of the year was the first game, 8-1, in 12 innings while Nelson Potter twirled a five-hitter to take the afterpiece, 4-0.

Chicago Cubs and New York Giants divided a second successive doubleheader. Ernie Lombardi's 10th inning home run gave the first Ass Giants, 4-3; Bill Nicholson's seventh inning homer with one on gave the Cubs the second by the same score.

Added to Mickey Mitch's stock-in-trade trade that scored the tying and winning run Max Butcher's Pittsburgh right hander, beat Brooklyn for the first time, 3-2. Dodgers came back to win the second, 5-4.

In the National League Saturday St. Louis trimmed Boston 6-0 while Pittsburgh took Brooklyn 8-3 and Chicago and New York split a doubleheader, Chicago winning the first 10-4 and New York taking the afterpiece 4-3 in ten innings. Boston broke the win-column, downing Philadelphia 8-4.

In the American League Philadelphia beat Detroit 6-1 while Boston took St. Louis 6-3 and New York trimmed Chicago 9-3. Washington blanked Cleveland 4-0.

Having dispensed of Al Dunlop last week, Wilbur "Tex" Morgan now meets Jerry McMonahan in his next ring appearance at the Rume Arena Wednesday evening. Monahan is a well known Toronto wrestling circles and a tough customer for Jackson, despite his victory over Dunlop. Then The Blimp, wrestling's latest drawing creation, who weighs 642 pounds on the hoof and is nearly a month in himself, meets Dunlop. Then Promoter Tunney is bringing George Tofalolf, an acquisition referred to as "the best unl Golden Greek", because of his numerous conquests of these players, all form on Stan Stasiak

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, July 12. — (AP) — Baseball tomorrow: If you consider the 13th an unlucky day, tomorrow you have a baseball lineup composed of these players, all born on the 13th:

Mr. Wild Bill Donovan, Stube Wedell, Stella Rommel; Catcher, Johnny Riddle; Pitchers, Hooked Bill Edward C. Foster Charles (Steele) Hlasney and Jos. Franklin (Home Run) Baker; Outfielders: Fielder Jones, Joseph Jevers and William L. Gardner. . . Gardner really was an infielder, but you'll have to put a third man in the outfield.

Sheep slaughtering, the International League President, blames football for the decline of Chicago baseball, which was bigtime stuff when he went to Notre Dame. . . "And it isn't good football, either," he says. "I don't know how many Army-Notre Dame games I've seen, but they can't find any better than that I'll stick to the prize." If you think Tex Rickard is the greatest boxing fanker that's beaten them three out of four this season) how about Jerry Donnelly, old-time Detroit hurler, who did it for real. Under a 5 a.m. call to Christy Mathewson, who took 22 shutouts with the Reds?

Today's Guest Star.

Jim Martin, Washington Star: "The Nationals lost their manager Thursday and finally packed his suitcase and headed home. Letty's bread of banter was brilliant, but also expensive. Bill Griffith was paying $11,000 a year for what amounted to Damon-and-Pythia comedy but virtually no baseball."

Cleaning The Cuff

Tom Meehan, who have been taking a panning for not buying ball players, hasn't said a word about trying to buy first baseman Les Scarsella who is hitting .360 for Oakland. But he's being turned down because they couldn't give two or more players for him.

MAKING THEIR COME-BACK

WHAT'S DOING IN SPORT

The troops of Military District No. 1, taking in 11 western Ontario counties revealed their athletic strength in the annual field day at Little Stadium, London, for selection of athletes for the All-Ontario track championships scheduled for July 24. Led by Lt. Cpl. W. J. Pilsworth, winner of four first, Chatham Basic Training Centre walked off with the district honors in scoring 93 points, to 36 by Camp Ipperwash, 28 by Listowel Basic Training Centre and London District Depot, Kitchener, Stock and Windsor unit trailing.

Product of Walkerville Collegiate, Cpl. Jack Pilsworth, made a clean-up in the track events, winning the 100 and 220 yard dashes, and running on the winning relay team. Pte. Gunder Haegg of Sweden, in his third American appearance of the season, his chief rival, Gil Dodds, Boston divinity student, 128 yards in the rear as he glided across the finish-ing line of a two-mile event at Long Island, failed to set up a new world mark of 8:33.8. However, the world mark of 8:33.8. However, the Swede came very close to his own unofficial record for the distance of 8:47.8 and the fans does not appear to be anybody around who can keep him in greater speed in open competition.

Two of the eastern rowing association clubs competed in the annual regatta Friday for the Senior 8 oar stock trophy, the wartime program taking place at Brockville. Brockville Rowing Club members went to the Brockville carnival in 36 points to 24 against, with the crews of the Ottawa Rowing Club. Conditions prevented the participation of the Lachine Rowing Club.

For the first time in Grand Circuit racing, a father and son figured in a thrilling driver's duel daily double at North Randall track Sunday, the dad getting the nod for a $2 ticket. Seventy-year-old Ben White, driving Barbara Hancock, three-year-old filly, to the $7,857 Coaching Club Stakes, and his son, Hal White, Gibson, was behind Volturn in winning the 2:20 pace in straight heats. Fastest time of the day, 2:03, was made by Adios in the second and decided heat of the American Stake for three-year-old pacers.

Major League Baseball chieftains are getting very touchy, as indicated by recent events and dialogue. The latest controversy is between Manager Joe Cronin of the Yankees and Manager Luke Sewell of the St. Louis Browns over an exchange of statement from the latter to the effect that the Yanks "got all the breaks from the umpires." Sewell by the breaks from the umpires." Sewell by the has protested to President Will Harridge of the American League over the "slur."

Participating in wide sweeps over Sicily in the protection of Canadian, British and American troops who were being landed after the securing of bridgeheads by first assault units were Canadian fighter pilots based on Malta. All in Readiness For All-Star Game

Philadelphia, July 12 — (DP) — Major League club owners made a 2-1 decision to play the all-star baseball game in Philadelphia this year.

It comes off tomorrow in Shibe Park.

For when the Nationals and the Americans start shooting at 9 p.m., it looks as if every one of the 22,490 seats will be full of customers and the S.R.O. sign will be out. All but 2,000 tickets were gone soon after opening and requests were still coming in.

LITTLE GIANTS BORROW SUITS AND BEAT BIRDS

Royals and Chiefs Sweep Series in Hectic "Pint Sized" Weekend of Ball

You will hear often in baseball circles that a change of uniform will work wonders for the individual player but until yesterday the experiment was never tried on a wholesale scale.

But Jersey City Giants pasted around in the International League circle since early Spring, arrived in Baltimore yesterday to borrow their uniforms and playing pants. Baltimore had failed to keep up with them.

Baltimore officials hunted up some spare uniforms and equipment — and then watched the Giants batter out a 9-3 verdict in 9 innings. The hour-long search was extra fruitful, for the Giants made it impossible to play a second game.

Biggest surprises of yesterday's baseball activities were the clean sweeps registered by Montreal Royals over Toronto and Newark Newark over Toronto and Rochester divided.

Syracuse took two from the second place Bears by the home run route.

Goody Rosen hit one and Hank Biasatti one in the first game in which they won, 4-0, behind the effective hurling of Steve Nagy and Lynn Nelson while Dutch Meir connected with the circuit clout in the nightcap which the Chiefs stowed in the win column, 3-1.

Roberto Ortiz got the shutout and four master, his blow in the sixth inning with the bases loaded that finally triumphed in the 11th inning. Manager Hank Greenberg of the Jersey City Giants, who had failed to find a right-hander to stop the Montreal attack Saturday Newark took Baltimore 6-1 while Rochester triumphed 4-1 while Rochester triumphed 4-1 while Buffalo annexed the second, 6-1.

Steve Nagy and Lynn Gerald Priddy, Senators — Smith pitched five-hitter in first game of double-header and Priddy drove in winning run in nightcap to give Washington split.

Chet Laabs and Nelson Potter, Browns—Laabs hit 13th-inning home run with first game; Nicholson, Cubs, homered in second game.

Bucky Walters and Ray Starr, Reds—Walters turned in seven-hit pitching jobs to beat Phillies twice; Walters knocked in three runs with three hits, one a homer.

TENNIS STAR'S PROMOTION

London (CP) — Wing Commander C. E. Malfroy, D.F.C., former New Zealand tennis star, has been named to command a fighter command station somewhere in England and some 300 hours flying time he was taken off operational work last July.

CASUAL COMMENT

By R.J.C.

An Ontario farmer caught a young woman in the act of "pumping her mare" on his property and had her hailed before the county magistrate.

Magistrate—What's the charge?

Constable—Lifting a bath in the spring, your worship!

The age of pageantry of justice casualized a dog-eared copy of the statutes and buried himself in its pages for several minutes. Then, closing the legal tome and stamping his head, he said very solemnly:

Magistrate—The charge is dismissed and the case is discharged. I find that she has just as much right to take a bath in the spring as in the fall.

One For the Book

To clear the bases without an error being charged to a batter down the third baseline is one of those baseball feats that rarely occurs. But the same thing happened in this game at Waterloo. In the big fourth frame the sacks were crammed and the batter rolled a slow bounding ball down the third baseline. The pitcher elected to force a man at the plate but his throw was wide of the mark, which got the idea that he could pick the runner off third and started for the bat. The runner got back safely but the mesmitic idea was on third broke for home. He scored standing up as the catcher threw to third to try and stop a man advancing from second. The batter reached the third baseman and fired to second to try and get the orbited man at that base. Others on the runner on third run home on the play. There wasn't a bad peg or error on the whole play. In all the years of baseball I've seen a second or so after the run-ner.

This and That

The Sport Department of a newspaper is liable to be asked for information on almost anything from time to the price of eggs in Cuba, but I think the query I've just heard yet. An agitated housewife called and wanted to know if the Atlanta, Georgia, paper and asked the date of their 4th of July issue. Sensing a futile flash, "I suppose you'll think it's silly," she explained, "but I want to send it to a birth certificate for my maid. She doesn't know how old she is, but her mother says it was the day after Independence Day."

With the assistance of the sport writers and radio men, a list of vital statistics was advised that the maid is 37 years old, Independence Day, Atlanta et Rena, Nev., July 4, 1910. We've never gone in very heavy for nurses at any time but because after they reach a certain age they are entitled to the federal debt and we'll move a long with the suggestion to get any time to avoid 'em. Even so we come across information recently released by the American Bowling Congress that seems to carry a deal of meaning as to the local bowling has taken on the sporting and recreation-al-ing public. The figures show that during the past year there were 14 million people in the United States tumbling the pins. That tremendous figure broken down amounts to thirteen and a half million men, two million women and five hundred thousand youngsters.

Mars, This and That

The golfers at the Bay of Quinte Country Club are in the throes of two club tournaments at one time, the club championship and the President's Cup are the principal competitions involved at this time.

The draws are made elsewhere in today's issue. Any golfers, even who didn't get around to see The Blimp (642 pounds of it) on display at the Rume Arena last week can see this freak Wednesday night at the Rume Arena when Tex Morgan meet Tunney calls George Tofalolf "the best unl Golden Greek". . . Wrestling fans in general could go for a second edition of Lou Londos. . . Manager Joe McCarthy of the New York Yankees, protested to President Harridge regarding Luke Sewell's allegation that the umpires favor the Brooklyn baseball breaks". . . Sewell, manager of the St. Louis Browns, admits he's running a flag-contending team, or at least "trying" to become former Belleville ballster, is getting his team knocked with the Frood Mine team yet.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 113

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Signals may come and signals may go, but a one-jump-jump signal will always be a fixture in bridge. It tells partner the nearest win the shortest in the quickest and easiest way.

What does a one-jump sound like? In response to one club, suppose you say two in diamonds, or hearts or spades or no-trump; or three clubs. That's a jump of one in the number you could have used.

What does a one-jump ask and promise? It commands partner to help keep the bidding open to game. It agrees to help partner keep the bidding open to game.

What does a one-jump show? Enough tricks to make a game with what partner has shown so far. And if the one-jump is immediate, it also guarantees two sure tricks in the jumper's hand.

An enough bid of one promises five tricks. Can you see how many tricks a one-border shows with his two sure tricks? The balance to make a game with opener's five.

Gather these virtues into one sentence. In answer to an opening bid of one, how many tricks are shown by an immediate one-jump? I mean with the two sure tricks.

If the one-jump is a takeout, to a new suit, shows six tricks; if an assist in a minor suit, six tricks; if an assist in a major suit, five tricks; if in no-trump, four high cards (or five high cards without two sure tricks).

Your partner starts with an opening bid of one heart and you have this hand:

♠K 9 6 5 4
♥ K Q 4 2
♦ A J 9 8
♣ 8

Your hand contains two sure tricks; two aces. You also hold four high cards; two aces, a king, a queen. And you have six tricks; four high cards and two sure cards in clubs.

With that you know you have enough sure tricks and tricks for game. You know you have enough for an immediate one-jump response to something. But in what?

Your spade suit is biddable, but takeout. You have adequate hearts for an assist in your partner's suit. And you have enough high cards for no-trump.

That's how you know you have enough for an immediate one-jump response to anything. Which of these should you choose first?

The order of preference in this is guided by T-A-N: takeout, assist, no-trump. That tells you a takeout comes first. So your first response should be a one-jump takeout to two spades.

What's the use of having something good if you do not use it up you should?

LESSON NO. 114

Horse dense is the master pal-tern for the best bridge. All good bridge is made from its lines. I may feed it to you in facetious tidbits, But it is no joke.

Take any bridge hand. Apply to it the true Horse Sense rules and you will always have the correct bid. There are no exceptions. There are no doubts.

To count tricks at a no-trump bid, add all your high cards and short cards.

To open with a bid of one in a suit, have five suit tricks, with four high cards with two sure tricks and biddable suit. To open with one no-trump, have five high cards, with two sure tricks.

In response, pass with not more than two tricks; bid if you have more than two tricks with two high cards. An immediate one-jump shows two sure tricks in enough tricks to help make a game.

Bids follow T-A-N: takeout, first; assist, second; no-trump, last. To takeout, have a biddable suit. To assist, have adequate support. To bid no-trump, have enough high cards.

A takeout to a new suit is forcing for one round. A one-jump is forcing to game and shows six or five or four tricks, depending on what the jump is in.

That's all there is. There isn't any more to an opening bid of one in a suit and its first responses. Know them and you're more expert than expert who uses judgment.

Your partner starts with an opening bid of one spade and you have this hand:

♠K 9 7
♥ A Q 7
♦ Q 6 4 2
♣ A J 3

Your immediate response is a one-jump in hearts. You should say: "Partner, with yours I have enough high cards for a game in no-trump."

Also, T-A-N shows partner you have neither a takeout suit nor assist-able support for an assist in spades. Like cellophane.

Hour of Grace

CHAPTER 7

"You didn't tell us you'd seen her, Toby."

"I didn't tell anybody here. I didn't want to explain or answer questions. Besides, Clara and I are somewhat alike, if you analyze us. We've both had heroines."

"Okay pal, here we go. This old "Step feelin' perty low yourself" buggy is purring now, thanks to the chatter strings on your purse."

But her imagination had been lighted. She tried to ask quietly, "What Clara's husband in Rome at the time?"

"My no, hence the party. I didn't see him at all."

Meagan sat still, trying to comprehend what Toby had said, trying to stretch her meagre emotional experience so that she could clearly see the meaning behind his words. Toby and Clara in Rome together, the people they were . . .

Then she asked, "Is she coming here because of you?"

He did not answer at once. Then he said, "Maybe this is the turn. I didn't have when I was growing up. Dad sent me away to school to develop my muscle while all the other boys were falling in love with Clara. I don't know if I'm in love with her or not. She's fascinating and romantic and high-spirited and damned beautiful. She's the most beautiful woman I've ever seen." When Meagan did not answer, he said, "Oh, cheer up. I'm not going to complicate your problems. Clare remains Mrs. Christopher. You don't think she'd give up any of that for me, do you? Falling in love to Clara is a habit. She can no more help it than some people can help collecting antiques."

"I don't like it, Toby."

"I'm sorry, kid. I told you so you'd know the score right from the start. I thought you were a big girl now. I'm not at all sure that I like it. It's just one of those things."

"I don't understand it," Meagan said. "I don't think I'm a big girl if I'm expected to understand such rona love affairs. Love has to be honest, Toby, and it's one of the things that has to be beautiful. If love isn't beautiful, then nothing else can be. All of living isn't. I know that now. I've stopped believing in Santa Claus. You have to struggle to live. You have to work to live and to have a place in life. But the one thing that can be beautiful is love."

"Those are nice words."

"Just nice words?"

"I hope to God you never under-stand some of it. I hope to God you stay the way you are."

"I'm staying close to you for the time being."

They looked at each other, a long look, before he said, "It don't know why. I don't deserve it. But at least I haven't any illusions about myself."

"Why haven't you?"

"Let's not go into that, please. Besides," his smile tried to encourage her, "we're supposed to a party."

It was useless to say more. The little moment of intimacy had ended and he would be angry if she said that she did not want to go to a party now. Her lips began to ache from biting down hard. Toby wouldn't let her talk. He called it lecturing.

The Haynie house was a rambling white clapboard structure with encircling porches. A stone path led directly down to the beach and the bay. It was one of the largest and newest houses on the island and pleasantly conspicuous for its formal garden in the rear where today the flowers were vivid bursts of bloom adding more color to an already brilliant scene. The place was crowded with people sitting in chairs around white tables under brightly striped umbrellas. Discreet colored servants, the black and white of their uniforms punctuating the vivid colors of the women's clothes, moved about with large silver trays. The rear garden overflowing, there were people in the house and on the beach and a few in swimming.

Toby parked his car on the main highway. Entering the garden, she was conscious an instant later that Toby had left her. Glancing around to look for him, she saw Sue and Van and Channing standing near her. Sue looked pretty in blue. Sometimes the bay breeze had an disturbed one hair of her smooth brown head. Van looked thin and drawn, his sandy hair receding, his twisted smile that had once been charmingly spontaneous a mere habit now. And Adele looked as she always looked at parties, as though she had been thinking hard of something else when she dressed. For her white dress was wrinkled and she had not cleaned her white shoes and her lipstick was smeared.

Sue cried, "Meagan! We were afraid you'd—"

Van grinned. "We're way ahead of you. This is a real party."

Sue said, "There are scores of strangers here. People from Washington, from New York. Some really important people, too. But I don't believe they help half that in war times it's too extravagant to entertain like this."

Van said, "I'm going to get a drink and get Meagan a drink. Where's Toby?"

"Oh, around."

"Well, I'm going to get you a drink . . ."

"Make me one," Adele said.

"No more for me, dear," Sue said. "I've had my share."

"I wonder what would happen if you took a third," Van said to his wife.

"You'll never know because I'll never take a third."

Adele said, "Let's all go and look for drinks. Van will forget us."

Meagan was prepared to follow them but at that moment ahead, she saw Clare and Toby coming toward her. Though she stood still and a smile formed on her lips; though she looked only a lovely, shrinking maide girl about to greet a childhood friend, she was tremulous inside, her heart pounding. She thought, perhaps someday I'll know that we looked her and feared her because she was beautiful. But I'll never know her. I know only her face, her cover . . .

Clare wore an aqua colored dress draped to reveal her lovely, curved body. It was a dress of today, but Clare herself was of no time. Meagan thought you never could describe her other than to say that she had height and amazing grace. And her hair was black and her eyes blue.

But, oddly, Meagan found herself not envying Clare's beauty but her firm air of having had and having Payne's love, of knowing him and Toby and living with beautiful things. Clare suddenly and shockingly was the old desire to be as beautiful as Clare, as poised, as commanding as though she had entered a room the spotlight had been turned full upon her. Perhaps this summer she would know Clare. Perhaps she would be able to turn the cover and look in. They were not children any more and there was no reason why they were only a woman . . .

"Our hostess," Toby said, smiling, "is looking very happy."

"Why, Meagan," Clare said, with the keenness, candid and looking into her excited face, "You've grown up, Toby said you had."

Meagan, frowning a little, though she was also smiling, was conscious first of Clare's perfume, delicate and sweet. Then looking into Clare's face she was shocked at what she saw. And she wondered if she saw her shock. For close-up Clare had changed. Yet it was the change under the surface, under the flawless face and behind the clear, challenging eyes. Certainly the surface, Clare's exquisite cover, was still the same, there was something Meagan would not define that was undermining it, something under the pure skin that was not pure, something behind the eyes that was at work to destroy their clarity.

"Toby's lost her tongue," Toby said. His tone was a trifle sharp to call her to attention.

"Oh, no! I'm sorry," she said, She reached out and took Clare's hand. "It's so wonderful to be home and see everyone again. Van and Sue and Adele. And Van and Sue married with two children. I didn't tell you to them long enough. Payne said so many people . . . Toby, Meagan doesn't have a drink."

Meagan said, "Van went to get me one."

"He'll drink it himself," Toby said. "I'll get it."

Clare's eyes followed them. Then she looked at Meagan again.

"He looks splendid. And you . . . Well, I want to know everything about you . . ."

"You are only a woman Clare," Meagan thought. You are only a woman. She says the things that all of us say, who says the same things that a chain reaction . . . I'm sorry. It isn't that. It's what you say that makes people do what you want. What is it then? Why do you make me feel gauche and awkward? Perhaps beautiful women know that their beauty is all they have and that they must not forgive the cover to let anyone see inside them . . . Perhaps their beauty is their only weapon. . . I don't want Toby hurt. You hurt the people you know, Clare . . .

She said, "I know it would be a lot more interesting if you told us what you've been doing . . ."

"But I've been doing nothing, absolutely nothing," Clare said.

Meagan's eyes quickened. She thought that Clare was joking when she said she had done nothing or perhaps, on second thought, that she was being modest. But Clare was serious. She had had five years of married and travel and wealth, she had seen all the beauty of the world, the world and she had been a woman loved . . . and yet she had somehow said that she had done nothing. Meagan's sensitive mouth quivered slightly. She could think of nothing to say in response. Something quickly in Clare's eye saw that Clare was looking for Toby probably, her fingers playing with her wide silk handkerchief. Clare was nervous. That unhealthy something under her skin was playing on her nerves.

Clare turned to her and it was obvious that she was only making conversation when she said, "the island is still beautiful and we're simply delighted with the house. You must meet our guests. Some amusing people from Washington. But Washington is so amusing these days. Ah, here's Toby with your drink. Darling, you're arriving Darling, will you find Payne and tell him I want him? Toby, please help me out . . ."

Then Clare and Toby were walking over the lawn toward an older man and woman. And Meagan was standing with a cocktail in her hand, ridiculous from once again Clare had given her an order.

Going forward now she felt again what he had made her feel the first time she had seen him . . . the electrified sense of being exquisitely alive, more alive than she had ever been. . . She stood in her close to him for a few minutes before he took his hand away from his face and then laughed and said, "Well! I didn't know I had company!"

JUDGE CHAS. A. CAMERON,

Canadian lumberjacks are striving to cut 200,000,000 feet of spruce log this year, much of it for airplane Sitka spruce from Queen Charlotte Islands, just 50 miles from the Alaskan border. Train takes logs to the inlet where they are floated into huge rafts. The lumbermen daily walk five miles through bush to work.

Lumbermen work ten hours a day at muscle-building toil, are on piece work and can earn up to $15 a day, sawing and chopping seven-foot thick, 500-year-old trees. Boom men pole the mighty logs to make up a Davis raft.

Bill White starts up tree.

High riggers begin cutting.

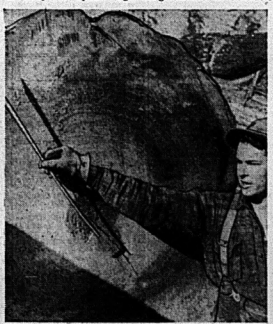
Men of every race, ex-wrestlers, athletes, tough men of the backwoods, fell the forest giants. Alex Pallipcher, a Ukralnian, likes hard work.

Joe McNeil, boss of the "cold deck pile", takes a chaw of stimulating tobacco.

Jack Crosse is a French-Canadian, six feet tall, 225 pounds, an ex-wrestler, is forty years old, but puts in a gruelling 10-hour day as a "faller" — a good one.

Ed Bedlow, boom man, makes up Davis rafts comprised of forty-foot spruce logs.

Alec Barr, an ace faller, strides to work, saw and wedge hammer on shoulder.



The top forty feet falls.

So adept at leaping from log to log in the river or walking the whirling tree trunks are these lumber men, they can walk tightropes in best circus style.

Partner of giant Jack Crosse is Ollie Brackoos, a 38-year-old Scandinavian, 135-pound dynamo who hits blow for blow with his huge co-worker. They stick springboards in the tree bole and swing six-pound axes from this perch.

Norman Wagstaff poses beside a Sitka spruce to show the diameter. It is nine feet through, was nearly 300 feet in height, and close to 400 years old.

Greetings from 250 feet up.

Much of the Sitka spruce goes into pulpwood to make paper or other pulp products. It is cut up, pressed and crushed, made into a wet mash. Above, a worker beats the pulp in the last process before it goes to the presses to become paper. Sitka also is used in gun cotton from which comes cordite for explosives.

Spruce is a source of veneers, thin layers glued together with adhesives, shaped, trimmed and cut with razor-edged tools, to make Mosquito plane fuselages.

George Martin of Toronto, who used to do all the fibre woodwork on the moving parts of pianos, finds his peace-time experience valuable in aircraft work.

BRITISH, CANADIAN FORCES CAPTURE AUGUSTA; JUNCTION FORMED WITH AMERICANS AT RAGUSA

More Troops Pile Ashore on Beaches Near Catania City

Veteran U. S. Forces Repel Fierce Counter-Attacks Destroying Number Of Tanks and Taking Prisoners—Loss of Ragusa and Palazzolo Will Weaken Defenders

12 SHIPS SUNK, 2 DESTROYERS DAMAGED

(By RELMAN MORIN)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, July 13 (CP) — British and Canadian invasion forces swept up the east coast of Sicily at a breathtaking pace today, capturing the Port of Augusta, 19 miles north of Syracuse, while other British troops piled ashore on the beaches near Catania, key city barely halfway up the island's east coast.

British and Canadian troops fought their way into the two strategic communications centres of Ragusa and Palazzolo in the southeastern corner of the island, forming a junction with American troops at Ragusa as the latter pushed steadily northward and eastward from their original landing at Gela.

Again the veteran American troops repelled a fierce counter attack by Axis forces, a number of enemy tanks and taking prisoners, a headquarters bulletin announced.

20 MILES INLAND AT PALAZZOLO

Palazzolo is 20 miles inland from Augusta and its capture marked the furthest point of advance inland by the invading forces. Ragusa is 32 miles southwest of Palazzolo. Both are prizes of great strategic value, being important for whichever of the main and secondary highways in the mountainous Sicily.

Lost of the two cities will deprive defending Axis forces of much of their mobility in their desperate efforts to head off the main Canadian-British offensive. Ragusa is in the mountains and gives the forces in possession clear control of the surrounding countryside.

The capture of Augusta was preceded by a bombardment from afloat and warships, which stood off and lobbed high explosive into the town.

Details of the new landings near Catania were not given immediately, but it was assumed they were made by units of the veteran British 5th Army which originally attacked that side of the island.

ALLIED LOSSES LIGHT

Allied losses in the capture of Augusta were officially described as slight. Port and harbor installations were said to have been undamaged.

General Achilles Durel, commander of the 209th Italian Coastal Division, was the first enemy general to be captured since the invasion of Sicily began last Saturday.

Some German opposition has been met, but not yet in force, and through the Allies have made contact with two regular Italian divisions —presumably of much sterner character than the coastal defenders—the enemy has failed to put up really stiff resistance, Allied officers say.

Pride of Allied bombers participating in the air support campaign against Axis targets throughout Sicily reported that the Sicilian Straits still were choked with transport and supply ships carrying reinforcements to the Italian, Canadian and American forces which spearheaded the invasion.

Axis the French Tanks

Axis forces which for the second time attempted to slow the American advances from the south were reported to have made their junction, Mussolini and on the two ferry terminals of Reggio Calabria and San Giovanni on the Italian mainland, while fighters and fighter bombers sustained their assaults on enemy columns and communications lines.

R.A.F. torpedo planes were reported to have sunk two large merchant ships and damaged two destroyers and two big troop transports.

Jap Supply, Administrative Bases In N. Burma Destroyed by U.S. Bombs

New Delhi, July 13—(CP)—Devastating raids by American bombers and fighter-bombers have destroyed Japanese supply and administrative bases in Northern Burma, a United States communique said today.

Heavy bombers dropped more than 13 tons of bombs on enemy railway installations at Myitkyina yesterday, but clouds prevented an accurate assessment of damage.

On the same day, the lighter bombers, carrying medium and fragmentation bombs, blasted the Japanese base of Naungpaya and returning pilots said that the raid, on top of previous attacks, had destroyed all administration buildings and supply installations.

Yesterday's operations were preceded by widespread attacks against enemy supply centres and troop bases by fighters planes based in Assam. Naungpaya and Shingbwiyang were heavily hit, the communique said, and the largest building in the Sumprabum area, believed to have housed the Japanese headquarters for that district, was destroyed.

Minghyan, another Japanese base area, was the scene of concentrated bomber attack that started many fires.

The Lolaw railway bridge near Mogaung was smashed by 1,000-pound bombs in the same operation.

All planes and crews returned safely.

TURIN POUNDED BY HOME-BASED R.A.F. BOMBERS

Heavy Concentration Of Bombs Dropped; Usual Losses in Planes Suffered

2,000-MILE TRIP

London, July 13 —(AP)— Home-based bombers of the R.A.F. struck a heavy blow at Turin in northern Italy Monday night in operations co-ordinated with the Allied invasion of Sicily, it was announced today.

The Italian raiders encountered bad weather both on the outward and return trips, the announcement said, but over the target area they delivered the "usual heavy concentration of bombs" on their objectives.

Turin, Italy's third largest city, is a big industrial centre and coming the big bombers flew a round trip of approximately 2,000 miles.

Because of the bad weather the aircraft were dispersed on the return flight, it was said, and immediately available, but they were reported "shortly after" the return to operation.

The raid was described authoritatively as "part of the combined operations now going on in the Mediterranean."

Turin has been raided 38 times since the start of the war, the last such attack on night of Feb. 8. Turin is the site of important Italian war industries.

The loss figure negotiated by the raiders Monday night was regarded here as particularly favorable because there were only about six hours of darkness to cover the movement.

It was indicated the homeward route was well to the west of the direct air line.

Monday the British planes over Europe touched off air raid alerts in Switzerland shortly after midnight, but Berlin was not attacked. The alerts were said to have lasted about three hours.

A German broadcast recorded by the British Broadcasting Company claimed bombs had dropped at four places in Switzerland, but that only slight damage was done. One R.A.F. plane, the broadcast said, crashed near Bonaduz, in the canton of Grisons, the crew of four.

Tuesday night the night raiders had returned, formations of Allied aircraft were in action setting across the English Channel in the direction of France, apparently to continue the offensive against Europe by daylight.

Coast Town Attacked

German air raiders carried out a heavy attack on Bari, Italy, on the British East Coast town, causing many casualties and extensive damage, scores of buildings, Reuter says, are still smouldering in the ruins this morning in search of dead and injured.

One bomb scored a direct hit on the railway station where many persons had taken refuge, but only one occupant was injured.

Bombing of Bari began at dusk during the night when enemy plane flew in from the Adriatic Sea, Reuter adds.

The southeast coast raiders dropped bombs without a halt during the night, an Air and Home Security Ministries communique said. It added that one enemy plane was destroyed during the night.

Canadian Soldiers Were Eager for Battle As They Sailed for Africa

ROSS MUNRO, Canadian Press war correspondent with the Canadians overseas, has been with the United Kingdom we had a strong escort of gallantry Hms Royal Navy ships — destroyers, corvettes, frigates and sloops.

Several times destroyers let go patterns of depth charges as suspicious sounds were heard.

This afternoon we are in those waters which a few days ago would have been called "torpedo junction," dominated as they were by Axis aircraft, submarines and ships.

But this time they are as quiet as the Great Lakes.

Glad to be with 8th Army

What with training cruises since we left Britain we have been at sea so long we have to think twice to figure out just how long we have been sailing. The Canadians will be glad to get ashore and stretch their legs by hunting Italians.

Before attacking their battle impression is the Canadians' pride in being a part of the famous 8th Army. They are very anxious to prove their skill at arms at the side of the men from Mons.

The Canadians are not overconfident. They don't think the war will be an easy task, but they are out to help the Dominion's fighting tradition gleaming.

On the eve of the opening of the long-awaited second front they are prepared for anything.

Everyone is keyed up as the zero hour approaches. Wisecracks are being handed about. The Canadians are a happy bunch of wasters with the voyage into battle nearly over.

Security was the watchword of the Canadians until we were well out to sea. War correspondents

DOES NOT MEAN 'CANADIAN ARMY IS BROKEN UP'

Its Role, Says Ralston, is Such It Can be Used in Whole, or in Part

POLICY IN SICILY

Ottawa, July 13—(CP)—Defence Minister Ralston today told the House of Commons that the current Mediterranean operation do not mean that the Canadian army is "broken up."

Col. Ralston said the role of the Canadian army was always "flexible" and it could be "taken apart on the principle of a sectional book-case."

It had been the policy that the Canadian army could be used in whole or in part, wherever and for whatever task was needed by the common cause.

"The Sicilian operation means that that policy is being carried out," the minister said.

Col. Ralston was replying to a question by Hazen Argue, (Co-operative Conservative House Leader, who quoted from a Canadian Press dispatch from London, dated July 11, as follows:—

"It has been thought that when the Canadians went into battle they would go as an army, but the term army has changed in meaning since the North African campaign."

He asked if the campaign now going forward in the Mediterranean meant the Canadian army was broken up.

German Radio Says 2 or 3 More Allied Divisions Arrive

London, July 13—(CP) — Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, German radio commentator, said in a broadcast recorded here that the Allies had landed two or three divisions on the southeast coast of Sicily yesterday and last night.

There was no Allied confirmation of the report, though dispatches from Allied headquarters in North Africa told of a steady stream of reinforcements.

Sertorius reported yesterday that the Allied invasion forces were on Sicily. The boadcast was recorded by The Associated Press.

Munro's Stories Played Up in Press Of Britain, N. Africa

London, July 13 (C.P. Cable)— Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent, whose story on the Canadian army's operations has been in The Canadian Press news, weekly digest of the British Dominion's forces in Britain, now is getting play in British and North African papers published for the troops.

A dispatch from Allied Headquarters in North Africa yesterday said the paper Union Jack gave double-column front-page play to Munro's eye-witness account of the Canadian landing in Sicily.

Les Dernieres Nouvelles d'Alsace, French newspaper, carried a dispatch from its London correspondent landing in Sicily, presumably referring to Munro.

CANADIAN FORCES WITH 'MONTY'

General Commanded Some Famous Canadian Units, Original Desert Army and of First Army and Others

By C. YATES McDANIEL
(Staff Writer, The Canadian Press)

Allied Headquarters, the South-west Pacific, July 13 — (AP) — A Japanese cruiser and three destroyers were sunk and a cruiser and the Kula Gulf — graveyard of at least nine other enemy warships — was bombed for the third straight day in a battle which began last night.

Two other destroyers probably were sunk and enemy losses in the Kula Gulf area since July 5 in ports are in. The battle still was in progress, the communique said, at the time preliminary reports were received here. Rear Admiral Wilkinson from Admiral William F. Halsey.

But already Japan has expended between 140 and 150 enemy aircraft in two battles in the central Solomons while trying to hold apart the jaws of a mantrap which closed on Munda airfield and troops on the enemy air base of Munda, on New Georgia island.

Both battles in the Kula Gulf, which is 15 miles long and eight miles wide at its widest part, occurred as units of the Japanese navy, which supervises from the northern Solomons, encountered United States naval forces which support New Georgia's coastline along the seven.

Today's account from Allied headquarters showed Japan everywhere losing the fight for Munda, New Georgia, in the air show it and in the seas offshore.

Ten miles southeast of it, a Japanese ground force of considerable strength was trapped at Rendgai Inlet and wiped out. Munda itself was cut off from its supply port on the Kula Gulf by a barricade thrown across the connecting jungle trail by the Allied land fighters are less than two miles away.

Allied warplanes pounded away yesterday at Bairoko, at its supply depot across the Kula Gulf at Vila on Kolombangara Island; at its source of air support in the northern Solomons, Kahili airdrome on Bougainville Island, and at the nearest air base with several fields, Ballale, on Shortland.

Offshore, United States warships for the second straight day and the week pumped shells under cover of darkness on Munda.

Twenty Japanese Zeros come over Munda, in a sector about the enemy has lost more than 200 planes since the Pacific drive opened June 30, and were driven off with a loss of five against one. Across from Munda in the Central Solomons the United States planes were lost while a Japanese Betty bomber and one twin-engined fighter were being shot down in a series of air fights.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS DEPT. ESTIMATES UNDER DISCUSSION

Many Subjects Are Reviewed by House Members in Debate During Monday

DEBATE TO CONTINUE

By JAMES McCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, July 13 — (CP) — Members of the House of Commons ranged the world in their discussion of external affairs department estimates yesterday.

The questions they reviewed included the union of Newfoundland and Canada, Canadian representation in Latin America, opportunities for Jews persecuted by Hitler, postwar policy on Japanese in Canada, and Canadian public opinion.

Debate on the external affairs item, which continues today, also touched on the Polish question, and at one point he commented it would mean everything to the Polish people if Russia, Britain, the British Commonwealth, with its countless free and independent citizens, and in a position to co-operate freely, and remain loyal to the Crown, representative of sovereignty, as the Commonwealth had with the King.

Canada had a much autonomy in the United Kingdom he said.

Want Japs Deported

During the current session of parliament British Columbia members, seventy-five per cent of whom are Japanese in Canada be deported after the war, Mr. Ilsley said, members should consider the effect the announcement of such a policy would have on the Japanese-Americans in Japanese hands.

He said he hoped for an agreement between China and Canada and other powers, which would remove any feeling among Chinese that they were discriminated against them in Canada.

The Prime Minister said the question that he did not think that was the proper time to take action on the union of Canada and Newfoundland. If Newfoundland people expressed in a desire for closer confederation he was sure it would receive fully considered attention.

Canada had not given immediate recognition to the various committees of national liberation. The government had welcomed every move that looked to bringing under Gen. Charles deGaulle and Gen. Henri Giraud, who were drawing closer together, and was reluctant to take any premature action that might s wrongly viewed by one faction of the people led by those soldiers. Gen. Giraud, now in the

NAZI LOSSES HIGH

London, July 13 (AP)—A foreign diplomatic source who usually is reliable asserted today that Hitler is reported to have ordered the control of the German offensive in the Kursk bulge and launched a limited front in an action designed to enable the Belgorod wedge and Kursk a major breach in the Russian line.

Dropping all efforts to break through on the northern end of the salient, Von Kluge fell back on Orel and Bryansk, and threw his entire tank crews of the opposing forces into the battle, the source declaring on one occasion.

All German communiques broadcast by the Berlin radio and recorded by The Associated Press, claimed that the Nazi armored forces with the support of the German air force had gained further ground in the area north of Belgorod and had smashed strong enemy counter attacks on other sectors of the front. The communiques suffered "heaviest losses" the German communiques said Sunday including a total of 400 tanks and 133 aircraft.)

Tremendous Russian Successes

The tremendous success of the Red armies was indicated by an announcement from Moscow that Germans have "despaired" of breaking through on the Orel-Kursk sector, after suffering immense losses in one of the most determined attacks they have launched since the start of the Russian campaign. Today, the Russians said, German forces in this sector have been considerably reduced in men and are being used merely to consolidate and prepare positions.

While the Russian midnight communique reported that German attacks were somewhat weaker in the Belgorod-Kursk area Red Star, Moscow army newspaper Red Star said the battle of Belgorod still was daily becoming "more acute," with the attacking waves of hundreds of 60-ton tiger tanks into the fray in an attempt to widen a wedge driven into the defences last week.

A few details are now trickling through about the fighting of the last few days around Belgorod. After breaking through into Russian positions, the Kluge's columns

ADDRESS IS SHANNONVILLE

In last Thursday's publication of the Ontario Intelligencer in the news item giving the names of the new executive officers of the East Hastings Progressive Conservative Association the address of Mr. Orel Clement, secretary, was given as Shannonville. This was in error, it has been pointed out, as Mr. Clement resides in Deseronto.

Sea Cadet Corps Asks For Donation of Unused Room or Building

Anybody got a building or a good sized room they would be willing to donate for the use of the Belleville Quinte Sea Cadet Corps? The problem of acquiring such accommodation is the question now that the Corps has lost the use of the old Armouries and the boys will not be able to use the gym with the same freedom as previously.

We certainly appreciate everything the Belleville Board of Education has done for us in past months," said Mr. Wesley as he broached the subject of acquiring new training quarters. "But in view of the circumstances the present accommodation is not exactly what we need."

Returning from camp at Rotary Island over the weekend, the local sea cadet corps will not return to regular drill period, for a couple of weeks, it was stated.

In the meantime cadet officers are open for offers from any generous minded citizen who may have a suitable room or building they may care to donate for the use of the cadets.

O.C. of Mt. View Air Station Tells Of Training Activities Under E.A.T.P.

Group Captain Ripley, Officer Commanding Mountain View Air Station, was guest speaker at the weekly luncheon of Rotarian Brockton Group Captain Ripley spoke after a number of fine local boys had been called upon those who were wearing coats and those wearing none. He told of the many activities, the two categories embracing practically all Rotarians present. I. Ripley, Rotary Club president in the absence of President John W. Rowen who is at his home on vacation.

The annual Rotary Carnival gains were announced as being August 6 to 14 inclusive, but not yet, the actual site is not decided upon.

Plans are laid for the return of the Queen City Amusement Company to happy plenty of entertainment in the patrons of the carnival.

The season's first fish story was brought to light by Mac McCarthy who declared he had caught 28 fish in one day of his annual vacation, but had it been larger he've told about it.

1,125th Luncheon

Another item of interest came out that Monday's luncheon meeting was the 1,125th since the club received its charter twenty-four years ago.

All Rotarians were invited to the Theatre Field Day, July 19 and 20, at the Trenton Air Station. Congratulations were sent to Rotarian Euston, Superintendent of the Children's Aid Society, on his 36 years to the day in Canada and at the same time congratulating Rotarian Jas. Art Young's recent appointment to the presidency of the Radio Industries' Association.

Singing was led by Harry Mountain with a decided response from no doubt, to the best. Judge Cameron expressed his pleasure at being back among his friends again after a lengthy session in Toronto.

Training Activities

The principal speaker, Group Captain Ripley, was introduced and spoke on the training activities at Mountain View Station, singling out each school with remarks to give it interest then in the Empire Air Training Plan. He said there were five main types of schools at Mountain View, first known as navigators, bombing, which is a higher grouping than ordinary bombers and consists of weather observer pilots, the latter recruited airmen from overseas and South who have been selected at Manning Depot.

The second group of trainees are the W.A.Op. which is a group of Wireless Air Gunners who come from Wireless Schools to Mountain View for bombing training; firing at Gregor targets is part of this group's training. As a rule these W.A.Op's are straight overseas from Mountain View to England through Training Units and, between the two types of trainees, there are from two to three hundred on the station at all times. Mountain View Station is a busy training men in drogue target towing for the navy.

Trainee A.B.

The administrative staff came in for high praise from Group Captain Ripley and he designated their various duties in relation to service personnel as well as the civilian employees working on the station.

Gasoline rationing was stressed as one of the major headaches in transporting civilian workers to and from their work.

Group Captain Ripley said there were 180 W.D.'s on the station and the civilian staff there were 300. He said they were hard workers and were doing a fine job. Flight Lieut. Lewis went to go to outlying stations to check the flying up and at a later date not to be returned to a post. Dapperest Middleman Slander

Malicious slander of service women was a subject the Group Captain touched on briefly, when he said anyone hearing such slander to telephone the Red Cross or the Gestapo or the offenders might be traced and dealt with as they deserve. The police and the government is taking to stop this unwarranted gossip.

Gwen Hetty replied to the guest speaker's remarks in response for the toast and position to that of the day, and told of such outstanding deeds of bravery during the Battle of Britain. Miss Hetty is the daughter of Mrs. Hetty of Trenton.

Kinsmen Welcome Home Member, Lieut. T. Lewis

Club Receives Report on Financial Success of Recent Street Carnival

Belleville Kinsmen welcomed back into the fold a member, who has been serving overseas for the past many months in the person of Lieut. Tom Lewis, who recently returned home after serving in England with the Royal Canadian Ordinance Corps. Lieut. Lewis attended his first Kinsmen Club meeting in nearly two years at the Quinte Hotel last night and also conveyed the thanks of the Belleville Kinsmen boys "over there" for cigarettes being received through the Kinsmen Fag Fund.

Lieut. Lewis was attached to the transport section of the R.C.O.C. whose duty it was to make delivery of all trucks and light vehicles sent overseas. In a short impromptu talk Lieut. Lewis gave a brief outline of the methods used in the delivery of motorized vehicles to the battle zones. One of their chief difficulties was evading German aerial attacks in order that all equipment might be delivered to its destination.

Bandsmen Only

Otherwise the fortnightly meeting of the Kinsmen Club was purely of the business nature. Treasurer Harry Keech reported that the club's two war projects, the Fag Fund and the Milk for British Fund had benefited to the substantial sum of $1,736 as the result of the club's recent street carnival. Kin Court Miller, chairman of the carnival, extended personal thanks to the ladies who helped in the making of the carnival such a success, while President Griff Lloyd expressed his appreciation to the club members and the citizens who helped in the carnival. Kin. C. E. Colling reported that the Commodore committee intend to stage a mammoth dance at the Park Pavilion donating both their services and the promises, for a dance to be held on Aug. 17th with all proceeds going direct to the Kinsmen Fag Fund. Additional talent to make the evening one of a memorial nature is also being planned. Reports as to the progress of the club's Saturday Bingos were also given by Kin. Colling, who stressed the importance of the successful continuance of this established feature of war charity work.

Some Handicaps of British Farmer In War Time

The Canadian farmer is having a tough and strenuous time these days but in comparison with the British farmer he is getting off easy. Britain's normal after-nightfall visitors have to be seen in plain blackness without light visible in the homeyard or from the home or ry other of the farm buildings. Night raiders flying over Britain see no light in all the expanse of towns, villages, and countryside. At blackout time, Britain's farmers are milking, feeding their stock, bedding down cattle, visiting the barnyards and in the farm buildings and until recently many had to do their tractor ploughing in the blackness of the night made darker by the drizzling rain and mists common to the climate.

It is not an easy thing to blackout farm buildings with all the chinks and cracks, but it must be done, and for tractor work at night every shielded lights that dimly illuminate a limited area in front of the tractor and allow no light visible to the enemy have to be used.

Just there are other handicaps to farming in Britain than working in darkness. The farmer there has got accustomed to his turnip field bombs and shrapnel. It means notice into a base for anti-aircraft batteries. A 4,000 pound bomb, unmarked fields to the edge of bomb craters—big holes 15 to 20 feet deep and up to 30 feet across—which are formed in the soil and cannot be filled in or framed around. One farm had more than 30 of these holes in it. Not only the farmer most is that the bombs scatter the infertile subsoil over the top soil that has taken many years to build up.

Precautions have to be taken against incendiary bombs when the grain is ripening or the straw stacked in the fields. Buckets of water, sand bags, and fire beaters must be kept close at hand. If the army would fix the boundaries the farmer and his family must take in quarters for additional numbers. Increased products—grown under handicap of labour and equipment—must be sold at fixed prices, and the Wartime Prices Board tries to feed his live stock and poultry on a coupon basis, and in many instances he finds that the feeds allotted under the system do not begin to meet the minimum requirements of his stock.

The British farmer also has to pay a heavy income tax, but, in addition, if his profits for the year are above a certain fixed level he must give up for the duration of the war exactly 100 per cent of that surplus profit under the Excess Profit tax. Yet he carries on and has increased not only the acreage but the average production per acre. As an example of Historic scenes were enacted last Saturday morning just before dawn on the beaches of Sicily when the Canadians, British and Americans formed beachheads on the coast of Sicily. It was the beginning of the invasion of Europe.

With the Canadians went Ross Munro, Canadian Press representative, who as at Dieppe, so on the coast of Sicily, performed a most brilliant piece of war writing, describing the scene as he saw it, moment after moment. He was there and could tell what he saw. So his account is most convincing because he seems to let the encounter tell itself when the Canadians first contacted the enemy. He is a good observer, a clear thinker and a good interpreter of the scene unfolding step by step before his very eyes.

The Canadian people appreciate this service rendered at personal risk. They knew that the men of Canada would not fail, for they had the spirit and had been well trained. And there was present one of the most capable journalists to record for the people of the Dominion and for the future what youthful Canada there did for the freedom of the world. The story that is told satisfies the heart and spirit of Canadians.

The picture he gives has all the marks of truth and observation — the passing moments as the vast Allied fleet bore down upon the Sicilian coastline, the little facts recorded because each little fact has its place in the mood and feeling of the time. In a style without effort he tells the story, everything is direct and concrete. Reading the innumerable passages which show this fine gift, one can gather the mood and inspiration of the men as the time whiled by. Here is one little piece—the description of a scene so quiet and yet so freighted with possibilities for the world:

"At 1 a.m. we went down the side of our ship in an assault landing craft and hit the swell that lifted us high in the air. We rocked and moved about among the ships which now were anchored a number of miles off Pachino Peninsula. Finally we located our motor launch and clambered aboard. Slowly the assault landing craft gathered around us for the run in." Everything is so quietly told.

Here is another:

"In the evening I climbed to a slit trench I had dug with an Italian shovel on the cliff east of the main beach. As the red sun went down I watched the country where the Canadians were fighting. To the north and west vehicles and guns were streaming to the north front, kicking up white billows of dust."

The whole account has to be read to understand how effective it is. For it is written in pure familiar English, and in words which are predominantly Anglo-Saxon, nearly all words of one syllable and few of any length and these latter words which are familiar to every reader. Such is the secret of his appeal.

Ross Munro had of course a fine scene to portray, to catch the soul of the soldiers of Canada and record it in words for the people at home.

Butter Supplies Back to Normal

If the present butter ration is to be maintained during the low-production period of next winter, it will be necessary to have a reserve of from 60,000,000 to 70,000,000 pounds in store by October 1, says the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Stocks of butter are now considerably larger than they were a year ago and, as a matter of fact, have returned to their normal position at this season of the year, whereas last year the winter reserve was not large enough and the butter allowance had to be reduced temporarily below the half-pound level. It must be remembered, too, that there are today greatly increased demands upon Canadian butter stocks. In addition to those of the civilian population, Canada has heavy obligations to the armed services, both at home and abroad. Then the Cross for prisoners-of-war parcels, war construction camps and ships calling at Canadian ports. Newfoundland and the British West Indies also depend upon the Canadians for supplies.

British Clothes Rations

Books for the 1943-44 clothes rationing year have been issued in the United Kingdom. They again include supplementary coupons for children under 16 years of age. The books will not be valid until September 1, according to regulations announced in London. Each book has 32 ordinary-size coupons in three different colors, four large coupons designed to be cut into quarters and four "token" coupons. The coupons will be valued according to the supply situation and the period covered by each group. The validity of the coupons will continue after the effective date of the book. A minimum of a month's notice will be given of intention to invalidate the coupons.

Isle Drained of Coin

Souvenir collectors have drained the island of Aruba in the Netherlands West Indies of its supply of coin, it is revealed in Willemstad. Visitors were especially attracted by the square nickel. Servicemen and workers from neighboring islands are hoarding and burying silver Rykdsaalders (2½-guilder pieces) and single guilders because they have a firm faith in the security of silver coin. Aruba has received no new coins since the invasion of the Netherlands by the enemy, and as the shortage grows, banks and merchants have difficulty in making change. A proposed plan is to issue paper money for use until orders for new coins placed in the United States are filled.

Dark Days for Blondes

(Australian Press Union)

Australia's artificials have had dark days ahead if they rely on hairdressers to retain their color. Color rinses, manicures, marcelling and eyebrow arching are now under a government ban.

But the government has been generous, realizing that the feminine morale must be maintained. Manicures went long ago because of the absence of varnishes and removers, but on the priority list are permanent waves, shampoos, and sets, tinting (to help the middle-aged), facials and pedicures.

Girls Run Vast Farm

Now that most of the men of Andreyevka, Russia, are at the front the burden of work has fallen on the shoulders of the women and youngsters, mainly girls. Antrop Pykin, chairman of the Andreyevko collective farm, covering 15,022 acres, was doubtful about how much to plant, but the girls said: "Sow as much as you think proper, we are twice as well and strong as before." The sown area was increased 250 acres. The girls spent weekends binding sheaves and carrying grain, while the boys plowed, mowed and threshed. The farm has delivered to the State: 225,800 pounds of wheat, 145,000 pounds of oats, 315 tons of potatoes, 2,056 gallons of milk, and 4,600 eggs, also soya beans, tobacco, hay and meat. And the village has only 52 families.

How in Britain everyone does the utmost for the nation is told in the fact that cabs in London and in many places elsewhere have been lost to the pedestrian because they are turned into victory gardens for the production of food under Ministry of Agriculture. Now the Footpaths Preservation Society is getting worried, "we have asked local councils to make a list of all plowed up paths to make sure that they will be returned to the public after the war."

True religion and virtue give a cheerful and happy turn to the mind; admit of all true pleasures and even procure for us the highest. — Addison.

WAR-TIME HONEYMOON

Some day in the peace to be,
Looking back through memory
To their children she may say:
"We had just a wedding day.
Thirty hours, and he was gone
To the war then raging on.

"Freedom then was far from sure,
Church and school seemed insecure.
All the world was red with strife.
Sacrifice was part of life,
So for honeymooning glad
Thirty hours were all we had."

In the peace all hearts desire
When they're all about the fire
And recall these troubled years
Dark with "sweat and blood and tears"
To their children they may say:
"We had just our wedding day!

"So that you might dance and sing,
Hear the church and school bells ring,
Have the starry flag above
And be free to come to love,
After thirty hours were spent,
Back to war your father went."

Former Premier Given Unanimous Nomination of Elgin Liberals

St. Thomas, Ont., July 13 (CP)—Mitchell F. Hepburn, Liberal Premier of Ontario from 1934 until he resigned the office on October 21 last, will seek re-election in Elgin as an Independent Liberal.

He was unanimously nominated to contest the August 4 provincial election by a meeting of Elgin Liberal Association here tonight, when he emphasized: "I am a Reformer. If I go to Toronto I will be to represent the people of Elgin. Any party cannot control. This does not mean however that I have not a high personal regard for Premier Harry Nixon."

He also declared: "One doesn't know where to place himself in the political arena these days . . . I shall support a party only as long as it

The Police Commissioners should provide proper summer clothing for the police force without delay. The new police force have not the appearance of civic officers, nor do they display that air of authority and dignity which becomes their position, beyond the flourish of an unvarnished baton. The same members are not dressed alike, and what they have do possess has lost its respectability. Policeman too, like other human beings, should look neat and clean, especially in this hot weather. With their present dress they look dirty, they are continually uncovering their heads in the streets and ladies passing at the time imagine they are taking off their hats to them, but they're not. They only want to wipe away the perspiration from their heated brows.

Plans for invasion of Sicily had results the subjugation of Ontario and any kind of attempt at the overthrow of the Ontario Government down the St. Lawrence River."

Make Money Servant of Man

Mr. Hepburn said: "I want to go back and have a hand in shaping the destiny of Ontario for the day when money is going to be made the servant, and not the master of man."

It was the 11th. anniversary of the day when Mr. Hepburn became to carry the Liberal standard in Elgin, as a Provincial candidate.

He was elected to the Federal House in 1926 and 1930, in which year he was elected Provincial Liberal leader. He was elected to the Legislature in 1934 and again in 1937, the last provincial election. After his resignation from the premiership he remained as provincial treasurer until last March, when he resigned from the cabinet and became a private member.

At the present critical period of the war, with the Canadians among the first forces making the first invasion of Axis Europe, "there can be little heart to interest in a provincial general election," said Mr. Hepburn. "Yet the democratic systems must be preserved."

Mr. Hepburn was nominated by Gordon Newell, who said the ex-premier was "the only man on the continent who ever stood up to Mackenzie King and successfully defied the banking institutions of Canada, to see Ireland rules in two."

Support of the London Liberal Federation was pledged by Rev. R. C. Mackay, who said the London constituency was 100 per cent behind Mr. Hepburn.

ROOF OF THE WORLD

President Roosevelt recently received some stamps and a personal photograph from the Dalai Lama, nine-year-old "Living Buddha," nominal, temporal and spiritual ruler of Tibet.

This strange country is so high up in the Himalaya and adjacent mountains that it is known as the roof of the world.

Many of the valleys in Tibet are higher above sea level than the highest peaks in the U.S.A.

The Buddhist monastery at Kanie, where the monks live at an altitude of 16,000 feet, is believed to be the highest spot in the world regularly inhabited by man.

Tibet has a territory about twice that of Texas. So little is known about the country that its population is estimated all the way from 600,000 to 6,000,000.

Tibetans are of a distinct Mongolian type with some Indian and Chinese mixture.

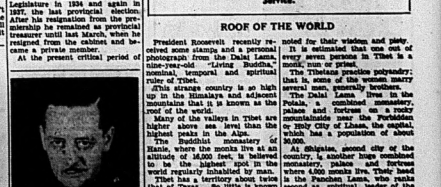
Their language employs three alphabets, all of which are of Indian origin.

Virtually all of the inhabitants adhere to a form of Buddhism known as Lamaism, which was introduced from India in the seventh century A.D.

The Chinese and other foreigners apply "lama" to all Tibetan priests and monks, but the Tibetans themselves restrict the term to monks noted for their wisdom and piety.

It is estimated that one out of every seven persons in Tibet is a monk, nun or priest.

The Tibetans practice polyandry: that is, some of the women marry several men, generally brothers.



The Dalai Lama lives in the Potala, a huge fortress-like monastery, palace and fortress on a rocky mountain in the capital city, Potalan or Holy City of Lhasa, the capital. Here he has a population of about 30,000.

At Shigatse, second city of the country, is another huge combined monastery, palace and fortress where 4,000 monks live. They head in the Panchen Lama, next to the Dalai Lama in spiritual leader of the Tibetan Buddhists in Tibet and in the present areas in Mongolia and China.

Between the Dalai Lama and the Panchen Lama die, children born at the moment of their deaths are sought and brought up as their reincarnations.

The present Dalai Lama, a Chinese boy, will not assume exclusive temporal and spiritual authority over Tibet until he is 18.

Tibet has been a battleground for all practical purposes since 1912, when the last Chinese troops were expelled, although China still maintains nominal sovereignty over the country.
